LET'S TALK ABOUT THE ELEPHANT IN THE ROOM

When selecting an auction house to partner with for the sale of your collection, it's easy to be drawn in by the glitzy corporate giant attempting to justify its high commissions with its bigness. You know the drill - guys in suits trying to sell you on cross-marketing your comic book collection to coin and dinosaur bone collectors who have never even purchased a comic book. The glitzy corporate giant also pushes their over-produced print catalog, which in reality doesn't impact bidding as today's buyers are all online—it's 2017 after all! Those glossy catalogs only exist to impress potential sellers like yourself, and make no mistake, the seller and buyer commission generated from your items is what pays for it! That does only one thing - it lowers your net return as a seller.

Sold on ComicLink

At ComicLink, we think differently. We pioneered the smartest, most cost-effective way to sell your comic book collection, and for over 20 years, our sellers have reached the most aggressive bidders in the hobby. Comprised of a mid-sized team of more than a dozen full-time professionals with over 200 years of combined experience in the hobby and over $200 Million in sales, our infrastructure is big enough—however, our objective for the seller is not to do things bigger but to do things better. Our longevity, expertise and reach combined with our low fee structure means the greatest net return for our sellers.

Come join our global consignor base and enjoy the best value proposition in the hobby!

Sold on ComicLink

Have you ever found yourself on the other end of a conversation with a disingenuous rep who pretends to be your best friend but treats your collection like it is more important to him than it is to you? You won't find any of that "used car salesman" nonsense here at ComicLink. Some consignment firms are operated by owners who have been primarily dealers, which can lead to conflicts of interest. Others are "ma & pa" operations being run out of a home. Neither provides you with the security or infrastructure you want in a consignment firm.

From the very inception of our firm over 20 years ago, ComicLink has had a "win-win" mindset regarding collection owners, working for them, not against them. Believe it or not, this was a revolutionary approach then, and we are certainly the best at it now!

We have over a dozen full-time professionals working towards one goal – yours!

Give us a call and you'll see what we mean.

ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS

It's another superb, eclectic year for our covers! The legendary Jim Steranko provided our great Batman piece and we're very pleased to add him to our roster. Likewise, Locke & Key's Gabriel Rodriguez outdid himself on our ROM cover. Walter Simonson (with colorist Len O'Grady) provided our second Hall of Fame cover featuring his Star Slammers. The Hero Initiative cover features Deadpool (with Cable and Domino) by creator Rob Liefeld (with colorist Ivan Nunes), and the Big, Big edition features Billy Tucci's take on The Tick, inspired by Normal Rockwell no less, and colored by Brian Miller of Hi-Fi.

Special thanks to Gemstone's own Mark Huesman, J.C. Vaughn, Amanda Sheriff, Mike Wilbur, Carrie Wood and Braelynn Bowersox.

Special Thanks to the Overstreet Advisors who contributed to this edition, including Darren Adams, Grant Adey, Bill Alexander, David T. Alexander, Tyler Alexander, Lon Allen, Dave Anderson, David J. 21ST ANNIVERSARY

WE'LL FIND THE HIDDEN GEMS IN YOUR COLLECTION!

You know about the value of books like Incredible Hulk #181, Amazing Spider-Man #129 and Iron Man #55, but did you know books like Thor #168 and Doctor Strange #172 have sold for over $5,000 at auction? "Keys" are just the tip of the iceberg when it comes to valuable comics from the late 60s and 70s. Many common books in high-grade can sell for hundreds or even thousands of dollars more than reflected in this guide. Let us identify the hidden nuggets in your collection, advance your grading fees and maximize your return when selling! Check out these recent sales from our auctions to see what we mean:

This is my second time dealing with you. The first was after my husband passed away and I found his childhood comics. I was very pleased with your company and the level of service and friendliness I received, so I thought of you again when I found a few more comics that I missed selling the first time. Thank you for making this a very easy way to deal with something that is unfamiliar to me.

- Laurie C., East Aurora, NY

Doing business with Lone Star Comics was a very satisfying experience. Lone Star Comics will treat you fairly and in a professional manner. I highly recommend them to do business with. I was very impressed. I purchased these comic books (my "treasures") over 68 years ago as a young boy. Unknown to me, all my comic books were saved and carefully stored by my mother. At age 97, my mother left her home due to illness and I rediscovered my comics.

Dozens of dealers advertise here. Why choose us?

- Free listings on eBay and Amazon! Your consignments are listed simultaneously on mycomicshop.com, eBay, and Amazon at no extra charge, giving your items unparalleled exposure in the market. We are the only major consignment service that offers this.
- We provide the largest comic-buying customer base available. More buyers means your items sell more quickly and fetch higher prices. Mycomicshop.com has more visitors and buyers than any other comic retailer or comic-focused auction service.
- We make selling "raw" comics as easy as selling certified slabbed comics. Thousands of consignors have used us because we make it easy to sell your comics, regardless of whether they are slabbed or raw. Our customers trust that they will receive well-graded books from us, which means that you'll get higher prices than if you listed comics you graded yourself.

We are the fastest-growing consignment service. Why? Low commissions, strong prices, hassle-free sales, and an industry-leading sales platform. Call 888-222-4037 or visit www.mycomicshop.com/consign to learn more. Cash advances available for high-end auction submissions.

CCS

The World's Leading COMIC BOOK PRESSING SERVICE

Over 10 years, CCS's professionals have developed an unparalleled pressing process that not only maximizes the potential of each comic book, but maintains its originality. Matt Nelson, president, has pressed more than 100,000 comic books of all types throughout his career—including the most valuable and sought-after issues.

Trust CCS for:

- Expert screening services
- Easy-to-use online submission form
- Fast turnaround and shipment savings costs for submissions transferred to CGC
- Quick Press (for lower-value comics)

For information on our pressing services and to submit, visit CCSpaper.com today.

About CCS

In November 2012, the Certified Collectibles Group (CCG) acquired Classics Incorporated, the world's leading comic book pressing service. Under its new name, CCS joins fellow CCG member Certified Guaranty Company (CGC) in its long-standing commitment to enhancing the comic book collecting experience for collectors across the world.

How to Submit

To submit your books for expert pressing by CCS, all you need is an Associate Membership in the CGC Collectors Society. You'll enjoy direct submission privileges to CCS and CGC—the world's leading comic book grading and encapsulation service—along with many other benefits. Join the Collectors Society today at collectors-society.com/join

CONSIGNMENT SERVICE!™

- Pedigree Comics will transport your ungraded comics and/or magazines directly to CGC headquarters for submission. After a consultation regarding what you plan on sending us, all you'll have to do is carefully pack and ship the books to our offices... and your work is done!!
- Pedigree makes frequent trips to CGC's offices in Sarasota, Florida (usually once every 4 weeks). Your books will be safely and securely delivered for grading. Pedigree Comics, Inc. incurs all the risks involving the transport and delivery of your comics and magazines to and from CGC and is fully covered for any potential loss or damage to your books.
- Pedigree will submit your books in person under the Pedigree Comics, Inc. account in the appropriate grading service (tier) and fill out all necessary submission forms. You do not lay out any of the grading costs in advance. We will deduct the grading costs (at our 20% discounted rate) from the sale of your CGC graded books on our website. There are no hidden fees or costs!!
- Pedigree will pick up your graded books from CGC and safely transport them to our offices. This will save you from the potential hazards and expenses of having CGC ship the books back to you directly!
- Pedigree will inventory, scan and upload your CGC graded books onto the PedigreeComics.com website where they will be listed in the New Arrivals Section or an upcoming Grand Auction. The books will be listed under your personal account and you will receive email notification of every bid and purchase made.
- Pedigree does all the work while you can relax and watch your CGC graded books sell on our website. All of this for only 10% commission! You receive exactly 90% of the sale(s) price(s) of your book(s) after the deduction of the grading costs.

“After inheriting my grandfather’s collection, I knew I’d only have one chance to make the right choice in selling it. I looked at all my options and ComicConnect was clearly the only way to go. The amazing prices they got for the comics for my family was a dream come true. ”

- Barbara R.

“They treated me like family. Their incredible efforts in promoting my collection along with the fact that they don’t charge a buyer’s premium put a lot more money in my pocket. I met with other auction houses before making my decision and I am so glad I went with ComicConnect. ”

DO YOU LOVE ORIGINAL COMIC ART? I DO!

Hello, my name is Nick Katradis. If you love comic art as much as I do, and you are considering selling any of your comic art, please contact me. I am a lifelong collector of comics and I am one of the most serious collectors of comic art, specifically from the Bronze Age."

I want to purchase your comic art from DC, Marvel and Charlton. I collect mostly Bronze Age art from 1968 to 1979. But I will purchase Silver Age and Golden Age art too. I also collect Bronze Age Romance art, from DC, Marvel, and Charlton, from 1964 to 1977.

I collect comic art by Sal Buscema, Jim Aparo, Gil Kane, Gene Colan, Nick Cardy, John Romita, Jack Kirby, John Buscema, Steve, Ditko, Irv Novick, Rich Buckler, Curt Swan, Herb Trimpe, Dick Giordano, Dick Dillin, Don Heck, George Tuska, Mike Sekowsky, Jim Mooney, Ross Andru, Marie Severin, etc.

If you are interested in selling your comic art to a fellow collector, or if you would like to purchase any of my comic art on my website, please contact me and we can discuss a possible sale or trade.

About Us

Condition Potential Realization Service (CPRS) was started by longtime professional comic book retailer, enthusiast, and archivist Phil Schlaefter. Phil is well known in the comic book and original art hobby with over 35 years under his belt. He attends an average of 20 conventions a year and established the well known stores The Comic Collector Shop and Heroes in California.

Our offices are located in Sunnyvale, California. We welcome any questions you may have in person, on the phone, or online. Aside from this base of operations, Phil will also be attending large and small conventions all across the country where you can submit books directly. CPRS is a division of Champion Comics. Always buying collections large and small!!

HERITAGE[®]

COMICS & COMIC ART AUCTIONS

HERITAGE AUCTIONS: We're always buying, too!

While we're best known for auctioning items on consignment (see our other ads in this book), we realize that sometimes collectors or heirs simply prefer to sell outright.

If that applies to you, you should know that we have purchased individual collections for as much as $23 Million, with immediate payment in full. We can travel anywhere in the country on short notice to view and make offers on collections.

In addition to buying Vintage Comics and Original Comic Art, we also purchase Animation Art, Vintage Movie Posters, Coins and Currency, Fine Art, Rare Books, and many other types of art and collectibles (see the full list at HA.com).

Ask about our special commission rates for consignments of CGC-graded books. If preferred, we can also broker fixed-price private sales of significant Comics and Comic Art items.

For more information, please contact us today at 877-HERITAGE (437-4824)

Selling your treasured collection is like turning your life

Upside Down!

Dear Collector,

- Selling a lifetime of accumulated treasures is scary. In the end, you need to receive more than a check.
- With me, your collection can land in the right place and you can still get top dollar.
- Your collection may also become a part of our developing pop culture museum.
- One thing I can assure you; your collection WILL NOT be flipped and scattered.

PASSION for COLLECTING...

When it comes to passion for collecting, dedication to the hobby, and amassing high-grade, award winning runs... few measure up to Pedigree Comics' CEO and President, Doug Schmell, who sold his personal collection of Silver Age Marvels in 2012 for over 3.94 Million Dollars (a record price for a comic book collection).

So, who is best qualified to help you build your collection and find you the books and upgrades you need?

Over the past 20 plus years, I have amassed over fifteen thousand Marvel comic books, most of which are in very high grade condition. When CGC was in the process of forming in March, 1999, I was one of a handful of collectors asked to attend their start-up meeting and provide input to the creation of this third party grading service. When the CGC commenced operations later that year and began encapsulating and grading comic books for the public, I began submitting my runs of Marvel titles. Now, known as "Captain Tripps" on the CGC Registry and chat boards, I have come to be recognized as one of the leading collectors of Marvel Silver and Bronze Age comics, with many of my books being the highest graded copies in existence. In fact, I received the coveted Achievement in Comics Collecting 2006, awarded by the CGC Comics Registry, in honor of the outstanding runs of Marvel comics I had registered since November, 2003, including the highest graded set of virtually every Marvel Silver Age and Bronze Age title.

Although I sold the majority of my Bronze Age titles when I moved to Florida in 2004, I kept and continued to add to my Silver Age sets, looking for upgrades on any individual issue whenever possible. The formation of this collection, which has been painstakingly pared down to around 700 books, took an incredible amount of effort, time, expense, and patience. The stories I could tell of meeting at diners, post offices in Northern New Jersey, law offices, street corners in New York City, dealers' tables, and comic stores around the country in order to obtain that missing issue or coveted upgrade, would blow your mind. My decision to sell the collection was based on my feeling that I had reached a sort of collector's Nirvana, that I had finally obtained every sought after pedigreed issue or top of the CGC census book I could possibly find. The long journey has taken me to this point in time and I couldn't be any happier.

✦ Why do ALL the other dealers in this book sell to me ?

BECAUSE over the past ten years or so I have been buying comics from dealers throughout the country. In fact, over the years I have bought comics from just about every dealer who advertises in this book. I spend millions of dollars a year buying. If professional dealers sell me comics why can't you ? A dealer is extremely knowledgeable, has shown his comics to all kinds of buyers from retail customers to every other dealer in the country at shows. They choose to sell to me because of honesty, financial reliability, and of course the prices I pay.

Our goal is to continue pushing the envelope with new and innovative products and services, while providing quick turnarounds and the best customer service experience in the hobby.

- Free membership allows you to submit directly to CBCS
- Optional paid memberships that offer huge savings on submission fees
- FREE and immediate Grader's Notes on every book!
- No minimum quantity for Grade Screening
- Industry leading Crystal-Clear Archival PETG holders
- Optional "RawGrade" service for grading without encapsulation
- RawGrade can be used for comic books, comic magazines, and TREASURIES!

E IS CLEAR!

CBCS offers the most options when it comes to collecting signatures.

Our Authentic Signature Program (ASP) guarantees the authenticity of signatures and sketches by making sure they have been personally witnessed. ASP comics can be easily identified by the yellow CBCS label.

The Verified Signature Program (VSP) is for signed books not witnessed by a CBCS facilitator. All VSP signatures are authenticated by CSA Comics, LLC, the foremost experts in verifying signatures for the comic book industry. Once the signatures pass authentication, the book is sealed in the CBCS holder with our red VSP label.

Original Art sketch covers no longer have to be 9.8 to be worth collecting. Our new Original Art Program (OAP) is designed to focus the attention on artwork by removing the grade from the label. This service can also be used for artwork on paper or backing boards up to 10.25" x 7.25".

COMICS & COMIC ART AUCTIONS

QUESTIONS TO ASK YOUR PROSPECTIVE AUCTIONEER

- Do you make all of your previous price results available online so I can judge your performance, or do you cite only your most impressive results?
- Do you cross-market my items to bidders from other categories to drive my consignment prices higher?
- Do you have a world-class website that makes it easy for people to track and bid on my lots?
- Do you mail thousands of exquisite, printed catalogs to the top collectors throughout the world?
- Do you offer in-person viewing open to the public, so my premium quality books won't sell for generic prices?
- Do you offer live public auctions for your top items, with both proxy and real-time internet and telephone bidding?

At Heritage Auctions, the answer to all of the above questions is YES.

And there's more at Heritage that no one else in the comic hobby can come close to matching:

- An award-winning website that attracts an average of 44,000 daily visits.
- 1 Million+ bidder-members in 40 cross-marketed specialties.
- Over $50 Million in equity and owners' capital
- Every consignor since our first auction in 1976 has been paid in full and right on schedule

All of the above is why we have successfully auctioned more than 230,000 consignments, 94% of which have come from repeat consignors. If preferred, we can also broker fixed-price private sales of significant Comics and Comic Art items.

We invite your call or email us right now to discuss your comic treasures and how Heritage can serve you.

ONE OF THE COOL THINGS ABOUT COMIC BOOKS IS THAT THERE ARE LOTS OF NEW ONES TO DISCOVER...

AND THERE ARE LITERALLY HUNDREDS OF THOUSANDS OF DIFFERENT BACK ISSUES, TOO!

BACK ISSUE COMICS RANGE FROM LESS THAN COVER PRICE TO $3,207,852.

A COMIC BOOK FOR $3.2 MILLION? HARD TO BELIEVE, HUH?

THE FIRST COMIC TO HIT $1 MILLION WAS ACTION COMICS #1, THE FIRST APPEARANCE OF SUPERMAN.

THE SECOND, JUST A FEW DAYS LATER, WAS DETECTIVE COMICS #27, THE FIRST APPEARANCE OF BATMAN.

ANOTHER ACTION #1 SOLD FOR $1.5 MILLION JUST A SHORT WHILE AFTER THAT.

MANY OTHERS HAVE SOLD FOR RECORD PRICES IN THE LAST FEW YEARS, EVEN WITH THE TOUGH ECONOMY NATIONALLY.

THE GRADE AND SCARCITY OF THE ISSUES HAVE A LOT TO DO WITH THAT. WE'LL GET INTO THAT IN JUST A BIT...

- Many of the comic books are listed in groups, such as 11-20, 21-30, 31-50 and so on.
- The prices listed along with such groupings represent the value of each issue in that group, not the group as a whole.
- It's difficult to overstate how much accurate grading plays into getting a good price for your sales or purchases.

OVERSTREET MARKET REPORT 2017

2016 SAW RECORD PRICES FOR GOLD AND SILVER AGE BOOKS IN ALL GRADES

by Robert M. Overstreet

A few noteworthy sales: Detective Comics #33, CGC 1.5 for $15,535, Marvel Comics #1 in CGC 3.0 for $77,675. Superman #1 in CGC 0.5 for $57,360, and Whiz Comics #2 (#1) in CGC 0.5 for $15,535.

Again, last year, key books in the lower grades continued to be in high demand as evidenced by the few examples shown above. As the top keys continue to skyrocket, collectors are adjusting their sights to lower grading tiers.

Golden Age: Robert Krause (Primo Comics) agreed, “We believe that it is only a matter of time before the confluence of an ever increasing collector base demanding vintage books and the scarcity of high grade books manifests itself down to the next desirable tier, mid to lower grade books. This will cause an inevitable increase in prices for these mid to lower grade respective books.”

As Eric Groves pointed out, “The market is strong with an influx of new, mostly younger, collectors. Some of the collectors are not accumulating runs of specific titles but seek out only key issues.”

Josh Nathanson of Comic Link agreed, “The extreme rarity of the early issues of Action Comics and Detective Comics, coupled with the popularity of the characters, has driven up prices on all of the late 1930s issues to a high degree. These books are in high demand in any grade—even coverless.”

Since the advent of professional certification of comic books in early 2000, hundreds of thousands of issues have been encapsulated. This has made cover themes more important than ever, since books are sealed and covers are all that can be viewed.

As Brock Dickinson stated, “With the advent of 3rd party grading (from CGC, CBCS and others) and encapsulation, the content of a comic book becomes inaccessible, leaving the cover image as the distinguishing feature. This has increased the importance of the cover from a collecting perspective.” Josh Nathanson agreed, “The Golden Age market is also extremely cover driven right now and even at the lower end of the pricing spectrum a book with a stand-out cover can blow the doors off Guide prices when properly promoted.

Ted VanLiew (Superworld), “Many collectors are looking for either classic covers, covers by certain noteworthy artists, or just lesser known great covers.

West Stephan (CBCS) agreed, “We have also noticed a large increase in ‘Classic Covers’ submissions. Books like Phantom Lady #17, Suspense Comics #3, Marvel Mystery #40, #44 & #46 & other classic covers are always in huge demand, and thus, are always the first books to be submitted when a collection containing them is bought. World War II covers are also very coveted & show no signs of slowing down.”

“I, Overstreet may have to start breaking out more WWII covers as they always sell for more than the issues surrounding them that do not have a war cover. Most of the time, the market is more cover driven than anything else at this point. It's the cover that sells the comic, unfortunately the interior stories seem to be of secondary importance."

With cover collecting becoming more widespread, even though everyone wants the highest grade that they can afford, grade has become less important just as long as the cover image has good eye-appeal with defects that do not detract too much.

Ben Labonog reported, "The rarity of Golden Age comics should never be underestimated. The market continues to be healthy with the strongest demand being for 1st appearances and classic, unique covers. There are not many unrestored copies of pre-1945 books left, so it is quite a treat to be able to find them in their original condition."

Heritage Auctions reported sales of nearly $43 million in total revenue for comics, comic art and animation art for the year 2016, the highest ever, breaking the previous record high of $37.8 million spent in 2012.

They feel that high sales were based in part on movie releases with comic-themed plots. Among the items in highest demand during 2016 was an Action Comics #1 in FN- 5.5 that brought a record price of $956,000. This was the highest, un-restored copy ever auctioned by Heritage. They also reported a CGC 9.4 copy of Amazing Fantasy #15 (Spider-Man's very first app.) sold for $454,100 and a Superman #1 in VG+ 4.5 realized $358,500. A Batman #1 in CGC FN- 5.5 brought $239,000.

ComicLink reports, "To date, over 300,000 vintage comic books have transacted between ComicLink buyers and sellers. 2016 was the biggest year we've ever seen! Aggressive buyers scooped up many thousands of certified comic books and original artwork to enhance their collections. Strength was exhibited across virtually every collecting genre, from Golden Age rarities of the 1930s and early 1950s to Silver and Bronze Age keys and high-grades of the late 1950s through the '70s and right through Copper and Modern Age era. We see this growth trend continuing for years to come."

Vincent Zurzolo, Frank Cwiklik & Rob Reynolds (Comic Connect) reported, "The past year has been very strong. Big keys are selling very well, private sales and auctions are both doing incredibly well. Convention sales have picked up."

Conventions: Charles & Jeff Cerrito reported: "I find the Pop Culture conventions are gathering more and more steam with every year. Cosplayers make up a lot of the attendee base which makes for crowded conventions. About 15 years ago, the national day conventions usually drew about 20,000-30,000 and that was considered to be a huge massive crowd. Today these same conventions are drawing way over 100,000. For example, we know San Diego draws a max crowd of 126,000. This year's New York Comic Con drew a record crowd of 180,000 and it's still growing." Frank Cwiklik (Metropolis Comics) agreed, "The New York ComicCon is now the biggest comic convention in the world, both in terms of attendance and floor space. Both Chicago cons seemed to enjoy about the same attendance."

Silver Age: The Silver Age is now over 60 years old and the vast majority of books bought and sold are from this period. Key books continue to set records, even in the lower grades.

Dave Alexander, DDS reported, “Silver Age books are common in grades below fine, but sell readily nonetheless due to huge demand. These books in true Near Mint to Mint condition are very rare and command prices well over Guide values.”

Paul Clairmont (PNJ Comics) agreed, “We prefer to deal with high grade books and it is particularly difficult finding Silver Age books in true high grade of Very Fine+ (8.5) or better.”

Eric Groves pointed out, “Early Silver Age comics, for the most part, deserve the value attributed to them. They constitute a significant milestone in the evolution of comics. The publishers and artists who produced these books are rightly revered. Issues such as Showcase #4, Amazing Fantasy #15, Hulk #1, Amazing Spider-Man #1 and Fantastic Four #1 are established icons now. We have sold these books many times over. They move out in all grades.”

Frank Simmons (Coast to Coast Comics) reported, “Just about every major Silver Age key across the board experienced strong 20% price increases with little or no resistance from customers in the market place. In particular, low grade copies in the 1.0, 1.5, 1.8 & 2.0 range had a tremendous surge in pricing, the demand which by far exceeded the available supply for more affordable copies was in fact the culprit.

Josh Nathanson reported, “Demand for Silver Age comics is as strong as it has ever been. As usual, major Marvel and DC keys led the way in 2016 with exceptional results for several premiere and 1st app. issues achieved. The traditional keys sold for record amounts including X-Men #1 CGC 9.6 for $350,000, Incredible Hulk #1 CGC 9.0 for $275,000 and Tales to Astonish #27 CGC 9.4 for $205,501.”

Steven Houston agreed, “As usual it’s all about the keys! Keys, keys and yet more keys. Regardless of movie connections, Marvel’s Silver Age product is still the most sought after, with low grade key issues selling for 2 to 5 times Guide prices.

CGC 8.5 sold for $132,000.

Bronze Age: Paul Clairmont reported, "It seems there is a resurgence of collectors looking for high grade examples of their favorite 1970s books. There is so much going on during this era when it comes to undervalued and overlooked keys." Josh Nathanson writes, "It was not many years ago that there were only a handful of valuable comics from 1970 and beyond that would sell for $1,000 or more. In recent years that number has increased exponentially thanks to the impact of Hollywood and the realization that books from this era, the oldest of which will be 50 years old in a few years, are not as plentiful in high grade as once thought."

Copper Age: Paul Clairmont wrote, "Certainly, the earlier hot selling books from 2012-2014 leveled off but gave new opportunity for other books to surge in price and once again reaffirm that Copper Age is a lucrative genre with plenty of staying power."

Modern Age: Paul Clairmont reported, "The juggernaut known as The Walking Dead has certainly cemented itself as the king of the Modern Age. Copies of issue #1 and #2 continue to soar in price. Not even breaks between the seasons of the TV show seem to slow the increase for long. Now that the show has one of the best modern villains to come along in a while with Negan, I'm seeing prices climb on all issues of the series." Matt Schffman reported, "Still this is a very fun era to find new keys, hidden appearances, resurrected characters, and the new found love for old classics. Condition is everything."

Original Comic Art: The upswing in demand for original comic art (both covers and interior pages) continued to set record prices throughout last year. More and more collectors are buying displayable original art to enhance their comic book collections. There was hundreds of documented sales last year. Here are but a few examples: The cover to All American Men of War #101 ('64) by Russ Heath sold for $25,995. A few

John Romita Sr. covers sold: Amazing Spider-Man #62 went for $179,250, #151 cover ('75) sold for $155,350, Amazing Spider-Man Special #6 ('69) brought $143,400, and The Defenders #10 cover ('73) sold for $77,675. The cover to Avengers #63 ('69) by Gene Colan & George Klein sold for $89,625. Daredevil #9 cover ('65) by Wally Wood went for $149,375.

A Steve Ditko splash page from Amazing Spider-Man #27 brought $139,000. A Flash Gordon Sunday (8/14/38) by Alex Raymond went for $95,600 and another Raymond Flash Gordon Sunday (4/21/35) sold for $131,450. A Frankenstein pg. 154 ('76) by Bernie Wrightson brought $95,600. A Frank Frazetta paperback cover At the Earth's Core ('74) went for $1,075,500. Also his painting The Norseman sold for $454,100. Harvey Comics Library #1 cover by Marvin Bradley & Frank Edgington sold for $46,605. A Graham Ingels 7 pg. story "A Biting Finish" from Haunt of Fear #5 sold for $28,688. A Neal Adams cover to Justice League of America #66 ('68) went for $41,825. A 6 pg. story "Casey At The Bat" by Jack Davis from Mad #6 brought $77,675. The cover to Silver Surfer #13 ('70) by John Buscema sold for $68,712. Dan Adkins cover to Strange Tales #164 ('68) went for $71,700. The Bernie Wrightson cover to Swamp Thing #1 ('72) sold for $191,200. The Jack Davis cover to Tales From the Crypt #40 ('54) brought $71,700. A Tarzan Sunday page by Hogarth dated 9/11/49 went for $26,290. Page 1 of Thunda #1 ('52) by Frazetta sold for $31,070. The cover to Weird Science #8 ('51) by Al Feldstein sold for $33,450. John Byrne's cover to Wolverine #17 ('89) brought $33,460 and the cover to X-Men #95 ('75) by Dave Cockrum brought $155,350.

Comic Conventions: As Frank Cwiklik (Metropolis Comics) reported, "Even more people crowded into convention halls this year than the year before, with the most notable being the upsurge at the London Supercon (so much so, that they've expanded to a 3-day show this year), and the rather startling fact that the New York ComicCon is now the biggest comic convention in the world both in terms of attendance and floor space. Charles & Jeff Cerrito (Hot Flips) reported, "More and more conventions are being created each month and it seems like there is always a comic book convention to go to every weekend. Whether it is a three or four day convention or just a small local one day show, either way, collectors and dealers are showing up in record numbers. About 15 years ago, you would have a crowd at a small local one day show that would draw 30-50 people, but now it is about 500, with some shows in the thousands. The national day conventions usually drew about 20,000-30,000 and that was considered to be a huge massive crowd. Today these same conventions are drawing way over 100,000. For example, we know San Diego draws a max crowd of 126,000. This year's New York Comic Con drew a record crowd of 180,000 and it's still growing."

Pedigree Collections 2016: Books from top Pedigree collections appeared sporadically in all the top auctions held last year. Mile High (Edgar Church), Larson, Pennsylvania, White Mountain, Gaines file copies, Northford, and others were represented selling to eager buyers.

In Summary: The comic book market is very healthy with hundreds of thousands of comic books sold off web sites, from mailing lists, at conventions, at the major auction houses, and at comic book stores. Prices realized were again mixed depending on rarity, character and grade.

The following market reports were submitted from some of our many advisors and are published here for your information. The opinions in these reports belong to each contributor and do not necessarily reflect the views of the publisher or the staff of The Overstreet Comic Book Price Guide or Gemstone Publishing.

They will provide important insights into the thinking of many key players in the marketplace.

MULTIPLE PRINTINGS OF SUPERMAN #1?

The answer is Yes. What it means is still up in the air.

With the record prices commanded over the past few years by Action Comics #1 and Superman #1, any news about those issues is precisely that: news. So, it made for compelling reading earlier this year when longtime Overstreet Advisor, comic book historian, and veteran dealer Robert Beerbohm posted a discussion topic of Facebook about the first issue of Superman's self-titled series.

"Superman #1 (1939) had three distinct print runs of 1) 500,000, 2) 250,000 and 3) 150,000, virtually selling out 900,000 in a bit over a month. The print runs were pretty much right on top of each other," Beerbohm wrote.

That said, he pointed out that no one seemed to have figured out how to distinguish between the printings of these critical key issues, or at the very least no one had communicated such a method to tell them apart to The Overstreet Comic Book Price Guide.

Now, he wrote, there is such a way to tell a first printing from the others.

Earlier that day, Beerbohm had posted of the late Fred Guardineer at Wondercon 1999. That in turn led to an exchange which saw Matthew DiMasi post a Superman #1 interior page advertisement for Action Comics #14.

DiMasi posted "... you can tell by this ad if the Superman #1 is a first print or second print. First says 'On Sale June 2' and second print says 'On Sale Now!'"

That's startling enough, but there's more.

Comic book scribe, Batman film producer, and historian Michael Uslan posted a very understandable follow-up: "...Incredible sleuthing! Now... is there any slight difference between the second printing and the third printing?"

Overstreet Advisor and longtime dealer Rick Whitelock pointed out that this topic had been discussed previously on the CGC chat boards but had perhaps remained largely unknown since it never got traction beyond that arena.

As it always has, the position of The Overstreet Comic Book Price Guide remains that the marketplace will ascribe any differences in demand, prices realized or esteem attached to any of the three printings of Superman #1.

However, we would like to openly request any additional information on these issues. As always, all enlightened opinions are eagerly welcomed, but we are particularly interested in any factual data, including prices realized, regarding this issue.

Additionally, any similar information about other issues would be welcome as well.

Hello,
My name is Darren Adams, owner of West Coast Sports Cards and PristineComics.com. Some of you may know me as the guy from Seattle who sold the THREE MILLION DOLLAR COMIC BOOK. (see left)

This sale was viewed by over one million people, marking it as the most watched comic sale in history.

This comic book was originally offered to other dealers prior to myself. Yet in the end, only one company stepped up to meet the demands of the seller... And that was PristineComics.com.

You don't need to have the world's most valuable comic book to sell to us.

We are also one of the largest Buyers of Magic The Gathering cards.

WE ARE ALSO INTERESTED IN:

Comic Books

Magazines

Original Comic Art

Autographs, Movie Props etc.

BEFORE SELLING ANYTHING, PLEASE CONSIDER THESE ATTRIBUTES THAT WE GENUINELY OFFER:

DISCRETION: 100% CONFIDENTIAL

We have non-disclosure forms available for those who prefer discretion. We have made other significant purchases that you with not read nor hear about. Quite often for any number of reasons, a seller will prefer discretion.

AN HONEST APPRAISAL:

We know what your comics are truly worth and so will you. Anyone can estimate a value of what a collection might sell for at auction. The fact remains that this is a guess with no guarantees, other than a guarantee only to themselves. They take 10-20+ % of your money regardless of what your comics sell for. YOU pay all shipping costs, have to accept returns in the events a bidder does not pay, take 100% of the risk of getting lower prices than originally estimated, and then have them wait for bidders to pay them, then wait for the auction house to deduct ALL of their fees and send you a check. Sound like fun? Just like in Vegas, the house always wins. Why shouldn't you? After all, it is your collection.

We provide you with a valuation of what your collection is truly worth in today's market and make an offer to purchase your entire collection. If you prefer to sell only certain books with in the collection, we can make offers on those as well. We can also provide you with other favorable suggestions after evaluating your collection.

CONVENIENCE:

We can discuss this by telephone, email and in person.

100% PAYMENT IN FULL NOW:

We pay you 100% in full when purchasing your collection. Period. For those clients who prefer to be paid over time for reasons of their own, we have contracts available.

Consignment centers make you wait until after your items are sold and they have been paid.

Auction houses make you wait until after the auction ends, and after the bidder's funds clear their bank, which oddly enough can take several weeks.

YOUR CHOICE OF PAYMENTS:

We can pay by bank wire, cashier's check or CASH. For those who prefer, we also trade.

DARREN ADAMS PRISTINE COMICS

Greetings comic connoisseurs from the Pristine Comics located in the Pacific Northwest near Seattle!

Golden Age keys such as Batman #1 continue selling for high altitude levels and set records. For Batman #1, success is not only due to it being Batman #1 but also due to the introduction of the Catwoman AND the Joker. The Bat is always hot, meanwhile 1st appearances and 1st cover appearances of key Bat-villains are white hot! Whether it's Joker, Penguin, Riddler, or any of the others, people want them!

Comic fandom as a whole continues its white hot ride. The Big Bang Theory, a show about comic geeks is TV's #1 comedy completing its 10th season, with a 2 year renewal in the works as I write this and there are 10 comic related shows on the small screen with half of them superhero related. Then there are the movies, OMG how many are there this year? Some are anticipated, others catch us by surprise, and some are MUCH anticipated!! The list goes on and on. It has truly never been a better time to be a comic fan.

Naturally, this exposure trickles down to back issue sales. Books such as Amazing Spider-Man #46 jumped in price when it was announced that the Shocker would be the secondary villain in the new Spidey movie.... what about the Vulture?

2016 featured yet another year of industry growth, comic finds, as well as an INCREDIBLE amount of Hollywood backing in the form of new movies, and an untold number of TV series in the works by all the major networks, along with Netflix and Amazon. The result is equivalent to what would normally amount to a decade worth of media coverage, all of which basically results in a massive ad campaign for the industry, funneled down into a single 12 month period.

That alone is phenomenal, but on the heels of well over 5 consecutive years with each year exceeding the other.... WOW!! Stoking the fires and desires of existing and former collectors alike, while also captivating new blood and money into the hobby, you begin to sense existing vintage supply dwindling when compared to demand. All resulting in record prices across the board. A decade's worth of price increases in a single year in many cases. Unlike a stock market bubble however, there IS substance in this equation. First, factor in comics finally getting their due in terms of their rightful place in Americana history and Pop Culture. Then, add the historical significance of character origin and 1st appearances as the point of emphasis in every movie produced. Finally, multiply the number of buyers against a somewhat finite number of vintage books that exist, there is only one way in which the price can go: UP! And the fact is, unlike a bubble, there is rationale to the prices at these levels. Therefore, in my humble opinion, I feel one day in the not to distant future, prices on key Golden Age books in particular will be viewed as ridiculously inexpensive, akin to stepping back in time 10, even 20 years ago and looking to now.

Coins, paintings, vases, even automobiles, these are just a few of the many collectables that have attained single item pricing in the tens of millions and above, and in many cases, even surpassing one hundred million dollar levels. Comics have become respected mainstream pop culture with crossover markets whose demographic reach is as broad as if not broader than the aforementioned categories. I can see no reason to think that these thresholds will also be surpassed with the sale of individual comic books and one day be viewed as expectation rather than surprise. We are just around the corner before the $5 MILLION mark is cracked and certainly the $10 million threshold will be breached at a significantly faster pace.

In terms of Silver Age, record prices occur on a regular basis, and soon enough it will not be uncommon for high calibre books of this era to join Amazing Fantasy #15 in surpassing the one million dollar mark. Bronze Age books continue to make shocking headlines as well with record prices being eclipsed on a regular basis. There are, however, exceptions that took place that truly defy logic, and one day perhaps I will understand why a copy of a Fantastic Four #52 CGC 9.8 sold for a stunning $90,000. I cannot believe I just wrote that, yet a subsequent copy sold for nearly the same amount just months later. I doubt anyone one saw that coming and if you were lucky enough to be holding one of the other 9.8s that exist at that time, it was a great day for you. That sale still baffles me. I believe the odds in Vegas were significantly higher against Fantastic Four #52 hitting 90k than the UFC's Ronda Rousey being defeated!

That aside, you cannot go wrong with the blue chips of the industry. 2016 was another great year in the industry and 2017 certainly appears to be even better. The much anticipated Wonder Woman movie is upon us and will have already hit the silver screen by the time you receive this copy of the Overstreet! Without doubt, Wonder Woman was the breakout character of 2016's Batman v Superman. Audiences could not get enough of Gal Gadot's performance as the Amazing Amazon! With the solo Wonder Woman movie coming out this year, All Star Comics #8, Sensation Comics #1, and Wonder Woman #1 are almost guaranteed to continue shattering previous records.

A few months after a copy of All Star Comics #8 CGC 9.0 sold for a record price of $411,001, a copy of Wonder Woman #1 CGC 9.0 (same grade) sold for nearly $300,000, thus making the All Star #8 CGC 9.0 appear like a serious bargain! With her upcoming movie appearances and the surge of female readership and participation, and the magnitude of female characters being created and given their own titles, it stands to reason that it is time for the original Superheroine that started it all to be the first female character in breaking the Million Dollar barrier and join her rightful place in history alongside Batman and Superman!!

As finding original vintage collections gets more difficult, the appreciation for them when you do find them becomes that much more satisfying. Treat people well and good things will happen to you. We feel blessed to be doing something we truly enjoy!! Buy what you enjoy, and invest wisely. In this hobby you get the joy of doing both.

From the Pacific Northwest, Pristine Comics wishes everyone the best for 2017, and remember, we are always looking for quality comics and original comic art and can buy it all! No collection or find is too large. Feel free to call us for free appraisals.

GRANT ADEY HALO CERTIFICATION PTY LTD. - AUSTRALIA

Conventions: The 2016 convention season kicked in very strong for Halo attending 5 of the major shows. Comic collecting is stronger than I have seen it in the last 12 years, with dealers showcasing their graded comics like never before in this country. All the grading companies, Halo, CGC, CBCS, were represented strongly. On site preliminary grading was working well for both dealers and collectors, with no one on their high horse. Dealers were allowing customers to get a free preliminary check before buying. Collectors were carrying their Overstreet Price Guide and their Grading Guide. I explain that these two books are field manuals, guide being the operative word. Grading is an art form, not everyone will come to the same conclusion with books 8.5 or less. As I note, certain defects are allowed if other defects are not present.

Supanova conventions continue to attract big crowds of 40,000 people per day, with Sydney and Brisbane being the big two. This year, Halo was invited to Armageddon convention in New Zealand. Those Kiwis have a world class show. I have sold comics worldwide at many conventions in different countries, and Armageddon is world class. Halo was treated to a very attractive offer to make the trip, and success for all was the outcome. The Kiwis are very industrious people, hard working and very quick to learn. I bumped into Harley Yee at Armageddon. I've known Harley for nearly 20 years, and he's always the gentleman. Harley had a very good show and we went out to dinner that Saturday night. Norm Bardell (Fats Comics) joined us chewing over different industry subjects. So for comic sales at these cons, it was all the usuals, Marvel keys, DC books '56 to '60 that have attracted collectors appetites. From what I saw, comics are moving ahead and cosplay is going to the back of the bus.

The Zick Collection: Some of the things a grading company encounters are calls from families who have inherited comic collections. People are wise to the fact these days that comic grades relate to value. A call from the Zick family saw me on a plane for a day's grading and what I saw was unbelievable. Never in my 14 years in the industry here in Oz have I seen anything like this collection. A genuine one owner collection of American comics from the Golden Age. There were 1176 books, all the juicy scarce books from publishers like Ajax, Avon, Hillman, Fox, EC, and pre-Code books galore. Details of the David Zick collection are on the Halo certification website. Since that plane ride in August, another spectacular collection has come to light. A wealthy man had the foresight to buy keys and Golden Age CGCs during those crazy days of "chuck 'em out eBay" in the early 2000s. Presently we are reslabbing his time lapsed CGCs. They are all old label, beautiful books.

New Stuff: Halo recently took the step into the unknown releasing the "flip" or "2up" slab. 2 books inside the one case. This new innovation has been driven by collectors who want to mostly slab long runs of books, late model or new. Collectors can now get two books done for the price of one. Each comic is in its own mylar slip. Two slips, labels on both sides, with a piece of interleaving paper between the two mylar slips to separate the two, so there is no confusion when looking at the book. Each case has a side A and a side B. For lesser grades, defects on the back cover will appear on the label, the same as if there was a torn page, or a page with writing. It's a hidden defects notation. It cuts costs in half, and allows more volume for collectors taking up less space, and also halves the shipping costs. For example, the Wolverine #1 to #4 mini series only needs two slabs not four, increasing your margin. Two variants, two autographed issues, linked keys, a 12-part mini series needing only six slabs not twelve, the even number combinations are almost endless. It's a bold move, and though in the early stages, it has been widely accepted by collectors.

Comic Shop Sales Reviews: Comic shops generally are taking more interest in back issues, since grading became readily available. Speaking with an avid collector, I was pleasantly surprised when told a small suburban shop had a couple of Overstreet grading guides on the shelf. I work closely with Norm's Fats Comics in Brisbane. Traditionally a back issues only store, it is now expanding into the Diamond weekly comics. Another smart move, Norm has mastered the vintage books department, with his shop holding quarter of a million in stock at any given time. AF #15, ASM #1's, FF #1's, Hulk #181, FF #48-50, and very strong in Silver and Bronze keys. From my own research, I find books from DC on the break between Golden/Silver Age increasing. Wonder Woman #98 kicking her heals up big time. Another interesting fact Golden Age horror and sci-fi getting a giddy up. Captain Flight #3, L.B. Cole cover is selling for 6 times Guide. Well well well.

International sales: Halo has seen interest in our foreign language labels moving ahead slowly. French and Italian collectors are working with us. The Arabic labels look really cool, but we've only done a few. Australian sales are strong, and meeting the demand has been a challenge. New Zealand is coming on gangbusters. I think we are very close to opening their own facility. USA, boy you guys are tough. It's a hard market, and we continue to probe into the market testing different avenues. Del Stewart, my company man in Tampa, is doing a really good job, and he's working for it, every inch. That's good, as it tells me your grading companies are doing a good job, and the market is tight. Where's the fun if the chicken falls over with its legs in the air. The US market has two heavy weights going toe to toe. It's only Round 3, and on points, there's nothing in it. I run a small grading company and I know a little something and spent 6 years as a professional sportsman. Both these companies are gonna go the 15 rounds. It truly is masterful stuff.

In closing: It's been a great year for Halo. We developed some new products, and opened new offices, both international and domestic. What I find exciting is developing what we have and exploring new possibilities. Thank you to my 2IC Tony Nasser and all the Halo staff and dealers. This is Slim signing off from the furthestmost outpost.

BILL ALEXANDER COLLECTOR

Hi everyone and greetings from central California. The comic book market seems to be getting stronger and stronger every day and record high end sales continue to occur with comics from all Ages.

I first off would like to mention that U.S. published comics imported into a foreign country are "U.S. Editions" and they always have been. It appears the hobby is realizing this more and more each day. Many out there wrongly believed that U.S. published comics imported into the U.K., Canada, and Australia were foreign editions even though it never stated anywhere on the books "foreign edition" or a foreign publisher's name. Even today, some comic book grading companies are still misidentifying and mislabeling U.S. published comic books as foreign editions. Change is usually always met with resistance and a well needed change can only help the hobby, not hurt it in any way.. Comic books that are misidentified for what they truly are directly effects their true value in the hobby. These are Type 1a U.S. published first print Edition Marvel U.K. pence cover price variants published in the '60s, '70s and '80s as well as U.S. published first print edition type 1a DC Canadian cover price variants and type 1a Marvel Canadian cover price variants and also Archie type 1a Canadian cover price variants for Archie regular series comics and Archie Adventure Series comics. All are U.S. Editions and were printed with very small print runs. (Type 1a cover price variant) definition can be found in the Overstreet Annual Price Guide #40 on page #1012, where it states "Type 1a Variants: Cover Price Variants intended for foreign distribution with limited regional distribution, published simultaneously with standard or "regular" editions."

Let me move on here and mention a key book from the late Bronze Age which is Batman #357 (1st appearance of Jason Todd). The book sold at an online auction house for an amazing $1,300 in CGC 9.8 grade and the book was a Direct Market Edition copy. I wonder what the scarce Type 1a 75 cent Canadian cover price variant of that book would go for in a certified 9.8 grade? Batman #357-402 were at the lowest print runs in the history of the title, 75,303-97,941 per month according to Overstreet advisor Doug Sulipa. Speaking of Batman, I feel many think that Batman #358 4/83 is the 1st full appearance of Batman villain Killer Croc, but it truly is not. Killer Croc's TRUE 1st full appearance is Detective Comics #524 3/83 where Killer Croc's face is seen for the first time ever in 3 panels and he appears on 7 story pages in 23 story panels. With Detective Comics #524 being his first full appearance in comics, do not expect the book to remain at a very low price in the Guide. Detective Comics #524 pre-dates Batman #358 and was released about 2 weeks earlier than Batman #358. Also other Batman books from that era that are really starting to soar in prices realized such as Batman #359( first Killer Croc cover with face shown), Batman #368, Batman #386(1st appearance of the Black Mask). A Modern Age Batman book that is on fire right now I have noticed is Batman #635 (first appearance of Jason Todd as the Red Hood). Certified 9.8 graded copies are selling in the $200- $300 range on eBay for that book.

Archie Type1 15-cent cover price variants are up to 90 of 112 confirmed to exist. I believe they are all out there.

The U.S. published first print edition type 1a Marvel Australian cover price variants 1990-1994,1996 that appeared to be off the radar back then to most everyone are becoming more and more known to collectors and are growing in popularity. New Mutants #98 is the #1 mega key book of the Marvel Australian cover price variants. One might note that the type 1a Marvel Australian cover price variants 1990-1994 issues are (cover price/month variants) and that the 1996 ones are not cover price/month variants. They are merely cover price variants. I hope 2016 was a good year for everyone and may 2017 be even a better one.

DAVID T. ALEXANDER, TYLER ALEXANDER AND EDDIE WENDT DTACOLLECTIBLES.COM CULTURE AND THRILLS, INC.

Another amazing comic book year is the best way to describe the activity in 2016. Collecting awareness is at an all-time high among members of the general public. In the past, collectors were often considered to be a little strange or somewhat eccentric. That may still be true but the media exposure to comic books and the entertainment and fun they provide has brought this hobby to the attention of non-collectors worldwide. All the comic character films and TV programs have put the hobby in the face of mainstream society and it has been well received and has come to be respected. The comic book movies are mostly excellent entertainment and it is easy to see how non-collectors are becoming interested in the hobby. Isn't it interesting to see how second level characters like Iron Man and Guardians of the Galaxy are now favorites of people who were barely aware of the existence of comic books a few years ago?

Conventions: Do you remember the early 2000s when the internet was a new phenomenon and was taking control of the comic book hobby and everything else? The convention scene was slowly strangled because collectors could sit at home and buy comics off the web. This was new and convenient and you didn't even have to get dressed to add books to your collection. Convention activity declined for about a decade. Many local and regional shows died. The thing that the internet cannot provide is in-person human interaction and evidently collectors wanted more of it as witnessed by the huge increase in conventions in the last couple of years. Lots of local and regional shows have made a comeback but most of the national publicity is generated by the large multi-media events. Most of these events focus on movie and TV stars and have pushed comics to the background. They might not be the most cost-effective place to buy or sell old comic books, but they do increase awareness of the hobby.

In the past I had attended up to 40 comic shows a year but the internet put an end to that schedule for over a decade. This year I decided to hit a lot more shows around the country and took a 10,000 mile cross country drive starting in Florida and hitting New York and New England before traveling to Chicago to get on Route 66. I went the 2,000 mile distance to Los Angeles and got there in time to make it south to the San Diego Comic Con. I had a dealers table at the first San Diego event in 1970 and attended all of them until 5 years ago when I was firmly based and overly busy in Florida. On this lengthy road trip I was able to check in at many shows around the US and bought tons of books. My car is small so I had to ship boxes almost daily. The Post Office loved me.

This trip had to end as I was setting up at the Tampa Bay Comic Con in early August. Let me take this opportunity to say this. If you have not attended events in Florida you need to consider these: The Tampa Bay Comic Con is considered a regional event but it draws around 60,000 people. There are loads of comics bought and sold at this event. If you come to this one, bring your comics, I would love to take a look at them. It is held at the Tampa Convention Center which is located at the intersection of Tampa Bay and the Hillsborough River and is a very scenic area. Bring along your family, they will have fun.

The other two "can't miss" events in Florida are the Daytona Comic Con and the Deland Toy and Comic show. The Deland event is always early in January and has many buyers and lots of material available. If you are coming from the north in the winter bring some books and set up at this show. The Daytona event takes place twice a year and it is one of the best in Florida for Golden and Silver Age comics. I have nothing to do with any of these shows but just want to share some hidden gems.

New Arrivals: As usual, people are contacting us constantly with material for sale. I cannot remember all the collections that we received in the past year, but there were many as evidenced by our three full 40 foot shipping containers outside the warehouse. I do know there was lots of Golden and Silver Age books, both graded and raw. We did receive a couple of original owner collections that were gobbled up quickly once they were offered for sale.

Comic Sales: What were our top selling books? Marvel and DC Silver Age books were at the top of the list. DC and Timely Golden Age titles were in high demand. I am sure this is not news to anyone. Pre-Code horror and all Romance titles were very popular.

CGC & CBCS graded books sell quickly. Western comics had an uptick. Fawcett superhero comics had increased demand due to rumors of an upcoming film. High grade Bronze Age books sell well. Oddball comics of all types are quick sellers.

LON ALLEN AND BARRY SANDOVAL HERITAGE AUCTIONS

As something different for this year's Market Report, we'd like to break down what happened through 2016 from our perspective, i.e. what we sold at auction. This should show what some of the big highlights were throughout the year, and how hot the market has been in general for quality material.

Starting with our Feb. 18-20, 2016 Auction: $5.7 Million total sold of comics and comic art. A CGC 9.4 copy of Amazing Fantasy #15, the 1962 first appearance of Spider-Man, sold for $454,100, a record price at public auction for the comic. This copy was not known to the collecting hobby before this auction, as the owner kept it almost perfectly preserved in a safe deposit box for 35 years. Another Spider-Man comic from this collection drew serious attention, selling for $110,537.

A copy of Detective Comics #27 shocked the auction room floor when it hammered for $167,300, despite its 4.5 CBCS grade and extensive restoration. A Near Mint 9.4 CGC copy of Avengers #1 sold for $98,587. Perhaps foreshadowing the success of his big screen debut in Captain America: Civil War, a 9.8 CGC copy of Fantastic Four #52, famous for the first appearance of the Black Panther, saw intense bidder interest as it sold for $83,650. Tales of Suspense #57, introducing fellow film star and Avenger Hawkeye, sold for $47,800.

The auction included classics of original comic book art, including John Romita Sr.'s original cover art for Amazing Spider-Man #62. The 1968 cover, depicting a battle between Spidey and Medusa of the Inhumans, resulted in a war between 26 different bidders that pushed the rarity to $179,250.

featuring four characters, sold for $54,970, and the original art from page 15 from Amazing Spider-Man #49 ended at $53,775.

A few more comic book highlights worth mentioning are: Superman #1 CGC GD 2.0 $83,650, Fantastic Four #49 CGC NM/MT 9.8 $44,215, Incredible Hulk #1 CGC VF- 7.5 $43,020, Tales of Suspense #39 CBCS NM- 9.2 $43,020, Fantastic Four #45 CGC NM/MT 9.8 $35,850 and Fantastic Four #50 CGC NM/MT 9.8 $35,850.

May 13-14, 2016 New York auction: $6.55 Million comics and comic art. No piece in the auction garnered more attention than Frank Frazetta's original art for The Norseman (1972), which soared amidst spirited bidding to bring a $454,100 final price realized, a record price at auction for the legendary artist.

Original X-Men art is always highly sought-after in Heritage comics events, but Gil Kane and Dave Cockrum's X-Men #95 original cover art proved especially popular as it brought home an impressive $155,350 final price. Jack Kirby and Joe Sinnott's Fantastic Four #52 unused first Black Panther cover original art saw its historical significance – the first rendition of a black superhero for the cover of a major mainstream comic book (a different version was ultimately used) – drive its final price to an impressive $131,450, the highest price ever achieved for an unpublished piece of original comic art, while Bernie Wrightson's creepy and amazing Page 154 illustration original art from Frankenstein (1976) brought a notable $95,600 final price.

All different genres of comics have proven to be strong sellers in this market as proven by these results: Pep Comics #34 San Francisco Pedigree CGC NM- 9.2, with a classic Nazi/bondage/hypodermic needle/skull cover by Bob Fujitani, plus a "bullet-in-the-head" panel and an Archie story inside. This copy realized $57,360.

Superman #1 Incomplete CGC PR 0.5: From the front, this looks like a mid-grade copy, but the missing back cover makes this a Poor condition comic book. The final price realized, however, is a first for the hobby for a comic in this modest grade. It realized $57,360.

Richie Rich #1 File Copy (Harvey, 1960) CGC NM+ 9.6: One of the most desirable copies of any Harvey comic in existence. The final price on this comic is a record price by more than $20,000. It realized $48,995.

Captain Marvel Adventures nn (#1) CGC VG/FN 5.0: This is currently tied for the highest-grade of any unrestored copy of the book, illustrating the validity of Overstreet's assertion that the book is "rarely found in Fine or Mint condition," due to being printed on unstable paper stock. One of Overstreet's Top 100 Golden Age Comics, it realized $38,240.

August 4-6, 2016 Dallas auction: $7.4 Million comics and comic art. At The Earth's Core, a 1974 masterpiece by Frank Frazetta, sold for $1,075,500 – setting a world auction record for the hugely popular artist. Records across the board shattered as bidders stepped up to own rare original cover art and a copy of Action Comics #1 for $956,000. The sale set a house record for the most valuable copy of Action Comics ever sold by Heritage.

The auction's selection of original art sparked intense interest as 23 bids pushed Bernie Wrightson's original cover art for 1972's Swamp Thing #1 to $191,200. An iconic 1935 Sunday Flash Gordon comic strip original art by Alex Raymond brought $131,450. The artwork, featuring the first appearance of The Witch Queen of Mongo, was executed during the years fans consider the peak of Raymond's artistic achievement.

Making a rare auction appearance, the original comic strip art from Bill Watterson's beloved Calvin & Hobbes, dated Jan. 6, 1987, sold for $74,687, and Dan Adkins' 1968 cover art of Strange Tales #164 – depicting the mystical Doctor Strange – tied Heritage Auctions' Doctor Strange cover art record at $71,700.

Collectors seeking high-grade comics found plenty to choose, such as the Mile High Pedigree copy of Startling Comics #49, 9.6 CGC. The classic cover of a robot kidnapping a damsel in distress vaporized its $50,000 pre-auction estimate to hammer for $101,575. An 8.5 CBCS-graded copy of Amazing Fantasy #15 sold for $77,675. An exceptional copy of Batman #11, 9.4 CGC, ended at $65,725. A high-grade copy of Captain America Comics #1, 8.5 CBCS Restored realized $47,800.

An unbelievable cap to an amazing year was our nearly $10 Million auction held November 17-19 at our Beverly Hills office. Original Underground Comix art and key books from the Golden Age and Silver Age helped push the total value of this auction to nearly $10 million, the second-highest total ever for a comic auction. The #1 Comics auction record ($10,389,821) was set by Heritage in July 2012. The top lot was a rare unrestored copy of Superman #1 CGC VG+ 4.5 CGC which sold for $358,500.

One of the auction's highlights was a 9.6 CGC NM+ issue of Amazing Spider-Man #1 Curator Pedigree, which is one of the top Silver Age comics Heritage has sold in 15 years of auctions. The book sold for $262,900.

An FN- 5.5 CGC copy of Batman #1 was another exceptionally popular Golden Age lot that sold for $239,000. Steve Ditko's Amazing Spider-Man #27 Splash Page 1 Original Art hauled in $239,000. The page features Spider-Man and his greatest villain, The Green Goblin.

A Flash Comics #1 FN+ 6.5 CGC pulled in $107,550 and More Fun Comics #73 VF 8.0 CGC, another coveted issue, went for $104,562.50. In particularly high demand because it includes the origin and first appearance of Aquaman and Green Arrow, its NM- value jumped 43 percent from 2015 to 2016 – the largest jump of any book on Overstreet's Top 100 Golden Age Comics list.

Other top results include, but are not limited to: an Alex Raymond Flash Gordon Sunday Comic Strip Original Art dated 8-14-38 (King Features Syndicate) sold for $95,600; a Robert Crumb Le Monde Selon Crumb [The World According To Crumb] Promotion Poster Original Art soared to $77,675; a Bill Watterson Calvin and Hobbes Daily Comic Strip Original Art dated 4-21-86 achieved $77,675; and Marvel Comics #1 GD/VG 3.0 CGC rocketed to $77,675.

If there's something we at Heritage can help you with, you'll find our contact information in our many ads in this book. We look forward to helping more collectors maximize the value of their four-color treasures in the coming year.

DAVE ANDERSON, DDS COLLECTOR

My observations of the comic market over the last year:

1) Prices on any and every key comic or key first appearance of a hero or villain continue to rise almost exponentially. Since it is so costly to assemble runs of titles these days, collectors and investors are buying the key issues.

2) New collectors and investors are entering the marketplace at a healthy and steady pace, and this continues to deplete the availability of desirable comics.

3) Auctions dominate the sales of vintage comic books followed by sales on eBay, and there is much crossover in that a comic can be bought in a Heritage auction (as an example) and immediately be listed on eBay and vice versa. Many times a higher sale results so it appears that buyers don't look at every auction or site, but frequent their favorites.

4) Silver Age books are common in grades below Fine, but sell readily nonetheless due to huge demand. These books in true Near Mint to Mint condition are very rare and command prices well over Guide values.

5) Any comic with an unusual or high impact cover will sell immediately at over Guide.

6) Any comic that infrequently turns up will sell immediately at over Guide.

7) The comic book marketplace continues to be very healthy, and barring a major economic collapse, will continue to be so. Many prices that seem expensive now will look cheap in a short period of time.

LAUREN BECKER COMIC*POP COLLECTIBLES

A breaking point is coming. The comic market is, at this moment, at its peak. Movies and TV shows have been the reason why the comic market has been soaring to heights of popularity that could never have been imagined. Everyday people, those not associated with the hobby, now want to be "in". How soon until everyday people want "out"?

I am personally seeing a reduction in what people are buying. Yes, numbers are still impressive for print in THIS era...Black Panther had a print run of 300,000+, but how many are contributed to retailers speculating on back issue prices (speculators STILL do exist), much less retailer exclusives that were commissioned? How many Avengers and Doctor Strange and Iron Man and Captain America and Inhuman titles ACTUALLY need to be published. There is an over-saturation of titles by the big two at the moment. DC and Marvel trying to outdo the other with relaunched (Marvel NOW vs DC Rebirth) just adds to the ever increasing weight of unsold product that the retailer has to burden himself with, and in this day and age, one massive mis-order could spell doom for the average mom and pop store.

On the flip side, the over-saturation is also affecting secondary market prices. A comic that is under-ordered has a tendency to shoot up very quickly, especially one NOT associated to the big two. Case in point, the new Valiant title Savage (#1) has a 1:50 variant. The comic was so under-ordered that an eBay auction for this variant has hit a high of almost $1000. This for a book that was barely two weeks old at time of auction!

So what does this mean? I am seeing declines in the readership of comic purchasing. It's not a doom and gloom observation however. It just means that the wave of popularity is declining where people are not buying "everything". The collecting aspect however, the "I want this because it's valuable" side is still going strong. But how long until the money aspect becomes rocky? These insane, record high prices can't continue...can they?

Everyone laughed when top analysts said that the housing market bubble would burst. When it did, the economic fall out hurt everyone whether they were upside down in their mortgage or not. Property values plummeted, and it would take awhile before the market stabilized. Is the comic market ready for that to happen? Will it?

This past year's sales show no signs of a slow down YET. Prices realized on some graded items that we sold are as follows:

Fantastic Four #52 CGC 8.5...$2500

Ms. Marvel #1 (1977) CGC 9.2...$150

Preacher #1 CGC 9.8...$800

Walking Dead #1 CGC 9.8...$2500

My Greatest Adventures #80 CGC 3.0...$300

Strange Adventures #205 CGC 8.5...$775

Omega Men #3 CGC 9.8...$180

Tomb of Dracula #1 CGC 9.0...$245

Incredible Hulk #181 CGC 8.5...$2200

Prices realized on raw (non-graded) items:

X-Men #1 (gd/vg)...$2800

House of Secrets #92 (FN)...$600

Captain Atom #83 (3 copies in FN)...$120-$150 each

Fantastic Four #3 (GD/GD-)...$250

Batman Adventures #12 (VF newsstand variant) ...$600

Batman #1 (DC 52 NM/MT)...$150

2012 Captain Marvel #1 1:25 variant (NM/MT)...$150

This shows that even though (in my opinion) that the readership might be declining, prices on keys and variants are rising, keeping the market afloat based on value of back issues. The other faction that is showing a rise outside of comic books themselves, is in comic related merchandise such as original art and vintage memorabilia/paraphernalia. Some examples:

(3 panels...the largest one being all stat)...$1000

Whiz Comics #130 pg 25 ...$300

Marvel Super Hero Club buttons (1966)...$300-$500 ea.

1971 Dr. Strange black light poster...$400

Boxed 1968 Marx Thor Tricycle...$900

The comic related merchandise is starting to be taken a look at a little more (almost as a substitution to comic books themselves). These are unique items that can be "name your own price" pieces, as there is no guide prices. There is a LOT of research that has to be done on items such as these.

It's going to be interesting where the next couple of years are going to take us in this hobby/industry. The ride is going to be wild.

JIM BERRY COLLECTOR

Hello. I am a collector and (very) part-time eBay dealer based in Portland, Oregon. I specialize in Golden and Silver Age gems with a particular fondness for pre-Code Horror comics, Science Fiction, Crime, WWII era comics, double covers, anything old, unusual, rare or featuring art/covers by L.B. Cole, Steve Ditko, Jack Kamen, Bernard Baily, Matt Fox, Basil Wolverton, and many more. I also collect and read new stuff by the great creators of today, Warren Ellis, Daniel Clowes, Garth Ennis, Alan Moore, Jeff Lemire, anything Jodorowsky and Moebius.

This year I've moved away from pursuing old comics as I have in the past. Since the early 1990s, I've advertised in the classified section of local papers with great success. I've lived in various cities in that time and there were periods where I'd come home from school or work and have multiple messages (on my analog answering machine) featuring serious inquiries from original owners interested in selling their old comics or, sometimes, just talking about their old comics.

This year has been slow for me. Clearly, with the pop-zeitgeist focused so intensely on Marvel and DC heroes in film and TV coupled with the internet's immediate access to information regarding prices, my model of comic collecting is pretty much dead. Everyone you meet is a potential comic book dealer. A funny story to illustrate:

This past February, I got a call from an elderly couple wanting to sell their comic collection. They lived out on the coast of Oregon in an old, weather-beaten home, and I drove out on a clear, cold day, a two-hour drive. There were around 1000 comics from the 1940s and early '50s, collected and kept by the husband who kept telling his wife, "Just get them out of here!" Their banter was priceless, "You've kept them for 70 years, another few minutes isn't going to kill you!" "Oh, yeah? It might if you keep it up." He was reading the newspaper for most of the time but would chime in when I'd find a cool book. There was a Batman #20 in tatters, and I mentioned that it was the first Batmobile cover and his eyes lit up and he said, "My older brother gave me that."

I spent hours going through them. Most of the books were extremely low grade and most were misc. War, Western, and Dell but there were some great books, including a Mister Mystery #12 that took my breath away. They were thrilled with my offer, expecting it would be in the hundreds, not the thousands of dollars. And then the phone rang. It was their daughter who, upon hearing of my offer, immediately shut the deal down saying that their grandson (the daughter's son) could sell them on eBay and get more. I was exhausted, hungry, and utterly dejected as I prepared to leave. Seeing this, the old man said, "Why don't you pick out a few and make me an offer on those." So the Mister Mystery came home with me after all but just by the skin of my teeth.

One collection I loved finding this year was a complete DC Vertigo collection from the 1990s and 2000s. I read, for the first time, complete runs of Hellblazer, Lucifer, Preacher and many others, some fun, some not so fun. But it reminded me that comic collecting used to be about reading! Sadly, it seems that comic collecting as it exists now is more about speculating on movie and TV characters, flipping books, and going for keys exclusively.

I am encouraged by what has happened in the world of original comic art. Though there is no price guide and little in the way of a metric to predict the value of original comic art, prices continue to push on and up. If you love comics, you owe it to yourself to try and track down the original art to a meaningful comic book page . . . something you loved as a kid, something that speaks to you. Once you see the actual ink the artist placed on the page, you will be hooked. Check out comcartfans.com if you have any interest in comic art.

I went to a few shows this year, all in the Northwest and enjoyed them for what they are, costume parties and a chance for kids to meet their screen stars. To one, The Rose City Show, I brought my daughter and her two friends and we walked around and shot pictures with cosplayers, bought a couple of Lego minifigs. We had a fun time.

Read those comics, people!

My best memories with comics this year are reading them with my daughter, Willa. Our favorites are Lumberjanes, My Little Pony, Star Wars, and Mouse Guard. I highly recommend these titles, especially if you have an eight-year-old daughter.

My retailer of the year is John Hill at Hills Of Comes in Auburn, Washington. John is the king and his shop is a palace filled with treasure. It is the most amazing comic shop in the Northwest, 7200 square feet of nothing but comic books. John is also a great guy to deal with if you have an old collection of books.

Thank you to Mr. Overstreet and the crew at Gemstone for their efforts and for the honor of being included in this book.

Good wishes and happy collecting to you in 2017.

TIM BILDHAUSER CBCS - FOREIGN COMIC SPECIALIST

It's hard to believe that another year has passed by so quickly, and what a year it's been. Over the course of 2016, CBCS has continued to grow in the industry and submissions don't show any sign of slowing down. This year we attended even more conventions than in 2015 and the crowds appear to be getting bigger year after year.

We took our first shot at on-site grading this year at the Tampa Bay Comic Con in August. I was very pleased overall with how it went and want to thank everyone at the office for the roles they played and for showing what we're capable of accomplishing as a team.

The U.S. market for foreign books has continued to grow steadily this past year. We saw close to three times the number of foreign books submitted for grading this year. Books continue to sell at steadily increasing prices as demand increases. I worked the booth at close to a dozen conventions in the last 12 months and at every single one was asked by at least one person about foreign comics. I also did panels on foreign comics at the Indiana, Denver & Tampa Bay Comic Cons. They were well received by the people that attended and I'm looking forward to, possibly, doing some more next year.

2016 also heralded in CBCS's first foray into international comic shows. We set up at Toronto Comic Con, Fan Expo Toronto & Fan Expo Vancouver. We're definitely looking forward to continuing on that path in 2017.

One of the topics I was asked about most frequently this year was the Canadian editions of some of the 1950s DC books. Some of you, I'm sure, may have seen a few of these over the years. One collector inquired about the difference between the Canadian and U.S. editions. I informed him that, with every example I've seen first hand, the main story based on the cover feature is intact, however, one of the back up stories will be missing. I'm not sure if this was done as a means of reducing production costs or some other reason. I simply haven't been able to examine enough issues from a given title to determine if it's the same back up character left out from month to month or if it was randomly selected features. Time will tell and when it does, I'll keep you posted.

As far as foreign comics in general, there have been a few interesting developments. Everyone in the hobby knows that Harley Quinn is one of the hottest properties out there. What most people don't know is that there are 15 confirmed foreign editions of Batman Adventures #12 that exist. Sales on the copies that have hit the American market have been strong and I suspect that trend will continue.

La Prensa and Novaro (Mexico) key issues still lead the pack as far as demand goes but I'm seeing more and more collectors branching out and taking notice of books beyond their initial collecting focus, including original material published in other countries.

There wasn't a month that went by in 2016 that didn't bring the discovery of something new with it. I keep telling people that this is a market in its infancy and the potential it holds is enormous. As more collectors start to look for these international gems, more are discovered. Collections from both Australia and South Africa surfaced and were very quickly swallowed up by those on the lookout. In this corner of the hobby, you have to keep your eyes peeled and act quickly because, plain and simple, if you hesitate when you see a book come up for sale and someone else buys it, you may not get another chance at a copy for years.

The biggest discovery in foreign comics this year is, probably, from the Philippines though. A copy of All-Star Western #11 (2nd appearance of Jonah Hex) from National Bookstore surfaced. It gives a solid indication that #10 may possibly exist as well which would be, to date, the most significant key Bronze Age issue of the bookstore editions to surface. We'll just have to wait and see.

In closing I'd like to say that 2016 was a good year for the hobby, CBCS, FCC and myself. Just remember that as a collector, buy what you like and you won't regret buying it but most of all... enjoy it. If you're not having fun collecting comics, you're doing it wrong.

PETER BILELIS, ESQ. COLLECTOR

Once upon a time, a vintage comic book got to be worth a lot of money because it was popular and important, and scarce in the marketplace. Today, there are increasing examples of vintage books that were never very popular, that are quite plentiful (even in very high-grade), and yet are going from the $1 long boxes (slight exaggeration) to astronomically priced "wall books." The game has definitely changed and continues to evolve. For instance, it wasn't that long ago that Werewolf by Night #32 (1st Moon Knight, a book that is far from scarce) in very nice shape sat in very many "long boxes" and was priced at around $25. Now, this book is on every seller's wall, is in-demand and a high-grade copy could run you $1k or more. It's the same with books like Avengers #57, Hero for Hire #1 and Captain America #117. Snails until very recently. This phenomenon has even affected Golden Age and early Silver Age books. For eons, books like Tales to Astonish #27 sat unnoticed, and books like All Star Comics #8 and Marvel Family #1 were considered dogs. Not anymore. Frankly, I was always amazed that such great books sat in relative obscurity. But they did. As did many others - until Hollywood, Netflix and TV decided to introduce a host of lesser-known or currently less popular characters to the screen, and a mainstream audience.

In 2016, this trend continued. The big and small screen continue to unnaturally influence appeal and back issue market prices. By "unnaturally influence," I mean a B-level or C-level book that was never very popular suddenly blows up in popularity and pricing - not because of, say, a new and exciting storyline, or the early issues now appealing to a new audience, but because of a film or TV series featuring the book's character. Often, even if the character debuted in a book that had a print-run of say 100,000 copies, was known to have been stock-piled and is plentiful today in very high grade, that character's first appearance book will still skyrocket in demand and price with the announcement of an upcoming screen appearance.

In general, I think the "Hollywood factor" is good for the hobby, in that it's helping superheroes become more and more a part of pop culture and, as such, more relevant. I just question whether current value for a lot of this "unnaturally influenced" material is sustainable, given its vast availability (even in very high-grade) and the uncertainty of how popular the character will remain after the film sequels or the TV series ends.

2016 also saw the Platinum Age and Golden Age, and some Silver Age market sectors, continue down the bifurcated path discussed in several of my prior Market Reports. On the one hand, it was clear that: (a) blue chip books, such as Action, Superman, Detective, Batman, Sensation, Wonder Woman, All Star (esp. #8 and on), Captain America Comics; Pep (as of issue #22); Amazing Fantasy #15, Amazing Spider-Man; Uncanny X-Men, etc.; (b) cult status books, such as New Adventure #26; Pep #22, 34; More Fun #14, Detective #2, 8; Marvel Mystery #9; Suspense #3; National #7, Crime Does Not Pay #24; True Crime Comics #2-3; Green Lantern #76; Hulk #181; Giant-Size X-Men #1, etc.; and (c) classic covers, such as Detective #31, 35; Superman #14; Adventure #73, 79; Master #27, 32 - 34, 40; More Fun #54, 65; Phantom Lady #17, 23; Mask Comics #1; Pep #20; JLA #21, 22; Batman #227, 234; Avengers #4, etc., all have a large and growing audience, with prices continuing to escalate, and some examples reported to have sold for record high prices. And, with respect to blue chip titles, this isn't relegated to key issues - just look at how Detective Comics issues featuring Joker cover appearances (e.g. #62, 69, 71, 76) have exploded!

Record and very high reported sale prices continue to suggest growing confidence in comic books as a sort of investment. But it also means more of this material is becoming out of reach to most hobbyists. I heard people at a few shows this year refer to uber-expensive books as "one percent" books, meaning only 1% of the hobby could afford to buy them. In my last Market Report I discussed the "drafting effect" which, in essence, means a record sale of one book has the effect of pulling up with it the value of the same book in lower grades, other books in the same title and other similar books. I wonder if one reason books like the Joker cover

Detectives mentioned above are exploding in value is because the classic Joker cover (Batman #11) is now, in high grade, virtually out of reach to most collectors? It's also important to note that reported record sales of many of these 1% books, and probably 2-5% books, are actually between dealers, or to dealers at auctions, rather than from dealers to anyone else in the hobby. For the collector, it's important to recognize that this, in a sense, incestuous dealer-to-dealer "sale" dynamic, also unnaturally influences market perception of value. So, what would be the market value of these über-expensive books without this skewing dynamic? Unknown. But it's important to remember dealer-to-dealer sales, which can take many forms and aren't necessarily cash, or all-cash, deals, are very different than traditional sales to hobbyists, and are not necessarily the best indicator or a true reflection of market value.

And, on the other hand, it's also true that interest in many forgotten characters continues to wane. Because of this, a growing conversation is whether Platinum Age and Golden Age are in a bubble. From what I've seen, the answer is a definite "no." Many cornerstones of fandom stem from this era, with many heroes celebrating 75th birthdays. And, as discussed above, many reported record sale prices are for GA books. In a sense, all this means is that the hobbyist needs to be informed and selective. My approach is to buy the best copies I can afford of the tier 1 titles I collect (blue chips, etc.), and for those "more tenuous" titles I collect, I usually opt for the $250 Fine copy over the $3k Near Mint copy.

In terms of Silver Age, an increasing number of mainstream key books (AF #15, TTA #27, Avengers #4, Amazing Spider-Man #1, B&B #28, JLA #21-22, JIM #83, Hulk #1 and Action #252 to name a few) and their respective titles continued to increase in popularity and price. I also noticed that, due to the enormous number of available copies of these books, collectors were often quite picky, preferring to pass on, say, a CGC 5.5 with a certain type of offensive defect or lesser page quality, knowing there are many other copies in this grade without that particular defect and with preferable page quality. It's also true that, despite best efforts by the poor souls chained to desks grading these books, it's common knowledge that a 5.0 could come up for sale that looks superior in grade to a 5.5, causing hobbyists to be even more judicious in expensive buying decisions. This mid-grade material was also an area where prices were often very negotiable, even on many keys, and I saw several of those mentioned above (in CGC 5.0 - 7.5) sell for 25-40% less than asking price. I used very picky criteria and was still able to score a few of the keys. It was a weird experience, given I primarily collect Golden Age and you're often lucky to just find a copy - in any grade.

Detective Comics issues featuring Joker cover appearances (like #69) have exploded.

Finally, on a “non-market” note (or rant, maybe) I am a huge fan of superheroes on the big screen - especially when the films are great. For this reason, I wish the DC filmmakers would benchmark with either the DC TV folks or the Marvel film folks and start making films with more “real” stories and more relatable characters. I think most DC films feature dark, overly serious and often one-dimensional characters, with film success relying extensively on the hero involved in non-stop action sequences. Compare that to what the DC TV folks are doing with a show like Gotham. No superhero, no non-stop action, and yet this show is killing it with both great character development and well-developed, and more intellectual, stories! Marvel films also don’t rely on a hero and non-stop action. Just look at what Marvel did with Thor and Ant-Man. In Thor, they took an eternal B character, a thunder god (?) with a truly make-believe backstory and turned him into a flesh-and-blood, believable and relatable hero, accomplishing this through a love story with the hero decked out in . . . jeans and a t-shirt. If I were to run into the film version of Ant-Man’s Scott Lang or even Thor in a coffee shop, I feel like I would know them enough to chat. Because of all the character development, Marvel sequels feel like a soap opera’s next episode. My vote is for DC to loan their TV folks to DC film, or just start poaching Marvel talent. To quote, “nuff said.”

Good luck hunting in 2017...

STEVE BOROCK

CBCS

PRESIDENT AND PRIMARY GRADER

As always, it would be a shame and an injustice if I did not mention that we are all reading this because of the hard work and professionalism that J.C. Vaughn, Mark Huesman, their team and, most importantly, Bob Overstreet has put into this 47th edition of the Guide. Without this Guide coming out 47 years ago, changing the landscape of our hobby, I truly believe that, not only would our market not be as healthy as it is today, but our sense of community would not be as enjoyable. The friends I have made just by reaching out to people in this Guide over the many years has just been incredible! That includes Bob Overstreet, who I not only consider a great friend, but a mentor as well!

I would also be remiss if I did not say “Thank you!” to Steve Geppi and his family for keeping the Guide going.

For those of you who do not know, since I am the President and Primary Grader at CBCS, I must stay impartial and stay away from “pricing”. This “market report” will only focus on what is being submitted and my take on the “health” of the hobby.

Based on the amount of submissions we are getting, too many to stop us working 24/7, I would say the market is doing great!

What I am seeing submitted is an overabundance of books that you will be reading about in other reports here. That said, every time a new movie or TV show based on a comic is announced, we seem to get inundated with that title or 1st appearances of a certain character or team. Speculation runs rampant. That said, we at CBCS are also seeing a huge amount of vintage books that have nothing to do with movies or TV. Not only are we seeing the “blue chip” comics like Batman, Superman, Amazing Spider-Man, early Marvel, Timely, and DC superheroes, but we are starting to see so many cool esoteric books as well. WWII covers, Good Girl covers, and classic covers are still very being submitted in droves. As for Modern comics, a day does not go by where we do not see a copy of Batman Adventures #12 (1st Harley Quinn) or New Mutants #98 (1st Deadpool). Those two seem to be the king and queen of Moderns!

Just like last year, restored and conserved comics seem to be gaining more respect, as it’s easier and more affordable to get them. I also feel that the quality of work has really improved over the past few years and the books no longer look like “patchwork quilts.”

As always, I would like to give a “shout out” to our hobby’s greatest charity, the Hero Initiative. Hero gives back to those in need who created the wonderful characters we all enjoy. Please check them out at www.heroinitiative.org. This marks the 8th year that there is a Hero Initiative special limited edition of The Overstreet Comic Book Price Guide where the proceeds go directly to the charity! I hope this is the one you are reading right now.

I will end my report the same way I do every year. This is for the newer collectors in our great hobby, as I hope that the more seasoned collectors already know this. Even though I believe in this hobby, the market and its future, and been in it since I was a kid, there is no such thing as a “free lunch.” If you are going to invest in comic books, you had better love what you buy. If the economy ever goes “really bad,” just like with stocks, precious metal, real estate, or anything else considered an “investment,” you will not be able to sell them for a really high price very quickly and you can certainly not use comics to feed, house or feed your family in times of need. The best advice I can give, and I have been saying this for a long, long time is “Buy what you love and can afford.” It really is that simple.

Just enjoy collecting and reading comic books, enjoy the friendships we make in this wonderful hobby, look around and enjoy all the cool stuff our hobby has to offer from original art and comic books, to the movies and TV shows based on the characters we love so much, to comic memorabilia and it will all seem worth it in the end.

I hope to see and talk with many of you reading this at the conventions that I and CBCS will be attending this coming year! Thank you for taking the time to read this and, as always, HAPPY COLLECTING!

RICHARD M. BROWN

COLLECTOR

I’m getting Flash again. So many characters are complicated, and I think the fanboys will drive Showcase #4 and early Captain Cold apps. in Showcase #8 and Flash #106 with Grodd and Pied Piper origins. These have potential (and the TV show certainly helps.)

Disney has a history of famous talking animals like Donald Duck and Mickey Mouse, and I can see further promotion of Rocket Raccoon and Groot now. Guardians is fun and the freshness of the characters gives the writers tremendous flexibility with where to go next. And my beloved Howard the Duck is finally popular again, due to the Guardians cameo. Howard met KISS, ran for President, and perhaps someday he will meet Donald Duck in the cartoons.

Prices on the Rise: I'll start with Black Adam's only Golden Age appearance in Marvel Family #1. Early Justice League like Brave and the Bold #28 and J.L.A. #1. New Mutants #98 and early Harley Quinn appearances. I think DC teased us and the Joker will be permanent in future movies. Offbeat characters like Rocket and Groot will continue to flourish. And finally, More Fun #73 and other early Green Arrow appearances.

Prices on the Decline: Green Lantern - at least for now. Buy Showcase #22 and Green Lantern #1 right now! DC will eventually find its voice and Green Lantern will find its niche. So far, another "ring" character (The Mandarin) is very poorly portrayed in the Iron Man movie-verse.

BRETT CARRERAS VA COMICON

Greetings, fellow Comic Fans! What an incredible year I've had in comics! I moved full-time to Richmond, VA from San Francisco and have completely stepped back into this crazy world. While many of you know me as the director of the VA Comicon (vacomicon.com), in 2016 I spent almost every second diving into this medium from ALL angles... licensing and promoting...operations and exhibiting...even creating and storytelling!

In addition to running the VA Comicon series of shows in 2016, I also took on the daunting role of managing the Going-Out-of-Business Sale of the legendary Dave's Comics retail mega-store in Richmond (remember their ½ page "missed an issue?" ads during the '90s?) following the passing of my longtime friend, David Luebke. Subsequent to the closure of the retail store in July, I have assumed leadership of their massive 750,000 unit warehouse. It has been a lot of work, but I am VERY proud of what we have been able to accomplish these last 8 months. All of this, of course, got me BACK into old funny books, and BACK out on the road. Now I can honestly say: The state of the convention market is STRONG!

My first stop on the convention trail this year was HeroesCon in Charlotte, where I quietly sold an important Golden Age collection before the event even started. It was an amazing show, with total sales approaching six figures for us. Several people were stunned to see me "back on the road", but it is ALWAYS fun when you have exciting inventory!

The other "BIG SHOW" I exhibited at in 2016 was San Diego on behalf of the VA Comicon. This was a marketing show for me, where we have a booth promoting both my show, and Awesome-Con (Washington, DC's largest pop-culture event), a show I am proud to be on the Event Staff for (you will find me wandering around Artist Alley). I brought copies of our Back to the Future #1 exclusive to SDCC, and sold out by Saturday. We also participated in the return of Rom by debuting our Ltd 500 Silver Foil variant of #1 on launch day, and had a signing with the creative team on Saturday. What a cool experience to have at a comic show! And speaking of comic shows, without further ado, I present to you my first ever...

VA Comicon Convention Market Report: Here goes! For my own show, the VA Comicon, I am really jazzed to say 2016 was our most amazing year EVER! Not only did we celebrate our 30th year (!!!), but we also experienced unprecedented growth, while delivering a family friendly and budget-minded event to both retailers and attendees. (Adult tickets start at just $10!)

When I took over promotion of the show in 2005, we were located in a 2,000 sq. ft. ballroom (more on this later), catering to approximately 150 die-hard comic fans several times a year. In 2016, all three of our VA Comicon events were in a massive 36,000 square foot space, featuring over a hundred 10x10 booths of the neatest stuff, and the greatest comics around!!!

I am VERY happy to say our attendance skyrocketed this year with hallways packed with both customers and some of the coolest collectibles. The fact that THOUSANDS of people come to our shows (Richmond has a population of less than 250,000 people), still blows my mind...especially with how really, really crowded the convention market has become! When I took over promoting the VA Comicon 11 years ago, the only other comic shows I knew of were a firehouse show near DC (with horrible traffic), and Roger Mannon's awesome Vintage Collectibles show once a year in Roanoke...a 4 hour drive from us in Richmond. Today it's crazy. In addition to Wizard World Richmond (5 miles from us), we now we have the NOVA series of comic shows (2 times a year), Shoff Promotions (8 times a year), The Tidewater Comic-Con events (2 times a year), The Roanoke Valley Comicon (2 times a year), and Awesome-Con DC, plus of course, Roger's show. That's 17 other shows (PLUS my shows!) in a state that only takes 4 hours to drive through on I-95.

Thankfully, I am happy to say I know most of these show promoters personally, and am PROUD to call them my friends. The best thing about the Virginia / DC area is that EVERYONE loves comics, and we have ALL experienced awesome growth.

For my show, our first 1-day event of the year (in February) was also one of the most successful for my exhibitors, and was also our best attended 1-day show EVER! We decided to add a Summer event in 2016, which was met with equal success, followed by our gala 2-day event on Halloween. All shows were packed with fans, cosplayers and collectors. Many of my traveling exhibitors remarked to me on our growth, and the robust spending of my fans, something I am quite proud of.

As I just mentioned, our Fall event was on Halloweekend. I really wanted 30th anniversary show to be something special for the fans. We pulled out all of the stops, and welcomed Tom King (the #1 writer of Batman), Howard Chaykin, Joe Staton, Mark Waid, Larry Stroman, Dan Parent, Fernando Ruiz, Billy Tucci and almost 100 other artists to Richmond, and the fans LOVED it, making it our biggest 2-day showing in our history. And you wouldn't believe the costumes!

Speaking of costumes, I want to speak my piece on the matter of Cosplay, and expound on a few very keen solutions we have discovered which can temper most emotions when it comes to the Cosplay aspect of shows...especially as the market continues to grow. Here goes:

1) I LOVE cosplay. I think it is the coolest thing ever to be able to buy a Batman comic while standing beside Batman! In fact The Overstreet Guide to Cosplay debuted at our show back in 2015 and features guests from our show on the cover. Order it today!

2) Approximately 50% of attendees at my show arrive in full costume, with a significant majority of those costumes being hand-made.

3) The huge number of ticket sales to cosplayers is what keeps our admission prices so low.

4) We continued to offer a full hour of early-bird time, limited to only 100 special tickets per show. This program has been a complete treat and gives my vendors time to interact one-on-one with some of their best clients.

5) Finally, I introduced the RVA Comic Collector's Con in December.

The RVA Collector's Con was a response to something I have been feeling in the pit of my stomach for a VERY long time. Do you know what I missed? I missed that old 2,000 square foot ballroom I mentioned earlier. I missed running a show that cost practically nothing to get into, and was just loaded with the best comics and sweetest deals around. So I did something about it. I gathered up my longest running comic vendors, plus reached out to a handful of friends we haven't had at the show in a long time. We rented that VERY SAME 2,000 sq. ft. old ballroom we were in when I began with the VA Comicon, and we had ourselves an event. It was a pure comic show! Twelve of the finest comic vendors on the planet got to spend 6 hours laughing and trading and talking comics with some of the greatest collectors from near and far. I even debuted a double-collection of high-grade Bronze I had the opportunity to invest in with my roommates (I haven't actively exhibited for myself in about 5 years). And y'know what? It was all amazing.

So, looking back on 2016, I realized I promoted an astounding TEN different comic book events (including the INSANE "going out of business" events for Dave's), I helped exhibit at my 2 favorite shows on the planet, San Diego and Heroes-Con, I was on Event Staff at the national-level pop culture show Awesome-Con in DC run by one of my best friends, and I helped to shut down one of the coolest retail stores in the country, while working to develop their packed warehouse into something profitable. In my free time I was lucky enough to take a "Creating Comics" class at the Visual Arts Center co-taught by Scott Wegener (Atomic Robo!!!) as well as a super-cool screen printing class. I also studied several weeks to learn the subtle art of comic book cleaning and pressing. In December I shared a table at the Star Wars Days festival, and gave away free sketches all day long, offering to draw practically anything the children wanted. As far as printed material, I licensed the best looking Rom comic EVER (Silver Foil cover by Kevin Roberts!), printed a series of collectible cosplay trading cards, and published 3 books on Amazon.

For 2017, in addition to running the VA Comicon, I have been tapped to take on promotion of the world-famous Collectibles Expo (collectiblesexpo.com). I will continue to develop the core inventory for Dave's Comics (I can't wait to show people what we are working on with CBCS), while aggressively liquidating some of the bulk of this inventory. For example, we have over 20,000 uncirculated G.I. Joe comics from the 1980s in Mint condition. As of this writing, I am about to announce 3 different Ltd. 100 Wonder Woman exclusives I have been working on for a few months, which we will launch at the "Awesome Convention Exclusives" booth in San Diego, coming out the SAME DAY as this Overstreet you are holding right now!

In closing, I wanted to say thank you. Thank you, exhibitors and fans for helping me to break ALL of our records in 2016. Thank you, Sheryl and Marlon for the opportunity to work with you and the Dave's Comics crew. Thank you, people of Richmond, for naming me in Style Weekly's Top 40 under 40, and finally, thank you to the approximately 150 people close enough to make it on my Facebook friends list. The list consists of my VERY closest buddies, confidants, business partners, artists and teachers. I love each and every one of you.

CHARLES AND JEFF CERRITO HOT FLIPS

Another year has gone by in the comic book industry. More and more conventions are being created each month and it seems like there is always a comic book convention to go to every weekend. Whether it is a three or four day convention or just a small local one day show, either way, no matter where you attend, collectors and dealers are showing up in record numbers. About 15 years ago, you would have a crowd at a small local 1 day show that would draw 30-50 people, but now it is about 500, with some shows in the thousands. The national day conventions usually drew about 20,000-30,000 and that was considered to be a huge massive crowd. Today these same conventions are drawing way over 100,000. For example, we know San Diego draws a max crowd of 126,000. This year's New York Comic Con drew a record crowd of 180,000 and it's still growing. The comic book convention is not just a pop culture event, it is now a way of life.

As collectors go into these conventions, everyone has a want list. There are people of all ages, men and women, young boys and girls, always looking for that something special. In our experiences at most conventions around the country, kids to young adults plan to look for variant issues as well as comics from the late 1980s and 1990s. I find it amazing that we could not give this stuff away 15 years ago due to the fact it was overproduced. After thinking about that, there are so many more collectors out there than in the last 15 years.

With more and more collectors out there from the 1980s and 1990s, there is more of a demand because the back issues from those years are more affordable, with some exceptions of course. Everyone wants the hottest super hero out there from Deadpool to Harley Quinn, Batman, Avengers, Spider-Man, Why is that? I guess all the movies that are coming out every year. It seems like there are 3 or 4 super hero movies every year. Also a Star Wars movie every December, and it helps the comic book industry or we as collectors and dealers help the movie industry produce what we want to see. It might have started as a fad. It is so much more. Who knows when this will end?

We are seeing the most oddball comics spiking in the last few years. It seems like any comic with a first appearance of someone is a key issue. Ms Marvel #1, Strange Tales #169 (1st appearance of Brother Voodoo) and #180 (1st appearance of Gamora from Guardians of the Galaxy) and Preacher #1, to name a few. These comics were once in a dollar bin. You now rarely see $1.00 comics from the 1980s and 1990s at conventions anymore. Some of us dealers don't seem to want to give anything away anymore. A few years ago, I had a full box of Omega Men #3 (1st appearance of Lobo). All of these comics wouldn't sell at $1.00, and now all are going for more than that.

As far as the supply business goes, since there are more collectors out there, the bags and backing boards along with storage boxes are selling faster than before. Everyone is always going to need a bag, a backing board and a box to put them in. We can't even hold on to them. By the time we have our shipment in, we are ready to produce more and it is never enough. An average customer who usually buys 1 pack of comic book bags with backing boards (there is 100 total) is now increasing their purchases to 3 packs. A small time dealer usually buying 1 full case of bags with backing boards (1,000 in a case) is now buying between 3-5 cases at a time. A lot of stores who carry our stuff are always selling out. It is a great time to be in the business and as a collector.

With all that being said, I find the "Pop Culture" conventions are gathering more and more steam with every year. Cosplayers make up a lot of the attendee base which makes for crowded conventions. I personally think it is great for the hobby. A lot of cosplayers I know do buy comics as well. As they get older, maybe as with any young collector right now, they start buying key issues and so on and so forth. The flip side is right now, there are not many who are going to spend serious money with vintage comic dealers, so for those dealers, they take up aisle space. The only downside for me personally is that, well, Halloween just isn't that cool of a holiday anymore because every weekend is Halloween on the convention circuit. Whether you collect comic books, enjoy dressing up in cosplay, or whatever your reason is for going to a convention, there is new blood at the shows and that's all we as dealers can ask for.

So while I think the comic market is strong right now, everything has a bubble. When will it burst? Who knows? I think it's up to the major companies to keep things fresh and have new ideas to keep things going. Judging by the past 15 years, I say they are doing a great job. I just hope they keep trying new, innovative things to keep it going.

Until next year!!

PAUL CLAIMONT PNJ COMICS

Overview of the Market: It's hard to believe that we are approaching 2017 in just a few short weeks. Here at PNJ Comics we saw the market beginning to settle slightly compared to the fast-paced rise of the last four years but nonetheless, still trending upward. The demand is still very strong for quality books of all eras and books for investors to speculate on. I decided to try and maintain a balance between business and personal life but found that no matter how much I wanted to stop and smell the roses, the demand for great material continued to keep me busier than I have ever been since starting business in 2012.

Completing the 4th full year of operations in 2016, we find ourselves overwhelmed with many projects entering the 1st quarter of our 5th year. Mostly trying to process collections acquired throughout 2016. It was another phenomenal year for PNJ Comics. There was no shortage of finding quality material and growing the inventory of hard-to-find and high grade books that separate us from other comic book dealers. The difficult part is getting the goods listed on our site and eBay store.

Our inventory levels of quality books have grown so much from year to year that we decided to sell knowing we do not need to set record prices on each book, even if it is a key. We have seen too often a book climbing in price as the frenzy of collectors and/or speculators hunt for them only to see the book plummet once the supply has filled the initial demand. With the onslaught of new shows and movies continuing to grow, it has created a smaller window of time for the related comic books to stay hot and therefore capitalize on them.

We are pleased to see a significant increase in business on our website as it shows us that we are gaining more awareness in the industry and making an impact in the marketplace. We continue to have an eBay store to complement our website as it is the #1 source to drive traffic to our site and still continues to provide us with our best exposure. Having an eBay store is essentially a way to advertise your business. Timing is everything! Last year I mentioned in my market report that we would “let the chips fall where they may” and hold an auction on eBay for a near complete run of high grade Star Wars comics to coincide with the release of the new Star Wars movie in late 2015. This goes against conventional wisdom as we have always advocated that Buy it Now and Best Offers work better in our business model than a no reserve auction. However, because of the timing, it proved very successful and brought record prices on many books. If we tried that now, nearing the end of 2016, we believe that same auction would prove to be a disaster. Hard to believe that Star Wars comics were the hot item for a few years. CGC graded copies of issue #1 were bringing unimaginable prices and like most movie-hyped material, have dropped like a lead balloon.

In 2016, the entertainment world continued to roll out the TV shows and movies. One that we thought was particularly interesting was the excellent modern comic book series, Preacher. Copies of #1 would barely stick around in our shop before being sold within a day or week. Both 3rd party graded and raw were bringing strong premiums prior to the series start with CGC 9.8 collecting four figures. Just recently we decided to sell off our last CGC 9.8 copy at only $500.00 USD. We know it's in between seasons but as we've always advocated, no profit is too small and we still were happy with 50% profit margin rather than hoping season #2 increases. To compare, the pre-show hype was building fast in the beginning of 2016 and in February we sold a CGC 9.6 for $405.00. If need be, there are always more raw copies sitting in the inventory that we can grade if it spikes again. We wanted to share this example to help illustrate the ebb and flow of speculation. Other new series such as Luke Cage on Netflix also experienced the same early hype and leveling off after the series premiered. The one thing I don't like with Netflix is that they release the entire series on one day and there is no anticipation to wait a week to see what happens the next episode and it quickly kills the excitement of the show.

As I look back on the year, not a lot has changed from the trends we talked about last year. Female and visible minority characters are still highly popular and widely sought after. The trend I did see people fall back to was collecting favorite artists. Todd McFarlane is always one of those that fall into that category. I always wondered why his Amazing Spider-Man title of the '80s was so highly in demand yet his new material covers of Marvel Tales of the same era never took off. Another artist that is red hot is Gabrielle Del'Otto. It seems everything this guy does turns to gold, for the long run or not, that is a question to ask yourself whether you collect for pure enjoyment or buy in hope that your investment was worthwhile.

I use the term “quality books” often in my writing. These are often books that seem to be overlooked in the current marketplace. I'm not sure if it's a generational phenomenon. In my opinion, these are tough to find in high grade books such as 15¢ and 20¢ cover price comics from the late '60s and early '70s. I challenge any collector to find these books in true 9.2 or higher condition, and that means don't count on the grading you see advertised on eBay, but really find this stuff compared to the numerous copies of New Mutants #98 or Batman Adventures #12 in high grade. I would rather have a copy of House of Mystery #174 in 9.2 or better in my inventory than another copy of New Mutants #98.

Another area to focus on that is easily overlooked are independent comics. Some of the most recognizable are Teenage Mutant Ninja Turtles, Cerebus and Love and Rockets to name a few but there are many overlooked and undervalued books in this genre. Although some titles have been around since the late '60s, independent books took on a mainstream quality as the books grew in popularity during the '80s thanks in part to titles like Teenage Mutant Ninja Turtles. These were cheaply produced black and white books that competed for a share of the market against mainstream publishing. What makes these books unique are the low print runs and very cheap production values as publishers looked to compete on a shoe-string budget making them hard to find in high grade. There are some extremely valuable books due to some of these factors.

A keen collector would start doing research in this area and scoop up this material while it's relatively low in the price guides and most dealers' stock. There are some well written books such as Elf Lord and The Adventurers. The cost is so low at the moment that it would be a small risk to begin filling long boxes of this stuff.

I've been observing an alarming new trend developing within the hobby with regards to 3rd party graded comic books and/or magazines this past year. We've been selling both uncertified raw comics and 3rd party graded comics for almost 5 years. In that period of time we are proud to say that we have had only 2 returns for an order of uncertified books graded by ourselves from hundreds and hundreds of orders. We understand grading is subjective so we have a no hassle, full refund, return policy on all orders. What is alarming, we are finding more and more people are wanting to return 3rd party graded comics because of the production of the plastic cases. The issue isn't actually with the comic but the person doesn't like the way the book looks in the case. They are unhappy with flaws caused during the production or with flaws that are based on quality such as not being perfectly straight in the plastic well or having an “oily” appearance due to the inner wells pushing on certain areas of the comic only giving an illusion that there is a liquid substance inside. My personal favorite was a buyer who didn’t like the way the plastic case had a rough edge from where the cases are separated during manufacturing and wanted to return the perfectly fine comic. It’s easier to accept a return no matter what issue the person has with the product but it leaves us laughing and scratching our heads. People have lost sight of what 3rd party grading was created for. To help remind some folks who might not remember; it is to help eliminate a disagreement for 2 parties negotiating a sale, the buyer and the seller, so there are no questions about the grade of the book or whether it has restoration. Some people seem to believe the case has become an extension of the book itself.

Silver Age: In 2016, we didn’t see a lot of Silver Age books surface in collections that we acquired. I think collectors are realizing how tough it can be to replace these books if they trade or sell them from their collections to leverage other purchases. We also didn’t sell a lot of Silver Age books in 2016. That is partially due to the fact that we prefer to deal with high grade books and it is particularly difficult finding Silver Age books in true high grade of Very Fine+ (8.5) or better. We sold a nice run of Silver Surfer #1 to #5 in varying grades of 7.5 to 9.0 for multiples of Guide, but our focus was concentrated in mainly Bronze Age, Copper Age and the Modern Age. We also sold a very rare 35¢ Canadian Price Variant of Archie’s Pal n’ Gals #23 featuring the 1st appearance of Josie in CGC 3.5 for $580.00 USD which is about 500% higher than it is priced in the Overstreet Guide.

Bronze Age: Our favorite era of books and our top selling genre of books for 2016. It seems there is a resurgence of collectors looking for high grade examples of their favorite 1970s books. There is so much going on during this era when it comes to undervalued and overlooked keys. Bronze Age books can be a complex and up for debate as to what justifies a character’s first appearance. The best example I can use to illustrate this point is the argument collectors have over what Wolverine’s 1st appearance is. In Incredible Hulk #180 he is clearly introduced on a full page and announces himself as “the Wolverine” to the Hulk and Wendigo but yet #181 gets the glory of 1st appearance. It can be confusing as another resurging character such as Darkseid appears less than Wolverine did in Hulk #180 when he first appears in Superman’s Pal, Jimmy Olsen #134 yet it is designated as Darkseid’s 1st appearance. Ultimately, the market has spoken and the prices on these issues are the true indicator where people believe the 1st appearances are, but it begs for consistency and maybe even a change in some of the old way of thinking. I can imagine the deadlock arguments as collectors and dealers try to protect their interests or stake in a particular book.

The Bronze Age isn't immune to the effects of speculation. Early in 2016, a rumor quickly circulated on the internet that Shang-Chi would be appearing on the Netflix show, Iron Fist, which still wouldn't be released for over a year or so. Within hours of this rumor surfacing, we were sold out of our high grade copies of Special Marvel Edition #15 which features Shang-Chi's 1st appearance and is a very tough book to find in high grade because of the black cover. Before we could adjust to the spike in prices, our two CGC 9.6 copies sold for over $400.00 USD each. We always believed this book was very undervalued and no one paid any attention to it as it sat for years in our inventory. Speculators were fooled and the rumor was unfounded and Shang-Chi was not going to be on the Iron Fist TV show. Sadly, this book should sell on its own merit and without the need of rumors. I wanted to illustrate that speculators rarely win, especially if they are trying to pick up the book after the rumor has hit. They are usually buying the sought after book on the upswing while they should have been proactively researching material to find character 1st appearances or key events before any rumors are released. It seems there were more false rumors in 2016 than there were valid ones.

There is a lot of movement once again for ethnic super-heroes in this genre. Black Lightning started to get some attention and copies of Black Lightning #1 jumped in value as speculation of his own TV show was rumored. Raw NM- (9.2) copies were easily selling for $100.00 USD. Power Man #24 is another book that is difficult to obtain in high grade. We had a CGC 9.6 copy that sold for $330.00 USD. This book boasts the 1st appearance of Black Goliath. Hero for Hire still continues to climb in price. Selling CGC 8.0 for $600.00 to raw 7.0 for $300.00 of issue #1. The title has so many other keys such as issue #5, 1st appearance of Black Mariah and issue #19 with the 1st appearance of Cotton Mouth. The Netflix show was received to mixed reviews and isn't for everyone, but once again, Marvel and Netflix teamed up to bring another small screen hit that is helping introduce the character to a new group of fans that weren't collectors of the comic book. We sold a CGC 9.6 copy of Strange Tales #169 for $950.00 USD, featuring the 1st appearance of Brother Voodoo. Not an easy book to acquire in high grade, nor are the other Strange Tales issues featuring Brother Voodoo from #170 to #172. Horror books in this era still remained slow sellers for us, but we believe everything is cyclical and these books will make a return one day.

We were fortunate to come across a very nice high grade collection of Bronze Age from New York and still continue to process the books. The problem with finding such nice, high grade examples of my favorite era of books is that I'm never too particularly rushed to put them up for sale. I guess there still remains a little bit of the collector in me when it comes to great books.

One thing about this era that I find strange is the lack of appreciation for the magazines. A lot of the stories were written for a more mature audience and often the stories are very graphic compared to their comic book cousins. I don't know if it's the size dimensions and storage issues but there isn't a big calling for this stuff lately. Heck, you can find some real gems in these books such as very early solo Moon

Knight stories in Rampaging Hulk magazine beginning with issue #11 but as hot as Moon Knight seems to be, collectors simply overlook these books and they could be sleepers in the future. There are other great titles such as Monsters Unleashed, Vampire Tales which actually boasts a few keys. Deadly Hands of Kung-Fu can't be ignored with some great early Iron Fist stories along with Bruce Lee material.

Copper Age: Last year I mentioned that prices were beginning to stabilize on a lot of the keys. What I neglected was the never-ending number of new keys and semi-keys that keep popping up on the radar.

Certainly, the earlier hot selling books from 2012-2014 leveled off but gave new opportunity for other books to surge in price and once again reaffirm that Copper Age is a lucrative genre with plenty of staying power. While we saw a slow down with interest in books such as X-Factor #5 and #6 and an inevitable leveling or drop in prices, it opened doors for other keys that were sleeping giants. Suddenly Spectacular Spider-Man #64 shot to the moon with prices for CGC 9.8 clearing $500.00 USD consistently. We sold a copy ourselves for $800.00 USD prior to the rumors of Cloak and Dagger receiving a new TV show.

Honestly, I've lost track of the number of characters that are receiving rumored shows. The safe bet for speculators might just be to assume every character will show up on some form of entertainment and to start buying every 1st appearance. I'm not a fan of people speculating on preview books such as the title, Marvel Age. This is where the lines are blurred with crazy speculators and I have to question if they are true comic book collectors.

Needless to say, there are some fantastic and low priced books. I've always been partial to Batman growing up and think some of the best stuff during the Copper Age came from these books. Batman: Year One in Batman #404 to #407 by Frank Miller is a classic. Death in the Family was another winner. Zeck's work in Knights of the Beast is fantastic too! I'm surprised that his run with Captain America doesn't receive more attention. It seems Daredevil #227 is garnering some renewed attention with the "Born Again" story, along with the other issues in the entire storyline. I wonder if we'll see a resurgence for the Death of Kraven storyline. Once again, Mike Zeck was brilliant on that story and it is another classic brought to you by the '80s. I think one of the most undervalued and best books of the era was Superman #423 written by Alan Moore. Another spectacular book is Superman Annual #11 by Alan Moore as well. A lot of nice mini-series are surprisingly tough to find these days in decent condition. Take the Hawkeye mini-series, Nightcrawler, Cloak & Dagger and Longshot.

These are books that were given the typical 25¢ bin treatment and are not easy to find in high grades. Marvel/Star Comics such as Ewoks and Droids are not easy to find in high grade. In fact, any Star Comic title eludes collectors in high grade as they were targeted to a younger audience. Death of Supergirl and death of Flash in the Crisis on Infinite Earths mini-series are popular key books. Although demand isn't what it used to be for Watchmen, it remains a classic mini-series as well but unfortunately, its hype from years past brought many high grade copies to the market place and the supply outweighs the demand. O'Barr's The Crow #1 to #4 should be on collector's lists along with Primer #2 featuring the 1st Grendel. These are classic books that are not easy to find in grades that appeal to collectors.

Modern Age: The juggernaut known as "The Walking Dead" has certainly cemented itself as the king of the Modern Age. Copies of issue #1 and #2 continue to soar in price. Not even breaks between the seasons of the TV show seem to slow the increase for long. Now that the show has one of the best modern villains to come along in a while with Negan, I'm seeing prices climb on all issues of the series. The title is currently up to issue #160 as of this writing, and Negan has been in the series since issue #100. We saw people scramble to find copies of issue #100 2nd printing with its unforgiving black cover and 1st Negan cover appearance. We began selling raw copies for as much as $200 USD and recently sold 3 CGC 9.8 copies for a total of $695.00 USD. The only question I have about this series is how much higher can issue #1 climb?

Last year, female characters like Gwenpool made people start to look for more untapped potential. It appears 2016 was the year for Laura Kinney (X-23), Wolverine's clone daughter who became the all new Wolverine. Her 1st, 2nd and 3rd appearances in the NYX series from 2003 are sky-rocketing. It doesn't hurt that she is speculated to be in the final Wolverine movie soon to be released.

Variants are still rolling off the presses and become a lucrative marketing tool for publishers and a nightmare for completionists. I couldn't imagine trying to fill in the gaps to a series with all the 1:10 up to 1:1000 incentive variant covers for a series. I still believe it's a big risk for speculators to get involved in this area. Variants have a very small success rate to increase dramatically. The formula for a successful variant appears to be one that has no intention of being successful. Take Amazing Spider-Man #667 Del'Otto variant. People are paying insane amounts of money for a copy because it's an oddly numbered issue that had a variant edition but wasn't on anyone's radar. It was created to sell more issues for the publisher but wasn't meant so much as a hyped marketing tool. In my opinion, this stuff is over-priced due to supply and demand but will drop as more copies surface and the small pool of people that want these books has been filled. It reminds me of the 1st sale of a CGC 9.9 copy of New Mutants #98. You will be hard pressed to find anyone that would pay over $12,000 for a copy now.

For my money, my favorite series is Afterlife with Archie. In 2016, we were treated to 2 issues. At this semi-annual release rate it should reach issue #20 by 2021. It's too bad that a well written and drawn book like this is overshadowed by the myriad of gimmicky books and "hope it sticks" releases of issue #1s.

I hope this year I didn't sound too cynical because I am still very passionate about this hobby and the comic industry. I may not be emotionally attached to comics as I once was. A pitfall I think many people face when they cross that boundary from being a collector while growing up to being a comic book dealer. It's easy to criticize the changing landscape of the market as more speculation is done over comic books but I still do remember what excites me about comics and it's that connection to those childhood memories that are quickly conjured up when I see a collection that reminds me of the day I bought a lot of these books fresh from the racks with my father. I remind myself to keep it simple and appreciate that I get to do the best job in the world with something I love.

There you have it! We look forward to a promising 2017 and are excited to complete a few more goals and projects. As always, I send my love, gratitude and appreciation to my wife and son, Nicole and Jack. To my father, without you there would never be the memories of collecting comics that I cherish. I would especially like to say a big thanks to my close friends, Doug & Cathy. Your friendship, mentorship and long chats over dinners, games and coffee has helped to make it sane in a sometimes insane market.

ART CLOOS COLLECTOR

For me December 1, 2016 closes the reporting year for Advisor reports so with that date having arrived here we go with this year's report from me. When I wrote my market report in the 2016 Comic Book Marketplace in July 2016 I wanted to focus on the new collector who might want some guidance on how to approach buying comics as an investment and not just for reading pleasure and I want to follow up with that discussion here. From here in the northeast the comic collector market has not changed much since the summer when I wrote that report and most of the recommendations I made then to those new collectors still hold. Comics continue to be an asset class and as with any asset class prices rise, fall and also remain the same. If you buy for investment purposes then looking for trends is one way to approach it. I have been watching the coming of age of movies, TV shows, and cartoons dedicated to characters from the world of comics and been advocating taking notice of this for investment buying for years now. I had said in CBM that I am not pulling back on this recommendation but I was suggesting that it might time to be a bit more careful in approaching comic collecting using this approach and again nothing has changed with that recommendation. I used a mantra traditional to the stock market, “don’t buy to chase yield”. I said this because while Marvel continued to perform well in movies in 2016, DC’s Batman v Superman, despite a healthy box office take but one that did not reach the levels expected, received a mediocre reception by the critics. In fact this morning on CNBC, two separate reporters commented on the movie basically being unwatchable. I was taken aback at this and that kind of sentiment does not bode well for the future if it continues. This can be coupled with the release of Suicide Squad by DC on August 5th which received very poor critical ratings despite a good overall box office. I personally did not feel that those reviews were especially fair by the way, but those poor reviews, as does the negative commentary of the CNBC reporters, reflect as much as anything the problem for DC and perhaps for investing in comics with a movie tie in. So the question I asked was, “Does this double whammy for DC mean it is advisable to begin look for superhero fatigue among movie goers as the line of DC Universe movies has not performed up to the critical standards that its fans demand?” I said back in July that the answer to the question was that it remains to be seen. Let’s see if that is still the answer.

To begin, the Marvel Doctor Strange movie which opened November 4th received excellent reviews and a Rotten Tomatoes score of 91%. It did live up to expectations and perhaps exceeded them. Now in my CBM report, I focused on some specific books that I have seen bought or bought myself from January to July to look at what they could tell potential buyers about what’s going on in the market. I want to continue that here and look at those same books. I started with Marvel and specifically Strange Tales #110 which ties in perfectly my Doctor Strange movie comment above. In anyone’s book, #110 is a key issue with the first appearance of Doctor Strange. Before the movie announcement, it showed up fairly often at many of the shows that we go to and it was a book that could be bought for very reasonable prices including on eBay. Then the Doctor Strange movie went into production and I wrote in CBM that the price of the book exploded about 3 years ago. High grade copies began to be offered by sellers as high as in the mid $40 thousand range if not more, lower grades stepped up in price. Then the books disappeared off the racks and there were relatively few copies in any grade available at shows for sale for the last 2 years that we observed. Where did they go I asked? One place (but not the only one) was on eBay and in July I counted 32 copies, slabbed and unslabbed with different pricing within the same grade levels and with books that have been up there for a while and almost all of them were listed as “Buy It Now.”

So did the good Doctor’s movie move the needle for his book? Well today I counted 56 copies almost all “Buy It Now” with the high price being a 9.2 at $44000.92 with some of the same books for sale now as was in July. I said then and say it now that it is a fair assumption to make that many of these books were bought on speculation and are being offered at higher prices than the market wants to pay and it still seems that demand has softened on it with prices remaining flat and sellers not wishing to back down. Of course some of these sellers could be collectors looking to cash out and take their profit and run. What this suggested in July and still does now is having patience might just get one a better deal than perhaps a year ago depending how stubborn the sellers are and how much they have into their copies.

Next I looked at a Journey Into Mystery #83, the first appearance of Thor. This is another example of a book benefiting from a successful movie the result of which was, as with Strange Tales #110, we observed that for many years a book that used to be on a not small amount of dealers displays now seldom shows up at the same shows today. After doing my eBay search back in July, I found there were 42 copies slabbed and unslabbed and again with different pricing within the same grade and yes most were “Buy It Now.” Today it was 51 not including a whole bunch of Golden Record reprints that had very high asking prices for a reprint book and everyone of them, reprint or not, was “Buy It Now.” I had noted that the first Thor appearance had a reputation of being a somewhat scarcer book overall but I was not seeing that then and I sure don’t see it now. To me this was and is another example of speculators hoarding copies and also collectors deciding to cash in. I noted that it would seem that this too is a book that with patience a potential buyer can do better on than when the first Thor movie came out, but having said that for July and in repeating it now, sellers also seem to hold firm on their prices.

Now switching over to DC, I want to look at Showcase #22, a personal favorite of mine and one of the earliest keys I ever owned (and still do today though a better copy than my original). It is another book that used to show up a fair amount at shows we go to but not recently at all and in July on eBay there were only 10 copies, 9 with “Buy It Now” and with one set of #22 to #24 as a bidding auction. Oddly though I have been told by dealers it is a book that does not last long when it does show up on their sales rack at a show. Today on eBay there were 13 copies, only 3 more than in July and with prices above and below Guide depending on the grade. I said then and I will say now that if you want one then don’t hesitate when you find one because they either are not being offered due to scarcity or due to a perceived lack of buyer interest. This is despite the fact that since the Ryan Reynolds Green Lantern movie was released back on June 16, 2011 a significant drop in sales for any of the early Green Lantern Silver Age books occurred. I should add that as with Suicide Squad I felt the reviews on that movie were not fair and I actually liked it a fair amount, but my opinion does not translate to box office success. What this does mean is you can pick up many early Silver Age GL keys in the run for decent prices but if you want the mega key, Showcase #22, right now you are not necessarily going to get a bargain. I noted in July that a lot will depend on how the next announced Lantern movie featuring the GL corps will do, so if you like the character, now might be the time to dabble in some non-origin Green Lantern keys, or not as the case may be.

Now if you have read any of my reports over the last 2 years you know that I said to keep an eye on Action #252, the first Supergirl appearance given the news about her getting her own TV show. It was a book that would show up often at local shows as a dealer wall key with relatively cheap asking prices and yes as the show was announced and hit the airwaves prices on it took off and again is a book that no longer appears very much at local comic shows. In July on eBay there were 23 copies with all but 2 being "Buy It Now" and those 2 had no bids with their auctions ending within 7 hours of when I went through the listings. The highest price book up was one with an asking price on a 7.0 of $6,500. With 23 copies, some of which have been up for a while it seemed demand had cooled on the title. At NYCC in October there were exactly 3 copies that I saw for sale and I bought one of them because it was an absolutely killer copy and for a very fair price. Today there were 47 copies on eBay all with "Buy It Now" and not one regular auction. This should warn the collector looking to add this early Silver Age key to his/her collection to do his or her homework and not jump at the first book they come across. I will say that if the show has a long run on TV will that might well affect prices of the #252 positively. If the show does not get past its second season, prices might well drop. Only time will tell. Keep an eye too on Action #285 the revealing of Supergirl to the world issue, it's a minor key but one affordable even in high grade and a book that might be worth picking up.

Next I want to look at a title featuring my favorite character Batman. He has been pretty much immune to good versus bad movie appearances and that includes this year's Dawn of Justice and the prices on his titles simply do not go down in any grade because sellers can get the prices they ask for them. In July I wanted to look here at one issue in particular, specifically Detective Comics #184. It is a first appearance of the Firefly and as such a key first appearance, though granted not a major one but a key still and one would think more would show up somewhere. I noted that this was an issue that seldom shows up on eBay and even less on dealer's racks. Checking eBay in July, there were no issues listed and this had been the norm for most of the year with only 1 issue that I could find and that one went considerably over Guide in its auction. Today there were zero copies for sale. I decided to add one other key to this which is Detective #168. With a 7.0 selling for $17,000 plus this year there were 2 copies on eBay today. As I said in July in the case of Batman, the movies don't seem to mean much in terms of affecting the value of his books and there is absolutely no doubt that vintage Detective and Batman titles continue to sell well with high grade Silver Age moving very well as does his high grade Golden Age and Atomic Age issues. Since writing my report in July I have seen many early Silver Age Detectives and Batman title books sell quite strongly and honestly I don't see that changing very much. I said in July that I have tracked these books over the years and know quite well that there are issues of both Batman and Detective that show up often (some issues a lot and in all grades) and others that seldom do and this does not seem to have anything to do with speculators or hoarding, rather it seems to be more a matter of scarcity and actual copies available and this is something I have observed for years.

When a scarce issue number does show up, it is almost always in low grade. One example is Detective #216. In July, there were 12 issues on eBay, a very high number for a book in this issue range, but today, as I type this there were 7 and all the same ones as in July. None were above a VG then and none are now and most did not or do not appear to be as good as the described grade and with the given that one does not grade a book just by the cover or a scanned picture. This is not a book that shows up much in higher than a VG anywhere. The point here is that you have to do your homework when buying the vintage Batman books. If you are buying for investment then go for the books that seldom show up for sale, if you can find them. I could go on, for example do you collect Comic Cavalcade? Well finding certain issues in the run can be very difficult in any grade and here the focus is on #19. None were listed in July and none are listed now and one low grade copy last showed up several months ago. With a new Wonder Woman movie coming in 2017, is this a sleeper title for collectors to consider investing in? Only time and collector interest will tell and that is really still the answer today to when or if the multi-media world beyond comics will continue to influence sales and prices

I said in July that I did not make a laundry list of the books that I have been watching to put into my CBM report and I am not doing that now either because you have to do it for yourself with the books you are interested in. Experienced collectors know all this already and as I said then and I am repeating now this is all for the new or relatively new collector looking for guidance who might not know where to start. Also in both reports I only used eBay and show attendance as markers to keep it relatively simple. Other sources like auction house results and market tracking services such as GPA can be used as well. I try to stress in every report that the major shows will draw a much more diverse group of attendees who will have a far more diverse collecting interest and this will affect what sellers bring (if they have the books) for sale but it is different in local regional shows. Every part of the country (and indeed the world) has a different take on what sells there and one should always keep in mind that regionalism can dictate what is or is not available and or generating interest by collectors. Go back and look at market reports in the Guide over the years and see how a report from one part of the country will totally contradict a report from another part when talking about the same issues, titles or genres or collector interest. What is hot in one place may not necessarily be so in another. Scarcity in one area might not be the same in another. So when you are looking to add to your collection, take your time, do your homework. First and foremost decide what you are interested in to read and collect. Compare prices both for different grades and within the same grades. Find out what is really hot and really is not and most importantly buy what you like even if you are doing it for investment too and don't forget to read some. There are plenty of reprints out there both in print and online that can be used instead of trying to read a high grade purchase. After all ultimately the whole idea of comics is to have fun and to enjoy them. See you in 2018.

ASHLEY COTTER-CAIRNS & SEAN GOODRICH SELLMYCOMICBOOKS.COM

Hello comic collectors, investors and fellow professionals! It's an honor for Sean and me to be asked to become Overstreet advisors for the first time. As we're new to market reports, a very brief background. I began SellMyComicBooks.com in October 2011 after a decade of eBay trading left me frustrated by the difficulties of sourcing inventory. Sean, who was formerly an auction co-ordinator at ComicLink, joined me as a full-time partner in September 2015. We now have offices in Maine and Montreal.

In late 2015, we unearthed new-to-market Golden Age keys found in Quebec, Canada. They were all low-grade copies formerly bound into a volume (most had binding tape on their edges and some, including Action Comics #13, were trimmed), and included a run of Action from #2, early Spectre Adventure, and an incomplete All-American #16. The highlight was Action Comics #7 CGC 2.0, which sold for $71,000 at Comiclink in February. Not a bad way to begin a year!

I want to use this report to give some insights into trending books. I think you'll get more from a report with useful data, and maybe a few more books to add to your watch list.

Ten Books to Watch in 2017:

NYX #3: First X-23. The new hottest Modern book. Still not the most expensive (won't be challenging Walking Dead #1 or Batman Adventures #12 on price – yet). By the time you read this, it will be a four-figure book in CGC 9.8.

Action Comics #242: 1st Brainiac. Much scarcer than #252 (1st Supergirl), almost always missing from collections, even those which contain #252. An untapped villain movie-wise. A no-brainer (see what I did there?) long-term hold.

Marvel Premiere #15: 1st Iron Fist. Netflix has done wonders for many of the Marvel characters. This is the latest key issue to get a boost. All grades above 9.0 are red-hot. Breached the $5k barrier in 9.8.

Incredible Hulk #1: 1st Hulk. I've been tipping this book for years now. It's always been under-valued. Has doubled in value in many grades since 2014 and shows no signs of slowing down, largely thanks to Hulk's starring role in most Avengers-related MCU movies. Entry level is now north of $3,500 for a ragged CGC 0.5!

Wonder Woman #98: New origin story begins. If you're priced out of mega-keys like All Star #8, Sensation #1, and Wonder Woman #1, then this is the book for you. Most books from this run are pretty quiet, but you won't find a copy of #98 in a CGC holder for less than $500, and VG examples are well over $2k now.

Linda Carter, Student Nurse #1: 1st true appearance of Linda Carter, aka Night Nurse. While Night Nurse #1 (undoubtedly a cooler book!) is getting all the glory of Linda's Netflix appearances, this overlooked key from 1961 should be on your want list. Unfortunately, it's extremely rare – perhaps the rarest 1960s key issue? There are only 13 copies certified by CGC.

Teenage Mutant Ninja Turtles #1: 1st Turtles. The book to own from the 1980s. A CGC 9.8 broke the $25,000 barrier in April 2016. Strong sales in all grades show the importance of this book, and Turtles movies are still being made.

Amazing Spider-Man #46: 1st Shocker. Hotly fancied to be among the next big-screen Spidey villains in Spider-Man: Homecoming. We have seen strong sales of raw examples, including 6.5 for $112 and 5.5 for $90 — both higher than GP averages at the time of sale.

Ms. Marvel #1 (1977): 1st solo book. This one has followed an interesting trajectory. Smoking hot a couple of years ago, when it touched a record high of $2,200 in CGC 9.8, it cooled off (plenty of supply in the market), but has started to pick up again in high grades. Marvel Super-Heroes #13 is much harder to find in high grade and worth much more, but you'll have a better chance of acquiring this book.

Showcase #6: 1st Challengers of the Unknown. Sean's tip for a future movie treatment, and seldom offered. Vastly under-priced. When it does come to market, tends to under-perform other books from this run. I love Showcase: I think there are a dozen or more books from this title that are solid long-term bets, aside from #4 and #22. Prices on many Showcase issues are setting records, and there is more to come for sure.

No Walking Dead issues above?! This title continues to sell strongly, raw or certified, as more and more seasons of the TV series are signed.

Notable Sales in 2016: All Star Comics #35 CGC 7.5, $493, Amazing Fantasy #15 CGC 1.5 UK edition, $3,900, Amazing Spider-Man #2 CGC 3.5, $795, Amazing Spider-Man #50 CGC 7.5, $585, Batman #49 CGC 1.8, $450, Batman #227 CGC 8.0, $390, Batman Adventures #12 CGC 6.5, $223, Captain America Comics #29 CGC 2.5, $546, Crime Does Not Pay #33 CGC 7.0, $1,103, Flash #139 CGC 8.0, $1,005, Incredible Hulk #181 CGC 9.0 qualified, missing MVS, $1,025, Marvel Graphic Novel #4 CGC 9.8, $671, Marvel Premiere #15 CGC 9.2, $635, Our Army at War #81 CGC 7.0, $2,027, Showcase #6 CGC 5.0, $900, Showcase #30 CGC 6.5, $1,212, Star-Spangled War Stories #84 CGC 6.5, $1,301 (record sale in any grade,) Star-Spangled War Stories #89 CGC 6.0, $386 (Mademoiselle Marie cover; also record sale in any grade,) Star Wars #3 CGC 7.0 35c price variant, $750, Tales of Suspense #39 CGC 5.5 UK edition, $3,700, Uncanny X-Men #266, CGC 9.8 SS Stan Lee, $447 and X-Men #1 CGC 1.8, $1,186.

JESSE JAMES CRISCIONE JESSE JAMES COMICS

In 2016, we saw a year that was about Social impact. Social Media owned the whole year. More news came from media sources, rather than the publishers' web pages. This opened the door for a large amount of speculators, that we hadn't seen since the '90s. This also allowed smaller publishers to be more relevant, almost from their first launch date.

We saw creators impact their book sales at the highest levels. Harley Quinn and Deadpool were pushed by Jimmy Palmiotti and Rob Liefeld not because they banged out the product to the fans. It was because they showed they cared everyday on Facebook and Twitter about their fans in more of a personal way. A vast amount of creators continue to be more open to discuss their lives and make their fans part of it, than we have ever seen in the past.

Movie impact this year to the local comic book store was next to nothing. There was a small impact on opening days and then dropping off by the end of the opening weekend. The movie companies continue to not show any interest in teaming up with the stores on their movies. The stores in return have started dropping their purchases related to upcoming movies almost in half or no increase in orders at all. This is a major fail, until the movie industry opens their coffers to the LCS, the divide will become wider over time. Deadpool, Harley Quinn and TV's Walking Dead being the exceptions.

Wholesale numbers versus real sales numbers seemed to become a major issue in 2016. Less stores started relying on warehouse orders and started to rely on in store sales to determine what they were going to carry. This allowed the publishers, not in the big three, to not only increase their sales numbers but get their brand out there more. We also found that wholesale numbers were inflating actual sales and started to create a decline in sales for the big two as the year came to close.

Millennials, as talked about in 2015, have really helped the industry in bringing out more P/C characters and have filled in dead genres with a new life and strong hope for the future. We saw titles like Invader Zim, Rick and Morty, Bob's Burgers, and Power Rangers take the market by storm. This group continues to want to explore the culture of comics as well. Back issues continue to grow in this age bracket at a fast pace.

Online sales for us increased over 341% in 2016. "Buy online then pick up at the store" has increased and continues to evolve in a very promising way. Service has out weighted lowest price and continues to make sellers work harder for every sale. Dealers have dropped in big numbers online in 2016. The remaining seem to be very strong, business-minded and committed owners.

We've seen the decline of comic book conventions as there are just too many conventions out there. Publishers are being split in every direction. Creators are getting burnt out by mid season. Retailers are at the brink of overload. There were more bad cons in 2016 than 2015. In fact it wasn't even close. In 2017 expect a lot of cons to close up or not even announce they are doing another year. However, expect new cons to start with more customer orientated themes and genres in the future. Dealers, publishers and creators have had lackluster events all year. Those that had a great year offer the best service and more relevant product than ever. Until fake product can be eliminated from cons this will continue to happen. Con owners need to start vetting vendors and not just sell anybody a table.

In 5 years we have done over 140 store exclusives. In 2016 we dropped most our projects. There are just too many stores that are doing these nowadays. Now, Variants, as well, are out of control. Publishers like Marvel that have set Variant quota's so high, they are just killing the retailer. The market has really become over saturated with variants and most likely a back lass will occur in 2017 with a lot of retailers just saying "NO".

Finally, the overall customer has changed, spending more time in the store. They are looking to be pampered and inspired to buy more books. Just opening up your doors doesn't work anymore. Store owners are now either rewarding customers with point programs or other gimmicks to get one more sale.

Overall, 2017 looks strong for the LCS, but only for those that will fight for every sale, and those who educate, inform and inspire customers to support their store and the comic book industry. But more importantly, it will be strong for those who expand their brand and maintain the tradition of our industry on the front lines.

BROCK DICKINSON COLLECTOR

Once again, let me begin by thanking the folks at Overstreet for the opportunity to share my Market Report with the broader community. As always, my report will (primarily) focus on comics from the late Bronze Age to the present. While the Golden and Silver Age books get the biggest share of press – and often the biggest dollars – it's the more modern eras of our hobby that have the biggest number of collectors.

Impacts of the Current Release Market: A lot of the activity in the Bronze, Copper and Modern eras of comic collecting is driven by what's actually going on today. What new issues are doing well on the shelf, and how is that translating into demand for back issues? What movies or TV shows are driving interest in specific characters? What artist or writer is getting hot, with their past work being more frequently sought out?

Over the course of 2016, one of the biggest surprises has been the hugely successful launch of the DC Rebirth line, which reportedly propelled DC's market share past Marvel's for the first time in many years. As the year progressed, interest seemed to be rising in DC's comics, while Marvel was seen to be struggling, caught between the need to identify new markets and the demands of its traditional audiences. And while a Market Report is not necessarily a place for exploring the impact of new issue releases, it's clear that DC's success with Rebirth had an impact on the back issue market.

From a short-term perspective, a number of Rebirth releases were rapid sellouts, and quickly commanded a premium on the back market. By year's end, most of these prices had retreated, but rising interest in DC's new titles soon began to spill over into affordable runs of longstanding DC characters. Titles like Justice League of America, Flash, New Teen Titans and Supergirl all benefited from renewed interest, particularly with regard to Copper Age and early modern issues. This trend was less pronounced with Marvel books, though stalwarts like Amazing Spider-Man continued to do well, and a few titles (including New Mutants) seemed to pick up some steam through the year.

There may be a couple of reasons for this activity. With both Marvel and DC engaged in frequent reboots and renumberings of key titles, collectors are becoming less conditioned to focus on a particular series, and more open to buying solid stories from any era. Secondly, with new comics often cover-priced at $4 or $5 each, many back issues are starting to look like bargains. This can be particularly attractive with Copper Age books, which are about 30 years old at this point, and can seem to many current collectors to be books out of ancient history.

Marvel and DC are not the only modern publishers, of course. Image seemed to rebound a bit in interest this year. After the massive hits and rising prices of titles including Walking Dead, Chew and Saga, many Image titles were heavily speculated upon, with the result that supply often outweighed long-term demand, and back market prices never rose. Over the past year, this hyper-speculation seems to have corrected itself, with the result that a few surprise hits from Image did start to rise in the market. Key examples here include Deadly Class (#1 at $20), Monstress (#1 at $40) and Seven to Eternity (#1 at $40).

Other, smaller publishers also continued to produce breakout hits from time to time. The rise of self-publishing tools and online funding technologies and platforms such as Kickstarter has opened doors to many new projects. Some catch on with a wider audience, and the miniscule supplies of early issues are unable to meet market demand. The poster child for this in 2016 was Henchgirl from Scout Comics (#1 at $60, #2 at $40), though somewhat more mainstream titles including Eric Powell's Hillbilly and BOOM's Lumberjanes also rode this wave.

Television and Movie Impacts: For the past few years, movies have been a key driver of the back issue market in the Bronze, Copper and Modern eras. Certainly, 2016 began by following this path – excitement was high for films including Captain America: Civil War, Batman v Superman, and Suicide Squad. Each of these drove back issue prices early in the year, impacting character appearances by key figures including Black Panther, Doomsday and Deathstroke. However, prices generally retreated rapidly after the release of the movies, and releases later in the year (such as Marvel's Dr. Strange) had minimal back issue impacts. Looking forward, the hype around back issues linked to Guardians of the Galaxy 2 is much more muted than the excitement was before the first film came out.

This is not to say that all movie-related increases are gone, as some books did show significant price jumps in 2016 because of film connections. These include New Gods #7 (1st appearance of Steppenwolf at $200), Superman's Pal Jimmy Olsen #134 (1st appearance of Darkseid at $800) and the "Old Man Logan" run of Wolverine Vol. 3 (#66 to 72, with individual issues in the $20-$50 range). It seems, however, that while movies can still have an impact on back issue prices, the heady days of the massive price jumps we saw for characters like Star-Lord, Rocket Raccoon and Groot may be behind us.

While the impact of movies may have retreated, the impact of television production seems to be rising. Both Marvel and DC had numerous TV series on air in 2016, and in most cases, this led to a steady increase in back issue attention for the characters involved. Overall, the television boost to back issue prices was often smaller than we have been used to from movie-related bumps, but it appears to be more sustained as well. DC characters benefiting from this increased interest in 2016 included Supergirl, Flash, and some of the Vertigo properties such as Preacher. Over at Marvel, there was increased interest in Jessica Jones, Luke Cage (Power Man), Iron Fist and the Punisher. The Punisher's appearance on the Daredevil TV series from Netflix seemed to have a particularly strong impact on back issues, perhaps because Punisher prices have been low for a prolonged period of time.

Historically, The Walking Dead TV series has been a primary driver of the back issue comic market. However, over the past season or two, viewership appears to have declined, and while the launch of each new season still seems to spur interest in Walking Dead back issues, the bump was noticeably smaller this year. While Walking Dead prices certainly aren't falling, they are also not seeing the aggressive increases of previous years. It will be important to watch this trend closely, as some prices may be due for a correction in coming years.

Key Issues: One of the stories that's emerging from the hobby is about the change from "run collectors" who focused on certain titles, to "key issue" collectors, who speculate on highly desirable single issues featuring first appearances or some other element of significance. While this may be an over-simplified take on things, there's no question that the hottest element of the market is key issues.

The 2016 marketplace seemed to be particularly driven by the first appearances of secondary characters and concepts, perhaps because keys related to first-tier characters have already taken such substantial jumps in recent years. Issues like Marvel Team-Up #65 (1st U.S. appearance of Captain Britain) and #95 (1st appearance of Mockingbird), and Spectacular Spider-Man #64 (1st appearance of Cloak and Dagger) received significant attention. To some degree, this process appeared to be spilling backward into the Silver Age, as well. The first appearances of the Teen Titans in The Brave and the Bold #54 and #60, and even the first appearance of the modern Blue Beetle in Captain Atom #83, for example, are substantially underpriced in the Guide, as demand outpaces supply.

This search for new keys has also begun to lead many collectors farther afield, and outside of the traditional focus on collecting superheroes. Early appearances of war-related characters are in high demand, but the first appearances of Archie-related characters have seen particularly substantial price increases. Past readers of my Market Reports will know that I've been pointing out the rising values of early Cheryl Blossom appearances for a number of years, but there was huge interest this year in a host of other first appearances, including Archie's Pals & Gals #23 (1st appearance of Josie) and Josie #45 (1st appearance of Josie and the Pussycats). On the Cheryl Blossom issues, prices seem to have stabilized for her first two or three appearances, but as other early stories come to light, there are issues that continue to increase. One example this past year has been Everything's Archie #104, which has jumped into the $60 range.

One interesting trend emerging from the focus on keys is the rise in popularity of the traditionally under-collected anthology and try-out titles. Silver Age collectors have long seen DC's Showcase comics as a treasure trove of first appearances, but the Bronze and Copper equivalents of Showcase were often regarded as second-tier titles. This isn't the case any more, and the combination of first appearances in "under-collected" quantities is causing high levels of interest in titles including Marvel Premiere, Marvel Spotlight (volumes 1 and 2), Marvel Super-Heroes (volumes 1 and 2), and Strange Tales. This has particularly affected Marvel books, but DCs are starting to follow, led by the 1970s revival of Showcase (Power Girl issues in particular) and Strange Adventures (especially Deadman issues). The trend is even starting to generate renewed interest in the Marvel Graphic Novel series, and in many of the over-sized treasury editions.

Copper Age Keys: The Copper Age continues to emerge as a market force, with interest in and knowledge about the period growing every year. Over the past few years and Market Reports, I've launched a new "crowd-sourced" list of the Top 50 Copper Age Keys. This has developed (and argued!) with the many knowledgeable members of the Copper Age Forum on the CGC Collector's Society message boards. As always, I provide some "editorial influence" to whittle things down to a final list. Based on this year's discussions, the Top 50 Copper Keys for 2016 include the following books:

- * Amazing Spider-Man #238, #252, #298, #300, #361
- * Archie's Girls Betty and Veronica #320
- * Batman #357, #404, #428
- * Batman: The Dark Knight Returns #1
- * Batman: The Killing Joke
- * Bone #1
- * Caliber Presents #1
- * Crisis on Infinite Earths #7
- * Daredevil #181
- * DC Comics Presents #47
- * G.I. Joe: A Real American Hero #1
- * Gobbledygook #1
- * Harbinger #1
- * Incredible Hulk #271, #340
- * Iron Man #282
- * Legends #3
- * Macross #1
- * Marvel Graphic Novel #4
- * Marvel Super Heroes Secret Wars #8
- * Miracleman #15
- * New Mutants #87, #98

- * Omega Men #3
- * Punisher (limited series) #1
- * Sandman #1, #8
- * Silver Surfer #44
- * Spawn #1
- * Spectacular Spider-Man #64
- * Superman #75
- * Swamp Thing #21, #37
- * Tales of the New Teen Titans #44
- * Thor #337
- * Tick Special Edition #1
- * Transformers #1
- * Teenage Mutant Ninja Turtles #1
- * Uncanny X-Men #266
- * Warrior (UK Magazine) #1
- * Watchmen #1
- * Wolverine (limited series) #1
- * X-Factor #6

New entries this year include Gobbleydygook #1 (1st appearance of the Teenage Mutant Ninja Turtles), Punisher #1, and Silver Surfer #44 (1st appearance of the Infinity Gauntlet), as well as the return of Omega Men #3 (1st appearance of Lobo). Pushed off the list were Suicide Squad #1, and a few X-Men and Spider-Man books, as well as indie keys Crow #1, Evil Ernie #1, and Starslayer #2. While these exiting books remain important, they just didn't have as much "heat" this year as in the past.

The Rise (or Return?) of Cover Collectors: In past market reports, I've written about the increasing importance of comic book covers as a driver of value. In some ways, this is a new phenomenon. With the advent of 3rd party grading (from CGC, CBCS and others) and encapsulation, the content of a comic book becomes inaccessible, leaving the cover image as the distinguishing feature. This has increased the importance of the cover from a collecting perspective. While some purists may deride this, it is perhaps leading the hobby back to its roots. In the early days of fandom, popular artists (like Schomburg or Baker) and "classic covers" often drove value, and there were "theme cover" collectors who tracked down books with Christmas covers, atomic bomb covers, or infinity covers. Now, this trend seems to be re-emerging.

Themed covers have caught on strong in 2016, with a particular focus on connecting covers (where multiple covers combine to form a single larger image), cover swipes (where a classic comic cover is emulated on a new comic; Amazing Spider-Man #300 was a popular swipe focus this year), and action figure covers (for which the covers are designed to look like a toy action figure hanging on a store shelf).

For all the activity with theme covers, however, it's the rise in desirability – and price – of the works of certain artists that is most noticeable. In the modern market, there is a strong and growing interest in covers produced by artists including J. Scott Campbell, Gabriele Dell'Otto, Frank Cho, Stanley Lau (AKA Artgerm) and Jock, among others. Pushing further back into the Copper and Bronze eras, covers by artists including Neal Adams, Brian Bolland, Michael Kaluta, Jim Steranko, Dave Stevens and Bernie Wrightson can often have a positive impact on prices.

However, the breakout star in this field in 2016 was undoubtedly Adam Hughes. All Hughes-covered books from all eras (he began drawing for small press titles in the 1980s) are in high demand. Given that much of his work had been found on lower circulation titles such as Wonder Woman, Catwoman, Tomb Raider or Zatanna, interest has very rapidly outpaced supply, and prices are jumping through the roof. There is a "top tier" of Hughes covers including Harley Quinn #0, Spider-Gwen #1, and Supergirl and the Legion of Super-Heroes #23 that routinely sell for $300 to $600, and substantially higher when graded and slabbed by a third party. A second tier of books – including Catwoman (2002 series) #51 ($100), #70 ($60) and #74 ($50), Wonder Woman #184 ($100), and Zatanna #16 ($40) – is coming up behind with rapid price increases.

Hot Characters: In recent years, a continued focus on the core titles of Batman and Amazing Spider-Man, and a rabid interest in appearances of DC's Harley Quinn and Marvel's Deadpool have been key features of the marketplace. In general terms, this remains true, though the trend was less pronounced in 2016. For Deadpool in particular, there seems to have been a slight ebbing in back issue popularity and prices (though his first appearance in New Mutants #98 remains very strong). Overall, these stalwarts remain strong, and many of the market's most desirable issues can be connected to these four characters.

However, there continues to be a rising tide of female-centred books, with back issue prices being pulled up in their wake. Harley Quinn is the obvious leader of the pack, but over the past year there has been growing interest in titles and appearances including Black Widow, Captain Marvel, Ms. Marvel, Power Girl, Psylocke, Wonder Woman, and Zatanna. The breakout character in this area has been X-23, the clone/daughter of Wolverine. Her first appearance in NYX #3 now routinely fetches $400, and all of her appearances have been rising in price this year.

2016 also saw a number of established characters begin to rise in popularity again. Both the Punisher and Lobo were attracting higher levels of interest, for example. It was a number of toy tie-ins that saw the biggest revival in interest, though. This was perhaps led by ROM, the spaceknight character published by Marvel beginning in 1979, and revived in 2016 by IDW. Original Marvel issues were in demand, though a similar revival of the Micronauts spurred more muted back issue activity. However, an announcement by Paramount Pictures early in the year suggested that it would be combining multiple properties from toymaker Hasbro into a single "Hasbroverse" with multiple upcoming films has spurred some interesting back issue activity. The deal would involve Hasbro's uber-popular G.I. Joe and Transformers properties, as well as the aforementioned ROM and Micronauts. However, it was suggested that two other properties, MASK and Visionaries, would also be art of the deal. MASK comics were published by DC, and Visionaries by Marvel, both in the 1980s, and there has been rising speculative interest in these books over the year. Price gains so far have been modest, but these books are generally in short supply, and substantial future increases are possible.

A number of characters from independent publishers were hot this year. This group was led by the Teenage Mutant Ninja Turtles, whose early appearances command some of the highest prices in the Bronze Age market. A late-year announcement regarding a possible Bone movie spurred renewed interest in Bone #1, which surged past $1,000. There was also heightened interest in the early appearances of The Tick, driven in part by plans for a television production. Finally, there was a great deal of activity around specific issues from Valiant Comics. Valiant collectors are among the most loyal and dedicated fans in the hobby, and there seemed to be a growing base of these collectors in 2016. Demand was definitely rising, but there tended to be substantial variation in prices for key books. It will be interesting to see if this consolidates into more activity over the next year or two.

At the Edges: There were a couple of final trends worth noting in 2016. First, and perhaps somewhat morbidly, celebrity deaths appeared to drive the market. Key examples in 2016 included music superstars Prince and David Bowie, whose deaths spurred massive online interest in their comic book appearances including DC's Prince: Alter Ego and Marvel's Labyrinth. Prices took big jumps before falling to more sustainable levels, but the process illustrates the celebrity-obsessed nature of our current culture, and flags the potential for gains on other obscure books in the future.

Finally, the debate continues to rage about the pricing and impact of variant covers in the industry. There are now a number of variant books from the recent past that seem to routinely command prices exceeding $1,000 – and sometimes multiples of that figure. It is certainly impossible for a price guide to accurately reflect all of this highly volatile activity, particularly on issues where only a few hundred copies may exist. There is also a substantial concern in some circles that this collector interest and sales activity is unsustainable in the long run, a problem exacerbated by the secretive printing and distribution practices of most publishers, which makes it difficult to assess actual supply. There is no doubt that there are big dollars at play in this portion of the market, and that substantial price jumps are possible. However, it would also be wise to exercise extreme caution when looking at a portion of the market that is ill-defined, highly volatile, and not yet fully mature. There is a growing consensus among collectors that it may be wiser and safer to direct large dollar purchases towards Gold, Silver or Bronze Age keys, rather than gambling on continued interest in the modern variant market.

In Conclusion: That's it for 2016... I hope that you've found some interesting tidbits in the mix of ideas in my report, and – as always – I love getting feedback and suggestions for the future! Thanks as well to all the other Overstreet Advisors for their contributions... Year after year, the Market Reports remain one of my favourite sections of the Guide!

GARY DOLGOFF

GARY DOLGOFF COMICS

“Grass roots” collecting is still in! There has been much talk lately in the industry about investing in comics. While that is always a worthy thing, it is the backbone of the comics industry, the collectors, who enjoy the books and collect the books! There are quite a number of them. As a result, I have been happier than ever that I have my inventory/collection of 800,000+ comics and magazines that feed and fuel the collectors' buying hearts with “whatever they want.”

If someone wants a run of Fantastic Four, Amazing Spider-Man, Flash, Justice League, or whatever (whether 1960s, 1970s, or 1980s through 2000s) or more obscure titles such as Gasp! (Charlton), Peacemaker (also Charlton), or Winnie The Pooh (Gold Key), I like to be able to supply these title affectionados with whatever they collect. That's why I do pride myself on purchasing collections of all kinds in all kinds of conditions (poor to mint, and everything in between.) And I'm also happy that I have a quite capable staff that knows how to grade “the GDC way” so that customers are consistently pleased.

I've also been paying increasing amounts and percentages for those very popular keys, and more expensive books. Last year for instance, I paid close to retail for two Amazing Fantasy #15's in CGC 5.0 and CGC 7.0 copies of Brave and the Bold #28, Amazing Spider-Man #1 and Fantastic Four #1. The seller was happy enough. He got 85% of Guide due to the popularity of those keys, and those “nice enough” grades, which meant he didn't have to deal with auctioneers' commissions, waiting times, and whatever “ups and downs” of the market that it might experience on a given week.

I've also been lucky enough to get in some original art in the last few months. I've found pages of Jack Kirby Silver and Bronze Age Fantastic Four, Jimmy Olsen, Thor, as well as Juliet Jones and Winnie Winkle daily and Sunday comic strip art. My favorite piece of the year was an early original Krazy Kat daily.

Many of the collections I get in each year contain a goodly amount of Silver and Bronze comics. The Bronze Age, by itself, has been worthy of increased attention, more and more as 1970s comics in general sell well enough (some of them sell great!) and the number of Bronze keys have ever been on the increase over the last couple of years or so.

Collection Report

Hartford, Connecticut area collection: The fellow simply called me up and offered me this core collection. It contained a restored Captain America #1, a low-grade, somewhat brittle Batman #1, Silver Streak #6 (the premiere app. of The Claw!), Sub-Mariner #1 (1941, original series), plus a couple dozen exciting Timely comics. He also had a lower-grade restored Amazing Fantasy #15, Fantastic Four

#1, Amazing Spider-Man #1 and a number of other early Marvel keys. Additionally, the collection contained a bunch of 1960s Marvel & DC comics. What made the seller happiest is that (of course) I let him know when any of the above comics was worth over Guide. I also kept most of the Timely issues for myself, which made me able to pay somewhat more for them. I love those books! When I bought the books, he said (no kidding) that I paid him, "Better than he expected."

The Central NJ Collection: This fellow had a small core group of a few expensive keys including Amazing Fantasy #15's in CGC 5.0 and CGC 7.0 copies of Brave and the Bold #28, Amazing Spider-Man #1 and Fantastic Four #1. So, for this group, I paid him 85% of value (they were worth $125,000 retail and I paid him $105,000 for those. Thus, he got about what he would get on auction, or better because auction results can and do vary, depending upon who's paying attention that week or during the auction time-period.

For the rest of his books (Silver Age consisting of everything from Amazing Spider-Man and Fantastic Four, to Justice League and Jimmy Olsen) I paid him close to half-Guide, with me and my able assistants grading them (as a lot of comics are, frankly, not worth CGC-ing, as they are either not valuable enough to warrant the CGC fees, or they can be books that if CGC'ed, may then sell for a decent deal under Guide. My calculation was based on paying somewhat over half-Guide for the Amazing Spider-Man and Fantastic Four issues and less than half-Guide for the JLAs and Jimmy Olsens, which I find must be discounted most of the time to move them out and make way for the next arrivals.

Dracut, MA $71,000 Marvel Collection: So, I went with my able assistant Patrick and we spent the better part of 2 days reviewing his collection of 28,000 comics. Much of the quantity of the deal was 1980s to 2000s. Many of my fellow dealers may not have the space, "people-power" or patience to deal with these newer books. I, however, put them up as runs, usually at 50 cents to a dollar a comic. Plus, there are the highlight books which we take into account.

However, he had "one, to a few of each" of most of the '60s & '70s Marvels. Unfortunately, he was missing the early '60s #1s, and some of the really early issues of Fantastic Four, Amazing Spider-Man, etc., with the notable exceptions of Amazing Fantasy #15, Amazing Spider-Man #1, and Fantastic Four #1, all three being COVERLESS! Otherwise, they were nice. He often had one really nice copy, one in Good to Very Good shape, and then one low-grade copy. Yes, he truly read and also collected, but his other half proclaimed, "It is time for the comics to go." I gave him a price that was fair and bought the books. I must say I really enjoyed getting the collection, as I already have customers for all books in all grades.

In addition to these larger value deals, we happily buy a number of smaller ones, including some Golden Age purchases. We bought a small Golden Age collection that was a study in contrasts grade-wise. There were some mid-1940s Batman issues in sharp shape, and then other Golden Age such as Master #11, Punch #1, some 1940s Shadow Comics, etc. that were in Fair to Poor shape.

We also bought a run of Mad comics and magazines. Issues #1 through 23 were comic books, then with #24, they switched to magazine format. Although they don't "fly" from our boxes, we like having them and whatever else comes our way.

We also bought a nice E.C. Collection (Weird Fantasy/Science, Vault of Horror, Crime Suspense, etc. Most of the books were in Fair to Very Good shape, which is fine by me. E.C.s often come tattered, between the paper quality of them, and the fact that we all love to read them, plus ogle at the art, it's a small wonder.

Golden Age: As the years fly by, these oldies are still worth having, and most Superhero Golden Age comics sell quite well. Timelys are in demand (who can discount the coolness of these awesome prototype Marvels and more?) I myself collect them, and now proudly have over 20 different 1940s Captain America issues, including #1. I also have a brilliant 1941 Sub-Mariner #1. Though it's only VG or so, the yellow background cover dazzles! Also I am happy to own a couple of early 1940s Mystic Comics with the Destroyer and three issues of U.S.A. with Captain America (great Schomburg covers!)

U.S.A. Comics with Captain America and great Schomburg covers are a pleasure to own. (#10 shown)

DCs sell well in general. Some of my favorites are the early Action and Detective Comics, many of which are worth wayyy- over Guide. Wonder Woman comics sell well, and I have a great collection of those. Of note, issue #7 with the "Wonder Woman for President" cover typically goes for around 5x Guide. Some of the best DC Golden Age sellers are the "big logo" earlier issues, especially Detective, Action, and More Fun. Very "majestic" books, indeed!

With Fawcett comics (Captain Marvel, etc.) many of my fellow comic dealers largely discount the "coolness" of these books. Although most of them don't fly off the shelves like their Timely and DC counterparts, I say that they are worth having. Captain Marvel is a mainstay character. Of this, there is no doubt. Those Master Comics with the great Mac Raboy covers are a joy to own, and are worth over-Guide.

Some Disneys have been still picking up in sales. From other Golden Age companies, later 1930s and early 1940s superhero issue often go for over Guide, even in low, low grade. Pre-Code Horror comics sell well, and some of those truly horrific covers can go well over Guide. E.C. Horror (Haunt of Fear, Tales From The Crypt, Vault of Horror, and Crime Suspense) typically sell for 20% over Guide. Science Fiction issues go for Guide. Two Fisted Tales and Frontline Combat go for Guide slowly. To sell them better, many of them sell for a bit under Guide.

Silver Age (later 1950s; 1960s-1971): Marvels, these “core” comics, are in general, great sellers, and show no signs of slacking off. I find myself paying premium for Marvel collections in ALL grades. The early 1960s #1s and first appearances (Amazing Spider-Man #1, FF #1, DD #1, JIM #83, TOS #39, TTA #27; ST #110, Incredible Hulk #1 and of course, the leader of the pack, Amazing Fantasy #15) mostly go for over Guide, in all grades. So, I find myself paying accordingly. I don’t need much markup for these “best of show” babies.

The 1968 #1s (especially Iron Man’s first issue) also go for over Guide, for the most part. More recently, the premiere issue of Dr. Strange (#169) has gone up quite a bit due to that great movie of his. For 1964 to 1971 Marvels, I get Guide for them in general, or very close (again, in all grades.)

The most commanding Silver Age DC is Showcase #4. I find myself getting well over Guide for this book, while paying 70-80% of value on it. Brave and the Bold #28 (1st app. JLA) is another Silver Age DC that seems to have a bright future in all grades, especially 5.0 and better, I would say.

Batman sells great and there are now a number of special issues that are worth well over-Guide. I sold a Batman #232 (1st Ra’s al Ghul) in CGC 9.4 for $990. Batman #181, 227, and 251 are three other “well over-Guide” issues. Flash and Green Lantern sell okay to solidly at around Guide, especially those great Green Lantern/Green Arrow #76-89 issues. What great stories & art. Silver Age Superman titles sell slowly, and to move them at all, I charge 70-80% of Guide. I like having them to make up sets when needed, but “they don’t exactly fly.”

I have been having my crew put together a number of non-DC/non-Marvel runs lately (everything from Thunder Agents and Captain Atom, to Donald Duck and Herbie). I find that there is a market for these runs. They don’t fly, but they walk, which is why I enjoy getting them in. The more, the merrier.

Bronze Age (1970’s-’81) 20-cents to 50-cents cover price: Comics from this era have taken a place in the comics market as “significant contenders” and are “on fire.” It seems funny that I have over 100,000 comics from this era (some I’ve owned for decades) and finally, at long last, the books are being scooped up with appreciation.

A number of Bronze Age books that are known as movie tie-ins have been getting, in some cases, amazing prices, especially in high grades. Shazam #1 CGC 9.6 $175, Nova #1 CGC 9.6 $150 & up, and Ms. Marvel #1 CGC 9.6 $150 & up. Hero For Hire #1 sells for hundreds of dollars, in 3.0 to 5.0. Luke Cage is at last getting the recognition that he deserves. Even issue #48 (the 1st with Iron Fist, who remained with Cage for the rest of the series) in 9.6 is selling repeatedly for $190, and in 9.8 is fetching $590 a few times. There is one thing that I must caution those who own these comics and aspire to receive great values for their collections. The values of most copies of these issues are worth a fraction of these sums unless they are truly a worthy 9.4 or better. As soon as they have a couple of flaws, they are not uniquely “sharp.” How many times does one hear a hopeful seller say, “I saw it online for ---?”

Amazing Spider-Man (especially #’s 101 through 150) and X-Men up to #143, sell great for me at Guide for the non-special issues, and over Guide for the special ones. Incredible Hulk #181 (1st app. of Wolverine) continues to soar in value, even though they are not especially rare. Amazing Spider-Man #129 (1st app Punisher) is continuing its upward trend. I’ve kept several nicer copies for myself, as an investment. Hero For Hire (Luke Cage) #1 sells for hundreds of dollars or more in CGC 3.0 and above. I sold X-Men #101 (1st app. Phoenix) in CGC 9.8, for $1500! Yes, you read that right... 1500 bucks!

Most titles that began in the 1970s (Ms. Marvel, Man-Thing, Nova, Peter Parker Spectacular Spider-Man, etc.) sell moderately well, with the #1s of all those titles selling real well. What I like doing best, when possible, is selling these 1970s series as “Sets for sale.” They are mostly shorter-run sets and affordable for a wider range of potential buyers.

As with the 1960s, the best DC sellers by far are the Batman comics, especially the issues from #251 and earlier! A few Bronze DCs command premium prices over Guide such as Shazam #1- but also (even moreso) Shazam #28, the 1st 1970s app. of Black Adam.

Most Bronze DCs don’t sell nearly as well as their Marvel Comics brethren, but they do okay. The 1st ten issues of Swamp Thing by Wrightson do well, as do Bronze Age Detective Comics.

Modern Comics (later 1980s through the 2000s): I have more appreciation for comics from this era than I used to. I sell sets/runs of Modern-era comics mostly at 55 to 90 cents per issue, with varying success. I of course charge more, and pay more, for better material from this era, such as Amazing Spider-Man (especially the McFarlane issues, #298-328), and for stuff such as earlier Wolverine, Suicide Squad, Swamp Thing #20-40 Dark Knight #1-4, and better X-Men of the period. I like to buy boxes of runs from the Modern era because of our Sets for Sale, which we do quite a bit. And there are quite a few “enhanced value” comics from this era, especially if they’re in sharp shape.

Some of the primary examples are Batman Adventures #12 (1st app. Harley Quinn) 9.8 issues sell close to $200, New Mutants #98 (a CGC 9.8 can sell for $750 and up), Amazing Spider-Man #300 (sells for $100 to many hundreds, in most grades), Swamp Thing #37 (1st app. Hellblazer), MSH Secret Wars #8 (1st black Spidey costume) and much more. When I look at a collection, I always enjoy when these books are present (in singles, or in multiples.)

Original Art: I buy it whenever I’m offered collections of it (or even, individual pieces) for anything resembling a decent price. Art is truly the “Wild West” of our industry pricewise. Some stuff goes up all the time, some stuff doesn't.

So I say to all, keep on enjoying our hobby, and "to all, a good night (and day)."

KEN DYBER CLOUD 9 COMICS

Hello friends, readers and collectors. I'm co-owner and founder of Cloud 9 Comics. Cloud 9 Comics has a brick & mortar store in Portland, OR which is open 7 days a week from 11am – 7pm, a website (www.cloudninecomics.com) with thousands of vintage comics for sale, an eBay store (cloudninecomics.com), as well as a presence at some of the conventions around the country. We sell Golden – Copper Age comic back issues, specializing in key issues/1st appearances, as well as the occasional slab or two (although most of our sales are raw comics).

The conventions we did in 2016 were: San Diego, Portland (Wizard & Rose City), Emerald City, Denver, New York, Tacoma, Southern California, and Baltimore. Our two staff members at the store both entered their 2nd year with the company, so a big thank you to both Moises Rios & Scott Roller.

Convention sales this year were down across the entire board for us, other than Denver, which was slightly up from the previous year with a couple being close to flat. San Diego, Portland's Wizard show, Emerald City and NY were all considerably down from the previous year sales wise. This year in particular, I thought the overall customer foot traffic at San Diego and Emerald City were considerably down from last year. I remember vividly Saturday afternoon at the Seattle Emerald show seeing hardly any people on the convention floor. It was only around 3 years ago, that this show was so crowded on Saturday afternoon, that it was hard to go to the bathroom. Yet... this show is supposedly Sold Out!? So, where are the people? I can only guess that they are off playing games, or doing yoga, or signing up to be in the armed services!? I'm not at all being "That jaded grumpy comic book guy" here either. The entire convention show floor on Saturday afternoon for the toy dealers, comic dealers, t-shirt folks, disco ball racecar drivers, etc... No people, yet they were Sold Out?? Many of us convention dealers have stated repeatedly how conventions are becoming less about comic books, but this once great show (my 2nd favorite after San Diego), seems to have lost its way (Funny that Reed coincidentally took it over last year).

Sure, it could be coincidence, or just our poor luck, as things do go in cycles, but last year seemed quite off for us at conventions. At one point I had for sale 3 Amazing Fantasy #15's, a CBCS 1.0, CGC 4.0 & CGC 5.5 at several of the major conventions, and didn't sell one of them. My prices were not that aggressive, really, within market via comparable previous sales, yet there was little to no interest, other than "that guy" who just wanted to hold it. Sorry but, why would I let a complete stranger hold a $20K comic book where they have no intentions whatsoever in not only purchasing it, but purchasing any comic books I'm selling at my booth. The strangest thing is, that these people then get mad at me for not letting them hold my most expensive comic book in my booth (like it's their right or I'm there to entertain them). Ah yes, there's that older jaded grumpy comic book guy!

Amazing Fantasy #15s a few years ago used to fly out the door as the #1 Silver Age book. Yes, they are not uncommon, they are just awesome, and expensive, but most major dealers usually have access to them or one for sale. I feel the last year or so there's been more of a trend away from Silver Age blue chips into either the much more affordable Bronze Age market, or to more obscure Golden Age books. Books like Amazing Spider-Man #1, TTA #27, TOS #39, Amazing Fantasy #15, Adventure #247, etc... used to fly off my wall at cons at market, where after I did a major convention, I then had this worrisome fear that I had to immediately work on restocking my inventory for the next con, or else I wouldn't have a very good looking set up. This past year, this just wasn't the case, as I saw many of these usual regular sellers being passed up for rare Golden Age classic covers, or Bronze Age speculator type books like Hero For Hire #1, Marvel Premiere #15, Tomb of Dracula #10, etc.

Copper Age key issues like New Teen Titans #2 are also doing quite well, and are almost impossible to keep in stock. Other blue chips like New Mutants #98 and Batman Adventures #12 have also cooled off considerably appreciation wise, as well as demand wise. This though I think was to be expected given their appearances in movies in 2016, so the excitement has only temporarily died off on these 2 books, as both are A-list characters at this point in time.

Running a comic book store is completely different than selling through the web or setting up at conventions. In many aspects, it's like an entirely different business that has nothing to do with convention sales or customer demands. I've had just over a year learning about Diamond and what to order or not order, and what is or is not selling relating to new comics. My suggestion to any new store owner, is do not order heavily on new comics until you have a customer base, and start ordering titles you know will sell off either at in store sales or at conventions, as there are so many titles being published now that it's very difficult to sell any reasonable quantities of anything unless you're the only game in town, have a huge box customer base, or are located in a market like NY or something. Portland, OR has probably more comic book stores per capita than any other city in the U.S. I would imagine. Heck, this past September, Image Comics moved here! So for a city of like a half million (excluding suburbs), we have Image, Dark Horse & Oni publishing, which are #3 and #4 respectively behind Marvel & DC, and I'm not sure where Oni fits in, but I know they're killing it with Rick & Morty, so I'm guessing they're top 10. We also have a ton of creators that live here, so if you like comics, and want to live somewhere where it seems there are comics everywhere, this is the place. For a mid-sized market, we also have 2 successful weekend shows (Wizard's in Feb. & Rose City in Sept.), and the Frankenstein Comic Book swap, which is a small 1 day show that happens around 3 times a year. That is an awesome 1 day “old school” comic book show.

Speaking of “old school” comic book shows, Terry O’Neill’s 1 day Southern Cal. Comic show at the end of January is a must if you live in that area. Many of the best/largest comic dealers set up there as well as many smaller “garage dealers”. No toys, gaming, panels, etc... just comic books with a couple of highlight creators. Also, on a larger scale, I have to say the Baltimore show pretty much kicks ass when it comes to being an old school comic show. Yes, they do have some of the other stuff, but for the most part, it’s comics. Probably the most comic oriented weekend show of that size going, and definitely worth attending for the serious collector/investor at some point, if not this show, then the Chicago Wizard show in August is probably on par with the same amount of great books there, but that show does have quite a bit more other “stuff.”

The new comic market seems to be changing quite a bit just in the little time I’ve been involved with it from a store standpoint. Trade sales are continuing to increase rapidly, with new comic sales slowing down significantly. I’m not sure if there are too many titles, too many bi-monthly titles, too many price increases (most books are $4 now, with quite a few annuals or #1’s at $5!! I mean, $5 for 1 new comic book just seems nuts to me, especially when so little of it is even story. I can read a new comic in a matter of minutes, where ones from the Silver Age take maybe 20 minutes. More people are just waiting for the trade to come out to read it. Publishers (as if any of them read these!)... What the hell is wrong with charging $4.25 for an annual? Why do you have to go right to $5?? Remember when it was $.50, then $.60, then $.65, then $.75, etc? You want to sell more comics, reduce your prices or stop raising them so aggressively.

As for back issue sales of note, I just don’t have the time currently to go as in depth as previous market reports to list tons of GPA, auction or eBay sales figures as I did before having a brick & mortar store. Luke Cage and Iron Fist were two of the hottest characters in 2016, not just their first appearances, but any titles/series. Hero for Hire #1s in 9.2 are going for around $1500 and Marvel Premiere #15s are going for around $500, but I’m sure the later will increase a bunch as we get closer to the new Netflix show. Champions and Defenders (the later in particular) are really selling well (finally!). Avengers sales have really cooled down other than #1,4,57 & 196. Amazing Spider-Man and Batman still outsell all other characters by a ton. Jessica Jones is selling really well too. I almost feel the Netflix shows are being more impactful in sales than the movies these days, as they’re taking characters that are much less known or not at all by the general public, and doing great shows with characters people can get excited about. The only movie I think that really impacted books in value at a major level was Guardians of the Galaxy, but that would only back up more aforementioned point, as most of those characters were barely known by the public. Hum... seems like an equation here... take a less or unknown character and put them in a movie or TV show, and bam, you’ve got a hot book going up in price (often a lot in a short amount of time). Spider-Man reboot - not affecting Amazing Fantasy #15 sales at all, but the 1st appearance of Mantis, well, there’s a book that went from $30 with no demand, to selling for $200-$300 for nice raw copies.

One thing I did want people to think about moving forward is the slabbed 0.5 market. CGC and CBCS grade books that are incomplete at 0.5. Think about that... all books regardless of their overall shape, at 0.5. This makes NO SENSE to me. I saw Metropolis selling a Superman #1 CGC 0.5 at San Diego this year for around $75K, and this was a gorgeous book! I mean, the front cover looked 8.0-ish or better, however it was missing the entire back cover. Superman #1 which came out in 1939 is a 68 page comic cover to cover, yet if it’s missing the back cover, which counts as 2 pages (front & back sides), regardless of what the shape of the rest of the book is in, it’s technically a 0.5. So, you could have a Superman #1 that structurally looks like a GD+ 2.5 and this one they were selling that looked like the nicest copy out there (very tough book in unrestored condition in nice shape), both without their back covers, both with the same grade. Now, would both sell for the same price, no, of course not, however, when one looks at GPA sales for 0.5 incompletes (we’re talking incompletes only here), prices could vary wildly for books like Superman #1. Figuring out what a fair price to charge or pay could be crazy, especially for rare books. I was able to sell a Batman #1 0.5 incomplete no back cover for $19K in 2015, and for most people that was a crazy asking that price, and yet I was able to sell that book very quickly to a collector (who has since purchased a back cover for it). With the crazy prices Batman #1s are going for, that now to me seems like a good buy price even for a dealer to resell, let alone a collector who will keep it for 20 years or more. I also talked with CBCS at San Diego about their view point on 0.5s, and they said that an Amazing Spider-Man #238 which initially came out with a “tattoo”, would grade at their company as a 0.5 if it was missing the tattoo, as they view that comic as incomplete. We’re able to sell copies of that book without tattoos for $50-$100 depending condition regularly, yet a 0.5 in Guide is like $3. I disagree with their stance here, as I do not consider a tattoo part of a comic book, yes, it was presented with the book when it originally issued, but this just doesn’t sit with me. Regardless, the two companies have different viewpoints on this, so, if you have this book, and it's missing the tattoo, you may want to think twice as to which company you submit it to, cause your grade will dramatically be different via this one attribute alone. I'm not trying to find fault with this grading company, as they have every right to their viewpoints, I'm more so trying to get people thinking about the complexities of the 0.5 market, and huge possibilities for gains or losses on these books.

Lastly, as with previous market reports, I provide for you my top 25 Copper/Modern/Renaissance Age books. For those of you that read my market report last year, I think we have long moved beyond the Modern Age of comics, and are now firmly into the Renaissance Age with the triggering event being the issue of Walking Dead #1, which firmly moved people into the non-superhero Marvel/DC controlled world. I hope Overstreet will begin publishing this section in the beginning of their price guide with the Top Golden Age, Silver Age & other top books, and this is by far the largest time period being bought, sold, read and collected, and for whatever reason is not represented in the front of our guide. I've only included variants/other printings of things that have very proven sales history as there are so many of them. If I've neglected any obvious books for this list, please contact me directly so I may make the needed changes. Hopefully Overstreet will begin publishing this section in the front of the Guide sooner than later. Prices are my suggested NM-/9.2 listings for this year's current guide.

1. Gobbledygook #1: $6800
2. Teenage Mutant Ninja Turtles #1: $5000
3. Gobbledygook #2: $4000
4. Miracleman #1 Gold Edition: $1200
5. Walking Dead #1: $1400

25. Cry For Dawn #1 $150
25. Invincible #1 $150

Thanks to everyone who came to our booth at a con, our new store in Portland, as well as our website.

DANIEL ERTLE CBCS - MODERN EXPERT

Another year has passed in which I can reflect on the books that come across my desk working as a modern expert at CBCS. As I said last year, working at CBCS affords me a unique perspective and insight into our hobby. I will utilize that knowledge in helping understand how this year progressed in terms of trends in modern comics. Certain trends this year have not been too surprising, sticking with marking directions that were reported last year. Movies still appear to be the key motivating factor in modern books being sent in for grading. Reboots, like DC's Rebirth, continue to add interest in books as well. As for some Indie titles, they get hot seemingly out of nowhere and stay popular for a short time. That being said, there are a few changes noticed from the previous year. Certain reprints have come into fashion where maybe reprints were looked down upon before. There have also been some books that I didn't think would be dropping off in submission numbers that have in fact started to slow down.

As mentioned, movies are still the biggest factor for increasing the submission of modern books and also keeping the same popular titles going strong. With Batman v Superman released this year, we saw a lot of variants related to the movie come in for grading. Other modern books featuring the world's finest, such as individual issues of Superman/Batman or the second printings of Batman #608 and Superman #204, remained at their normal level of submission and didn't experience the same boost from the movie release. Captain America: Civil War seemed to influence people to send in more Black Panther #1s, while also helping to keep the rate of Winter Soldier related books consistent. With this particular movie release, the Civil War series itself got the biggest push of all.

Suicide Squad also helped keep the rate of that title coming in relatively high, but that may also be attributed to the fact that Harley Quinn is in it. Last year I reported that Harley and Deadpool were the winners of the year. Harley is keeping that going while Deadpool has slowed down quite a bit. The drop off of New Mutants #98 has been a surprise this year with how successful the Deadpool movie was. This is not to say that it is a rare occasion that it comes across my desk. New Mutants #98 is still more popular than most, just not as much as it was in the past. The most recent movie to come out, Doctor Strange, has honestly not made that much of an impact on books being sent in under the Modern tier. As for future movies, the previews can obviously still have an effect on comics being sent in. As I write this, a new trailer for the upcoming Spider-Man movie has dropped and Marvel is rolling out additional trailers and information for the new Guardians of the Galaxy as well. I am not sure how many more Spider-Man books can be sent in, nor can I guess what characters are going to debut in Guardians. However I can be sure that we will start seeing the effects of these upcoming movies soon.

Reboots are something that seem to happen fairly often these days and it can help boost sales for a company and bring in new readers. Both DC and Marvel have recently gone through reboots, Marvel being more of a soft reset than DC's Rebirth. Between these two companies, DC seems to be winning for most submissions surrounding their respective reboots. At the outset of the event, the Rebirth issues themselves were popular in their own rights and we got a wide variety of titles for those few issues. It wasn't until the series proper began did submissions seem to follow their expected trends. Batman and Harley Quinn related issues are leading as the top for books being sent in. Of course Dark Knight III is still a very popular book even though it's not related to the reboot, with Superman and the others following behind. As for Marvel, most issue #1s get sent in but the drop off rates seemed to be much higher. However a trend unique to Marvel are submissions of many random issues being sent in because of their gimmick variants. Things like their Hip Hop variants or 50th anniversary covers, for example, seem to be doing very well. Hopefully I won't have to talk about major companies rebooting next year.

The rest of books that get sent in are in kind of a catch-all category because it's hard to spend a significant amount of time with any one topic. When combined, variants, indie books, and reprints are all things that we see in the office in almost an equal amount to Marvel and DC books. Variants are probably the biggest factor to this, but many times these subjects overlap. For example, Zenescope is an indie publisher but they also have many variants for every convention. These variants are incredibly popular and are sent in for grading frequently. Furthermore, in extreme cases like Dead Pooh/Do You Pooh/Walking Dead Pooh, you have books that are indie, have a staggering amount of variants, and are all mostly reprints. And those books still get sent in at an incredible rate with their schtick being to do cover swipes of famous covers with the Dead Pooh character. Then there are some books that seem to come out of nowhere and get hot fast. These are books like Animosity or Hillbilly, that many people apparently overlooked but were then quick to realize its popularity and smaller print runs. When this happens, we usually get a good couple of months where these books are sent in frequently and then drop off after that.

One of the most popular books that we have been receiving as of late are the Fan Expo reprints of Batman Adventures #12. These have all new covers and some of the variants are foil covers on top of that. The combination of new covers, the fact that it reprints the first appearance of Harley Quinn, and that they are limited spelled the recipe for a hit in this regard. This has also been going on for a while with Wizard World Walking Dead #1 reprints, so I suppose this popularity could be a trend going forward.

This year was all-in-all a good year for comics in my opinion. Sales seem to be strong and books are continuing to come in to CBCS at a fast rate. I look forward to seeing what next year brings us. More movies for sure starting with Rogue One and then Guardians of the Galaxy. I also expect more crazy variants and books that come at us out of nowhere, maybe even more reprints of popular books. As mentioned earlier, I hope there are no reboots for the big two anytime soon. I wish everyone in the hobby a good 2017 and I look forward to reporting on the state of the hobby next year.

D'ARCY FARRELL PENDRAGON COMICS

Modern Back Issue Sales: Now here it comes. Sales for 1980s and up watch out. Those great best stories of the decades most recent past, are getting scooped up. Any key of the past 30 years is in high demand. Best sales of this era for me are as follows: TMNT any issue, Batman: Dark Knight Returns, Infinity Gauntlet, Death of Superman, original Valiant titles especially X-O Manowar and Rai, Thanos appearances especially in Silver Surfer, many important Batman stories like Death in the Family, Venom minis of 1990s and McFarlane Spideys. There are many numerous single issues of importance like first appearances of Harley or Deadpool, but I'm seeing that many smaller unknown gems are finding their way into the marketplace top demand. Such as early modern Zatannas, or Tales of Teen Titans Cyborg, Captain America #241, Wolverine #10, Ultimate Fallout #4 (1st Miles), Punisher mini of 1980s, and practically any DC-Vertigo title ever made. So for you investors, recap what was hot back then, and you will see potential in the future to invest. The 1980s-current have many many hot then, but still key and pertinent stories.

Bronze-Copper Age Sales: DC low run titles are still tops in sales and it's expected for years to come. DC has been undervalued forever. Marvel of course sells well in this era, runs like Miller's Daredevil, or Byrne's X-Men. X-Men at that time had probably the finest stories in comics, but the print run was also high, so they are readily available. What I'm suggesting is going after the lower run getting hot items. That means DC like Wonder Woman, Flash, and Green Lantern. Batman never ended and never had low print runs, though he is the top character in our industry as well. So buying Batman anything is never bad.

Silver Age Sales: Just like last year, JLA is highest in demand for runs. It would top sales, but there just aren't enough runs available to sell. Batman leads the pack overall with Spider-Man close behind. Last year I had nice Showcases and Brave and Bolds to sell, but this year I just couldn't replace what I sold in 2015. But if I had the issues, they would have sold instantly. Instead I was blessed with many Marvels, especially Spider-Man and Fantastic Four. FF is a bit slower due to Marvel not publishing anything for years on the new market, but FF #12, 25, 46-50 are always top sellers and high demand books. I still consider FF #25 a great investment since it is the FIRST Thing vs. Hulk and 2nd Silver Age Captain America app. Another top seller is Tales To Astonish #93 (1st full Surfer x-over).

New Comic Releases of 2016: This was definitely the year of DC. DC brought its successful N52 to a close with Rebirth. Rebirth tethered the pre-N52, N52, and new lines of Rebirth all together successfully. All titles are reasonable at $2.99, and even the giant sized one-shot that started it all, was as well. Only All-Star Batman is higher. Sales were decent, stories the same. What is exciting is within the one-shot that started it all. Without ruining a story, the thought that the Watchmen will eventually find its way into mainstream DC is awesome. Best titles for sales would be anything Batman, Harley Quinn, Hal Jordan, Wonder Woman and Superman. Fans like the super sons angle as well. I'd say All-Star Batman was the top seller.

As per DC movies, I liked Batman v Superman, and Suicide Squad, though it was not a great story, was a hoot to watch.

Marvel was still doing ok with movies. Deadpool was probably the most fun to watch. Doctor Strange had mixed reviews for my customers.

Unfortunately, Marvel's comics, just like the owners Disney, keep recycling the same typical storyline month after month. Obviously the formula of Star Wars and Disney fits well with Marvel books. Quantity over quality. I am yet again seeing a rash of Marvel titles litter the stands. Heroes or villains with multiple titles and reincarnations or variations that hardly deserve a title, just keep coming. Peter Parker is rich, and Amazing Spider-Man, the top hero of Marvel, have flat boring stories. That's actually old news.

The best thing Marvel did was hire Jeff Lemire, probably the best writer in the industry, or at least the hottest. His Old Man Logan and Moon Knight were great sellers in 2016. I hope his IX crossover of Inhumans vs. X-Men is just as good. I guess Marvel is using the same old tactic from 20 years ago again, when it tried to squash Image with excessive titles on the stands. DC, with its much fewer titles, does so much better in sales. Of course, a few years later, Marvel nearly went broke. Bendis then saved the day. Can Lemire do it again? I don't think he can as Marvel continues to insult long time fans while attempting to woo fickle new film fans. Marvel had a "universe changing" story line that turned everything on its head. And to what benefit? Marvel listened to a pitch from Jonathan Hickman a few years ago and in 2015 birthed "Secret Wars", an unnecessary destruction and reimaging of the Marvel titles, merging the Ultimate and regular title lines (along with some ancillary characters from other alternate universe story lines) and the result was an even bigger mess than before. Amazing Spider-Man, once the flagship title, is now little more than Iron Man 2.0. But, of course, it isn't just Peter Parker as Spider-Man. We've still got Miles Morales. And alternate Gwen Stacy. And apparently Alternate MC2 Spider-Man with "Mayday" May Parker and even Mary Jane Parker suiting up. Civil War 2 in 2016 was another disaster. At least the storyline in the core mini-series was somewhat coherent this time. Although Marvel has apparently killed off Bruce Banner and powered down Jennifer in an attempt to reign in the Rampaging Hulks issue from a few years ago.

When Disney first bought out Marvel, the concern was that the story lines would revert to "Mickey Mouse" type situations. Happily, that really hasn't happened (ignoring Squirrel Girl and Slapstick). However, as Disney continues to score hit after hit at the box office, they've shifted the focus to the characters that they control at the cost of the characters they only control in comics. Fantastic Four, X-Men, Spider-Man have suffered because of it (although it will be interesting to see what becomes of Spider-Man now with the deal with Sony Pictures).

Independents: The last year has seen everyone looking for the next Walking Dead mega-hit. It has turned into the equivalent of the stock market. Titles are released and sold on rumour: "this title is in development or has been optioned to XYZ." Briggs Land is an example. In Previews, for issue one there was a prominent annotation "In development for an AMC television show". I have started to see more shops add a label "soon to be TV show" on some of the back issues.

Granted I can see the merit in the attaching a popular show to the comic (Jessica Jones/Daredevil spring to mind) but in some cases it has that boiler room mentality. The titles being pushed are initially hot but later the back issues and trades sit on the shelf because most speculators have moved on to the next best and brightest and that $40 book is now back down to a more reasonable price which is good for the customer who just wants a good story.

On a more optimistic note, there has been some really excellent work put out over the last year. Image continues to challenge with the sheer volume and quality it issues. If you haven't yet, take a read of Paper Girls, The Wicked and The Divine, Citizen Jack, Descender, Huck, PencilHead (actually, anything McKeever does), Plutona, The Violent, Roche Limit, Faster Than Light, Moonshine or The One%. That was just a partial list based on customers comments.

Image continues put out interesting stories but struggles to grow their fanbase for long term story lines. Other than The Walking Dead and Saga, I can't think of any Image title that has maintained any interest to our customers. BOOM!, Dynamite, Dark Horse and other independent publishers are also struggling to bring readers in. On the plus side, they will provide a lot of new writers and artists an opportunity to showcase their talents, with many gems being published. Horror, Sci-Fi, Fantasy, Noir stories find their way to dedicated fans to be enjoyed on a regular basis.

BOOM! has put out a few interesting titles (Kennel Block Blues, Last Contract, Wild's End, The Woods to name a few), but its market share is slipping.

Dark Horse and Avatar have the best horror ongoing series in Harrow County and Providence respectively. Both have great art and stories but Providence has the edge as it goes into much darker material and it reminds one very much of classic horror. Unfortunately, for Avatar, they hired the once great Alan Moore and sales plummeted. All year fans asked for Über as well, Avatar's best title. Lets hope Über: Invasion makes the fans happy again.

Dark Horse had other good stories in The Paybacks, Leaving Megalopolis, House of Penance, Dept. H and Lady Killer. Of course, the Dark Horse Presents anthology continues to have some very good stories mixed with with some not so much but that is the nature of the beast. And Hellboy and related stories continue to roll along.

Garth Ennis continued to produced very interesting War themed stories for several different publishers (Titan/Avatar /Dark Horse/Aftershock). Customers tend to follow him around. Their allegiance is to the writer, not the company. The same goes for Warren Ellis. Regulars will always give a title with his name a chance for a few issues.

Valiant continues its strong efforts with Faith and Divinity. Of course Ninjak and Bloodshot are still good although the numbers aren't high. It's a shame this fine company cannot grab onto a regular fanbase like its glory days in the 1990s. The forthcoming movies may give it the notice it needs and deserves.

Titan and Aftershock are both fantastic. Many Horror, Sci-fi, TV/Movie related titles that the big guns do not do. These companies are on the move up. Worth watching and checking out.

BILL FIDYK COLLECTOR

2016 was another great year of steady appreciation for magazine keys. While there will always be collectors looking to fill holes in their runs of magazine titles, I've noticed that almost all non-key magazines sold very quickly if priced below Guide. It didn't matter if it was a high grade issue or a low grade reader - if it was priced with a significant discount below Guide, buyers scooped them up. Key magazines, however, sold well regardless with some magazines reaching multiples of Guide.

Marvel/Curtis: Easily the front runner in magazine collecting popularity. It seems that the hottest magazine key from Marvel that sells very quickly when it hits the market is Savage Tales #1. Not only does this issue predate Savage Sword of Conan for the second title featuring Conan, but it also has the first appearance and origin of the Man-Thing. Raw and slabbed copies sell very well with 9.2 and higher grade copies selling multiples of Guide. Second in line would be Marvel Preview #2 (origin of the Punisher). I think this character will always be popular but the Netflix Daredevil series definitely sparked renewed interest in the character. Two honorable mentions as Marvel magazine keys are Marvel Preview #4 and 7. These issues have cooled off a bit in 2016 but I expect a small (but not extremely noticeable) uptick in sales when the Guardians of the Galaxy sequel is released. The horror titles (Dracula Lives!, Tales of the Zombie, Monsters Unleashed, Vampire Tales and Haunt of Horror) all sell extremely well if at or below Guide, but moving high grade copies for multiples of Guide is tough.

Warren: Vampirella #1 leads the pack when it comes to key issues from this publisher. Any graded copy sells well with 9.0 and higher selling at multiples of Guide. Creepy #1 as well as any issue with a Frazetta cover are steady sellers at or above Guide. Any issue with a Frazetta signature series sells for large premiums over Guide largely due to the fact that there are not many examples that exist. It seems that many of the Warren collectors I talk to fall into two camps: the collector who wants the entire run of the given title or the collector who is an artist collector (like Adams, Wrightson, Frazetta, Corben) who scoops up high grade copies of the issues that contain a story or cover by the artist. Authentic copies of Eerie #1 are also very valuable but rarely come up for sale. I would say that this is the second "big" Warren key to have. I have seen just three copies surface for sale (and these seemed to be legit) and sold for multiples of Guide. The last copy I ever saw for sale was in 2013.

Skywald: Sells well in any grade at Guide prices. High grade examples rarely come up for sale and there are only a few slabbed copies of each Skywald title on the census. So many great artists got their start here. The easy fan favorite and true key issues from Skywald are Nightmare #20 (first John Byrne published artwork) and Psycho #24 (first published Dave Sim story).

Eerie Publications: No real key issues here but the gorier covers are targeted by collectors. It seems that the gorier (any meat grinder or decapitation covers), the better when it comes to desirability and these are quick sellers.

PAUL FIGURA CBCS - QUALITY CONTROL SPECIALIST

Things just keep moving forward here in sunny Florida as I spent my time between Quality Control and grading this year! The amount of books that are coming into our more than capable receiving department is phenomenal. Each month thousands of new submissions are amassed and processed by them, how they keep up is nothing short of miraculous! But with the knowledgeable and professional management that we have steering this ship I can see just how well they execute their plans to keep things streaming through our facility. I also want to thank all of you collectors/hobbyists that continue to support us and send in your submissions. We couldn't be here doing what we love without you! Now enough of this, onward to what you came here for!

There are enough Modern books out there dominating the hobby. Blank sketch covers, by all the big publishing companies, are huge in popularity right now. More and more sketch covers and autographed books are being submitted, and they show no sign of slowing down. Sketches on blank covers as well as the small quick sketches on the regular or variant covers are becoming phenomenally popular. The hundreds of beautiful sketches, by the industry's top professionals that have crossed my desk this year, as well as the autographed books indicate a monumental increase in this area of collecting. I have checked with a few local retailers, and found that most are reasonably priced for the secondary market. So if you enjoy art by your favorite artists, and can't afford the actual page art or a consignment piece, this would be the way to go. Or, did you find a book that already had an autograph on it? A Jack Kirby, Frank Frazetta or a Jerry Robinson? Is that really a Jerry Siegel and Joe Shuster autograph? That is a real find! But you're not really sure if the signature is authentic. Bob Kane and Stan Lee's signatures have been duplicated over and over. Well CBCS has the answer to that. The VSP program allows signatures to be verified as to their authenticity! Or in some cases not. If it is? Then "Face it Tiger, you just hit the Jackpot"! To compliment the VSP program, CBCS has the ASP program, where authorized witnesses will have your books signed, or accompany you to the signing, so there is no question as to its authenticity.

Some of the usual keys that commonly move through here that one can count on seeing with a bit of regularity are, Amazing Spider-Man #50, the 1st appearance of Wilson Fisk. The always popular Amazing Spider-Man #129 the 1st appearance of the Punisher. These next two usually show up in tandem, Amazing Spider-Man #121 and #122, featuring the deaths of Gwen Stacy and the Green Goblin. In our all about the costume category, Amazing Spider-Man #252, Spectacular Spider-Man #90, and Marvel Team-Up #141 all headlining the first appearance of the black costume. There is some credit as well to Marvel Age #12 which came out two months before the above mentioned books, as well as Marvel Super-Heroes Secret Wars #8. Which actually came out 9 months later. Bringing up the rear of our Spider-Man list is Amazing Spider-Man #300, #344 and #361. Issue #300 features the often-copied Todd McFarlane cover, as well as the first full appearance of Venom. The next two #344 and #361 bring to the Marvel universe the 1st appearance of Cletus Kasady and the 1st appearance of Carnage.

Venturing over to the mutant front, New Mutants #98, the first appearance of Deadpool and Domino, New Mutants #87, the first appearance of Cable, X-Force #2, the second appearance of Deadpool. On a much lesser scale X-Force #11 where Domino is revealed to be Copycat aka Vanessa Carlyle. The real Domino, Neena Thurman does makes her appearance in that issue. Another top mutant title that is a constant top key is Uncanny X-Men #266, the first appearance in continuity of Gambit. His actual first appearance was in X-Men Annual #14. With the Deadpool movie being so well received and the indication that Cable will be in the second installment, I see the popularity of these books continuing to increase. So keep a definite eye on those.

Without a doubt though, I would have to say the overall best mutant first appearance still seems to be in Incredible Hulk #181, the first full appearance of Wolverine. There seems to be no end to the popularity of this book, as well as the Frank Miller 1982 Wolverine four issue miniseries. Those books are a daily sight around here. Speaking of Wolverine, the first and second appearance of his biggest antagonist, Sabretooth was actually in Iron Fist #14 and Power Man and Iron Fist #66, and is a must have for those mutant fans out there.

Now with the popularity of the Marvel characters on Netflix, are you thinking of grabbing a hold of some Frank Miller Daredevil? That would not be a bad stratagem. With the popularity of the show's first two seasons, I can only guess where they will take him in season three. Following closely behind Daredevil are the regular and miniseries #1s of The Punisher (remember the popularity of Amazing Spider-Man #129!). As the debut of his series draws closer, I am only guessing how many more of those that we will see. Marvel Premiere numbers 15 and 16 showcase the talents of Danny Rand, aka Iron Fist, whom we spoke of earlier. His erstwhile partner, Luke Cage, Power Man, made his popular first appearance in Hero for Hire #1. As long as I mentioned Netflix, Marvel Feature #1, the first appearance of the Defenders, which is supposed to be just around the viewing corner. That book has always had a steady presence at our work stations. Continuing on with our heroes appearances first in comics and onto the big screen let's take a look at the Black Panther, first appearing in the Fantastic Four #52, then getting his origin updated in Avengers #87, as well as taking the lead in Marvel's Jungle Action with issue #5. Some real history here with the Black Panther was the start of self-contained, multi arc story entitled "Panther's Rage". It ran in Jungle Action #6 through #18 and is considered to be the first comic that was created as a complete 200 page novel. Finding it shouldn't be hard as it was reprinted in The Essential Black Panther, and numerous other Marvel publications.

Having a need to get your Falcon fix? Captain America #117 is the place to find it, the first appearance of Sam Wilson as our first African-American Super-Hero, the Falcon. Mr. Wilson is now currently enjoying his time serving as our newest Captain America, taking the reins, or shield as it were in The All-New Captain America #1. A fan of the mystical? Strange Tales #110, the 1st appearance of Doctor Strange, is no stranger to my desk.

On the DC side of things, we saw a quick increase in Superman #123, which was a Supergirl try-out issue. The sudden surge that book saw, with the first season of the Supergirl TV show declined just as quickly, but Action Comics #252, the first appearance of Supergirl, does make steady appearances. Adventure Comics #381, where the Maid of Might began her solo run in that title also makes frequent appearances upon my desk. On a lesser note, her first solo comic in 1972 does show up, but rather infrequently. The top heroine first appearance honors still have to go to Detective Comics #359, "The Million Dollar Debut of Batgirl!" aka Barbara Gordon. That book is always turning up around here, and rightly so. Batgirl has been a very beloved addition to the Bat-family, and I see no reason this should stop.

On the more recent side of things the convention exclusive Chrome Foil covers of Superman, Batman and Wonder Woman Rebirth #1, usually autographed, seem to be immensely popular, and we see quite a bit of them. Speaking of Rebirth, it looks as though DC has finally hit a home run with this relaunch and enough of the Rebirth titles are making their way through our system. Keep a watch for those to spike a bit more in popularity. Moving along with the popular DC books. The Batman: Dark Knight Returns, and The Killing Joke are two of the old prestige format books that although were always fan favorites and usually turning up here frequently, they seem to be picking up a bit of steam, and are continuing to move along as trendy DC titles.

Slipping now to the DC movies side of things, with the use of Parademons and the announcement of Steppenwolf appearing in the Justice League movie, can Darkseid be far behind? If so, follow the crowd and grab a copy of Jimmy Olsen #134 for his 1st appearance in cameo, and Forever People #1 for the first full appearance of the evil god. While you're at it, grabbing a copy of New Teen Titans #2 which showcases the talents of Deathstroke might not be a bad idea. Especially with the announcement of him appearing in the new Batman movie. That book being an already popular title should get even a bigger boost with the movie.

Have you heard enough about the newer books? Do you want to see what is cooking on the vintage market? More than enough vintage books come through here every day, those Golden and Silver Age greats that I see cannot compare with the newer books. We recently got in a great collection that featured many key Golden Age issues, all with bright, vibrant colors that would make you drool. Once again, the movies play a role here as well, as All Star Comics #8, the first appearance of Wonder Woman has been seen a bit. Also seen were Wonder Woman #1 and Sensation Comics #1, which continues her origin from All Star #8. I don't think I need to speak much more of which issues are gaining in popularity, just mention Golden Age and you grab people's attention. In recent months though, there have been a few that caught my eye, a couple of More Fun Spectre appearances and a Leading Comics #1. One can never see enough of those! Flash Comics #86, with the 1st appearance of the Black Canary has shown up around here a few times, along with Adventure Comics #209 and #262, the 1st appearance of Speedy and the retelling of his origin. Those are just some samples of lesser known Hero books that don't see a lot of mention in print, but are still showing up and seem to be on a few want lists.

Slipping over to the Silver Age, and you find the early appearances of the main Spider-Man villains that pop up rather frequently, the Vulture in #2, the Sandman #4, Mystério in #13, Green Goblin in #14, Kraven the Hunter in #15. Or how about some other fan favorite villains? Doctor Doom in Fantastic Four #5, or the very first appearance of an Inhuman in comics, Medusa in the Fantastic Four #36, the rest of the Inhumans were quick to follow in issues 44 through 47. On the heels of those great books comes the first appearance of the Silver Surfer and Galactus...no rest for the wicked I guess as these books seem to be staples in the collector world. Other regular Silver Age heroes that always brighten my day, and show up routinely are found within the pages of Brave and the Bold. Issues #25 through #30 with first appearances of the Suicide Squad, and the Justice League of America.

Brave and the Bold #34 the first Silver Age appearance of Hawkman and Hawkgirl. Also this year I have seen my share of Showcase #17 the 1st appearance of Adam Strange, and #19 the first Adam Strange cover title. Charlton Comics, a company that had so many great characters and titles, books I see here that I wish I had kept in my collection. I've seen more than a few issues of Space Adventures #33, the 1st appearance of Captain Atom, drawn by the legendary Steve Ditko. His adventures ran in Space Adventures in issues #33 to #40, and #42. He then reappeared in Strange Suspense Stories #75, which became Captain Atom with issue #78.

So there you have it, another year of collecting and enjoying our hobby under our belts, some books moving up the ladder of popularity, some slipping down a few notches. Where your favorite books and heroes end up, who knows, but honestly does it really matter? As long as you are enjoying the search, treasuring the finds, THAT is what really matters. Until next year, happy hunting!

Space Adventures #33, with the 1st app. of Captain Atom and art by Steve Ditko is popular with collectors.

JOSEPH FIORE COMICWIZ.COM

If you had asked me earlier in the year what I was planning to cover in my market report, I'd probably talk about the sustained interest in comics reflected by retailer purchases being the highest since the late '90s. I'd sprinkle in a dash of how movies continued to inject a sustained relevance into mainstream culture, expanding audiences to include more females and younger readers. Even in social media, there hasn't been a month that hasn't passed where a friend or fellow collector has decided to open up their own collectibles shop, signaling a very impressive statistic of new brick-and-mortar shops opening up. These are all amazing signals that the hobby is alive and well!

In fact, a lot of these talking points could probably related back into a topic of conversation that arose casually with this summer's Kempenfest show. For new readers, this is an annual show where I exhibit, and which has traditionally been a successful one for me. It's an "antiques" venue that has allowed me to set-up as the "comic guy" and it's a great way to interface with local collectors who have either been at collecting for years, or are just starting out. Anyhow, back to the conversation - which sort of touches on the rising interest in comics, as well as the subject of literacy. More specifically the question asked what makes comics interesting to people of the new generation?

One of the talking points that seemed to emerge is that comics can be seen as a different sort of literacy because it's primarily visual, and one of the theories put forward that day is that it's been successful because the Internet works in a very similar way. As an example, memes use small amounts of text alongside images, and can sometimes gain as much attention if not more than a well composed post. Social media too continues to trend toward limiting the amount of characters we use in writing posts, and some of the most consumed content in social media are shares of images and video. I thought about this, and became more conscious of my younger customers, and interestingly I found that almost every youngster I asked was far more interested in reading the comics because of the art, and turned to reading to learn more about how their favourite superheroes or characters in the movies or cartoons first made their mark in comics.

Interestingly, this discussion allowed itself to morph into holding a real life experiment to test this theory when our cities local library decided to hold its first ever Comic Con. I had committed to the show before Kempenfest four day show happened in late July/August, and didn't know what to expect. Surprisingly, the show was well attended, by a demographic that went beyond the typical adult male collector, and again included many females, as well as younger and older readers. Many of the adult females were cosplaying along with their children, and sometimes the Dad would show up in costume too, and that family atmosphere made me feel like I was witnessing a real life interpretation of Disney's The Incredibles movie.

I did well at both shows with comics priced from $1-$5, but also sold a number of higher value books to both casual collectors and those whose interests in collecting piqued from a string of superhero movies they had enjoyed, and the surprise by a longshot were the ones now asking about a character anticipated to appear in the coming months - Doctor Strange. Comics I couldn't sell if my life depended on it in past years were selling faster than I could pull them out of longboxes, and the grin I wore was wider than any of Benedict Cumberbatch's smiling headshots. Doctor Strange comics, whether they were '80s, '90s, in his own title, What If's, or in team-ups, were my best sellers by a longshot.

However, I have to emphasize it wasn't just the sales that made the shows successful - it was refreshing to hear younger readers who were actually diving into reading the comics they were buying, and interacting with one another about story lines they read. And not just new comic content, but diving into old stories being reimaged for the screen that were referenced from a graphic novel, omnibus, Marvel Milestone or reprinted comic. Those stories and conversations made me feel like an old trivia geek with unusable Jeopardy trivia knowledge could now relate again with an audience half my age and sometimes younger.

At the mid-year point, I had made the difficult decision to refocus my collecting interests. An accident in the late winter months made me realize I just wasn't able to divide my time in collecting comics, toys and original comic art anymore. I sold approximately 16,000 comics from my personal collection to fellow Overstreet advisor Marc Sims of Big B Comics. Marc made the whole process very smooth and I couldn't have asked for a better outcome as the comics are now slowly being absorbed in the local collector market.

I had also found a buyer in Texas to acquire a large fragment of my vintage Kenner Star Wars toy collection. That too went super smooth, into the hands of a collector who I greatly respect, and I've since began organizing the remaining fragments of my comics and toys, and enjoying the basement space I freed up! I hope to use this coming year as the year I recommence scanning and cataloguing my original comic art collection, and I've already begun the cataloguing part by registering and uploading art to my CAF profile.

Social media continues to be a platform of interest to monitor when it comes to the movement of comics and other items I collect. Facebook groups continue to be a frequent venue for the movement of comics, and the groups see a great number of items being sold and being diverted from sites like eBay. In my opinion however its greatest feature is found with how it continues to serve as a barometer for activity which could help explain patterns and trends. As an example for instance, the situation I'm about to describe takes us to the month of June when CGC had made an announcement it was rehauling its slab design.

Posts began appearing in Facebook groups with complaints on a number of issues, the more serious having to do with books actually being damaged in the new slab. This precipitated panic and outright boycotts of the new case until CGC corrected the issues. The negative trickle effect went beyond that of a reputational nature with numerous examples of certified examples that could be identified as being in the new slab actually dropping in value during this time period. Sadly, this was also met with the vetting of any posts identifying these issues on the CGC forums. The vetting ranged from posts being deleted right through to entire threads and their comments disappearing. There's an old saying that it's better to keep the conversation at your own house than let it spread elsewhere. This is exactly what happens in social media, except by sending collectors away angrier, you can be certain they aren't going to keep the problem to themselves.

CGC forum member Ditch Fahrenheit published several videos on YouTube which do a great job of chronicling the issues and damage caused by the CGC's case, and could be found using a Google keyword search "creep engine cgc." Facebook continued to be the place where the conversation continued and the reason why I think it's important to mention this point is that it gave context to a situation that might have only been seen as an unexplained market correction rather than an issue with a certification company on the ropes of a crisis trying desperately to sweep the issues with their new cases under the rug.

My hottest books pairing sales from the two shows I did with online sales were New Mutants #98, Batman Adventures #12, Fantastic Four #52, and Incredible Hulk #181. The hottest Canadian Price Variants activity without a doubt revolves around Batman or Detective Comics issues, and the speculation for the Spider-Man: Homecoming movie saw a frenzy of activity with early appearances of Scorpion, the Vulture, and Amazing Spider-Man Annual #1 featuring the first appearance of Sinister Six being a very popular issue. The one comic that I had been tracking closely with the lead up to Rogue One in December 2016 is Marvel's Star Wars #1, and regrettably prices on 9.4s and up had dropped at about half the value they were selling for a year prior.

So in conclusion, local selling venues have continued to prove to be most successful this past year. Setting up at shows will continue to be my sales approach of choice in the coming year. Even local classified listings have proven to be far more logistically practical to complete a deal, both for selling and buying. Facebook groups have kept a decent level of pace in terms of social media platforms where items continue to pop-up for sale, but haven't been as effective in terms of selling in my own personal experience. Two new buying channels have emerged for me - one is dealing with two different owners of storage facilities who have turned to me a handful of times already to sell collections of toys and comics. In fact, I am processing a 2,000 book collection, and a 200 book collection from two different self-storage facility owners, with both deals happening earlier in the day of me writing this report.

The other channel that has quickly emerged since becoming an accredited appraiser is the estate appraisals business, which has continued to be a great way to remain dialed-in to values for things I have a passion in collecting myself, while allowing me to get a foot in the door for any estates which are looking to be matched-up to a buyer. At the time of this writing, I am handling three assignments, with one looking to have me assist in selling the entire contents of the estate. This has meant reinforcing strong relationships with a network of buyers, and fostering new ones during the period estates are downsized and sold off.

This past year has brought many new interactions and great meeting experiences. It has also meant coming to a realization that we sometimes need to return to our collecting roots to enrich our journey and experience. One of the observations I noted from this experience is a pace, mood and feeling seeming more rushed, maybe a little panicked or even discouraged with a deal slipping through collectors fingers. These could all have something to do with numerous hobbies experiencing significant value gains and people feeling like they are being priced out of their respective hobbies. One thing I personally want to try to work towards in the coming year as a goal is trying to return to some of the basics, revolving around collecting being something meant to be fun and enjoyable, and I encourage readers of this great guide to try to do the same - before you stress about adding more, enjoy what you already have and focus your pursuits on the things that make you most happy. Happy collecting everyone!

JOHN FOSTER SOUTH PHILLY COMICS

Greetings, everyone, this is John Foster reporting again from sunny South Philadelphia at our friendly neighborhood shop, South Philly Comics! It's been a reasonably interesting and exciting year for comics and for the people who read them. Our monthly comic sales remain strong and are the bulk of our business, with trade paperbacks next in line, and back issue sales being the icing on the cake!

Let's start this report with Modern comic sales and begin by talking about DC Comics' Rebirth, easily the biggest thing to happen this year as far as Modern comics go. The $2.99, 80 page DC Universe Rebirth one-shot sold extremely well and set the stage for the first wave of DC Rebirth one-shots to completely sell out in no time. Batman pre- and post-Rebirth is still the top DC Comics seller for us, with no other title even coming close. All-Star Batman, Detective Comics, and Wonder Woman are the next tier of leaders. Omega Men was critically acclaimed but failed to move at our shop. This year DC also launched a new imprint in the vein of Vertigo called Young Animal, under the guidance of musician/comic writer Gerard Way. Since its debut not too long ago, we have had major success with all of their titles, but especially with Doom Patrol.

At Marvel, Ms. Marvel, Karnak, Darth Vader, and Vision were our most popular Marvel titles this year. Unbeatable Squirrel Girl was also a big seller for us, and I attribute its success to the fact that both kids and adults are interested and never miss an issue. Despite our success with these titles, I have noticed a lot of people jumping ship due to the never ending train of "major" comic crossover events as well as release delays and high prices. Speaking of Marvel's trouble keeping their fans happy, it's also worth mentioning the constant griping I hear from some fans of the "Big 2" about anything and everything. It seems that no matter what, Marvel and DC are damned if they do and damned if they don't. A particular complaint is that Marvel seems to put out a decent amount of books that are obvious, shameless money grabs, like overpriced Annuals which are not even done by the book's main creative team, or event tie-ins that have little to nothing to do with the event.

Image Comics, on the other hand, seems to be able to do no wrong - the only complaint we hear is that they put out too many interesting and good-looking comics and the customers don't always have the bank account to support them all! East of West, Wicked and the Divine, Paper Girls, Outcast, Rumble, and Walking Dead are big sellers, but Saga is still king. We probably also sell the most trade paperbacks overall from Image Comics, with their low-to-reasonable prices and timely release dates.

We've seen moderate success with Dark Horse Comics this year. Black Hammer, Harrow County, Mignola-verse titles, and the occasional Richard Corben horror mini-series or one-shots are popular titles.

Boom Entertainment's Lumberjanes has dropped a little in numbers, but is still passionately loved by its readers. I can't seem to be able to order enough Hillbilly from the newly resurrected publisher, Albatross Funny Books, which is nice to see since I'm personally a big fan of Eric Powell's work.

Now, onto Back Issue sales! Golden Age comic sales were few and far between for us this year, but we did pick up a few ok c opies of Jungle Tales and Authentic Police Cases, nothing crazy, but they eventually sold. Silver Age books were an entirely different story, though, as we were able to pick-up lots of these wonderful books and sell them pretty quickly. We purchased and immediately flipped a Batman #18 1 (1st app Poison Ivy), a nice looking F antastic Four #25 (2nd SA Captain America app, 1st Hulk/Thing fight, AND the 1st mention of Ben Grimm's sweet old aunt Petunia!), and Adventure Comics #256 (Green Arrow origin story by Jack Kirby). During the Batman v Superman movie hype, we did well moving our collection of World's Finest issues featuring Batman fighting Superman covers. We also acquired a massive amount of Silver Age Dell, Harvey, Gold Key, and ACG comics and I was astonished at how quickly we moved them. The gem from that haul was Gold Key's Space Ghost #1, which flew out of here once posted on social media (which I've found is a great way to drum up interest in our little neighborhood comic shop).

As far as Bronze and Copper Age comics go, we had some great luck finding and selling some "key" issues. Heroes for Hire #1 (1st app Luke Cage) sold well over Guide price with the popularity of the Netflix show. We also did very well buying and selling back issues of Marvel's first go around with Star Wars especially issues #42 & #68 (Boba Fett issues). This year we got a great deal and bought a huge collection of '70s and '80s underground comix and were blown away with how well they sold. I noticed people were quite interested to see books that they never saw before and don't generally see anywhere else, making us a destination for discovering new old books.

This year we were also fortunate enough to grab some nice copies of Peter Parker, Spectacular Spider-Man #64 (1st app Cloak & Dagger) and New Teen Titans #2 (1st app. Deathstroke). We plan to sit on them until TV/Movie news develops. With comics bombarding TV, Netflix, and the big screen, I've noticed it really only affects these "key" issues, with little to no interest paid to the surrounding issues of the run (outside of longtime collectors filling in gaps of their collections). For instance, I can sell any and all 1st and/or early appearances of Deadpool, but his monthly title is one of our lowest selling titles, despite the huge success of the movie.

With comic fandom rapidly growing and showing no signs of slowing down, we can only fear oversaturation in mass media, but I feel we are still a while away from that. I would like to thank J.C. Vaughn, Mark Huesman, and the rest of the Overstreet gang for putting together this wonderful book and letting me get a word in. I would also like to thank all of you who took the time to read my thoughts on comics this year. If you are ever in the Philadelphia area, please stop by my shop and talk comics! Cheers!

DAN GALLO COMIC ART CON / DEALER

There is not enough good stuff to go around. The supply is limited while the demand is not. And that's where I come in. I specialize in graded key issues and original comic book art. I don't deal in bulk or miscellaneous issues; only books with significance. I like to say I have the meat but no potatoes. The challenge I have today is the same as I have every year; I just can't acquire material fast enough. I have money I can't spend. That is how strong the hobby is.

Let's talk books. There is nothing more boring than reading pages upon pages of outdated sales data. Really, I would rather shoot myself. Rather than subject you to that, I prefer to write a short, concise report offering some market insight focused more on the future instead of the past. Here we go:

Golden Age: Two words: buy Gold! I like to refer to the top 25 or so books listed in Overstreet's Top 100 GA Books as "Big Gold," (plus More Fun #73, Wonder Woman #1 and Sensation #1 which inexplicitly haven't yet cracked the list). For those monster books it is the Wild West and nearly impossible to pin down a price and get ahead of the curve. It has gotten to a point where only a handful of collectors can play in that pool leaving the rest of the hobby to either settle for restored copies or look downstream for books that haven't popped yet, (much like DC SA keys just a few years ago). Already sought after but less expensive than the books in the top 25 are Detective #58, the 1st Penguin, Detective #66, the

Hillbilly #1 is a treat for fans of writer/artist Eric Powell.

1st Two Face, Detective #140, the 1st Riddler, and Detective #168, the origin of the Joker. Also worthwhile are Wonder Woman #6, the 1st Cheetah, and Sensation #6, the 1st magic lasso. There is also Superboy #10, the 1st Lana Lang, and Superman #30, the 1st Mr. Mxyztpk. Keep an eye out for classic covers or covers featuring villains such as the Joker and Catwoman. Lastly, I am a big fan of any GA Captain America, (as long as they present well!). In short, even if you are priced out of the "Big Gold" market there are still plenty of good books out there. Now go find them...

Silver Age: Fantastic Four #4, which contains the first SA appearance of Namor, has finally begun to move. I have written about it in every market report I have submitted, (this being my fourth), and I am still bullish on it. He is the biggest Marvel character by far yet to have his day on the big screen. His time will come and when you first hear of it, it will already be too late. It is undervalued and I would recommend picking up the highest grade you could afford, (and do it quickly). Still, another favorite of mine is Tales to Astonish #13, the first appearance of Groot. There is so much potential for Disney using this character in every way imaginable. How long before we see Groot walking around the Magic Kingdom? Now for an obvious one, Amazing Spider-Man #1. With Amazing Fantasy #15 prices practically out of reach for many collectors, I can see eyes turning towards Amazing Spider-Man #1, for the first time, as a first option. Look for the gap in prices between the two to narrow. It is also a good time to look into Journey into Mystery #83, the 1st Thor. The book has been flat the past few years and I look for that to change with his new movie due out in November.

Bronze Age: I am a little down on BA books. I think the sheer quantities available have kept many books flat or trending down. Before you rush to dump, there are exceptions though. Hulk #181 and ASM #129 are both stronger than ever. Werewolf by Night #32 has had a good year, (but I see it topping off already). Tomb of Dracula #10, Marvel Premiere #15 and Marvel Spotlight #5 I still like a lot. Also, when buying BA books it is even more important to get the highest grade possible even if you have to buy fewer books to do so.

Modern Age: Punisher Limited Series #1: still a big fan. I love the Venom #1 black error edition. They just don't come up often. I also have a soft spot for Spider-Man #1 platinum edition. With MA books I would shoot for the 9.8s because they are just too common and I think over time we will see a widening of the gap between the 9.8s and the 9.6s, (although with Venom black being so scarce a lower grade would suffice).

Original Comic Book Art: The only thing wilder than the Wild West is original comic book art! As co-promoter of Comic Art Con I have seen the insanity up close. But don't let that scare you. Get your feet wet at a comfortable price point, ease your way in and build from there. You will be glad you did.

Conclusion: My report has tilted towards the investment side as opposed to a pure collector's side. You don't need me or anyone else to tell you how to collect. You buy what you like and follow your gut. If you have your eye on the investment side, then to me it is simple; buy the very best and at the highest grade you can afford. Don't get bogged down with the small stuff. Less is more. I would rather have one big book as opposed to two smaller ones or one even bigger one instead of five others. It helps to have someone who will offer you time payments so that bigger purchases are more easily digestible. Also, when you find yourself with a bunch of really good books consider packaging them all up for one monster book. Let all previous purchases be a down payment on a future grail. Stair step your way to the top, (because that is where you want to be), and remember, the absolute best material is super scarce, (and that is what you want to have).

ERIC J. GROVES THE COMIC ART FOUNDATION

Greetings from the windswept plains of Oklahoma! Herewith we submit our commentary on the market for comic books during this last year. We are pleased to report that in our view, the market is strong with an influx of new, mostly younger, collectors. We temper this view with the observation that some of these collectors are not accumulating runs of specific titles but seek out only key issues, preferably in high grade. This trend reflects a speculative attitude which we think does not serve the best interest of the collecting community as a whole. Time will tell.

We are a boutique operation centered on Golden Age, Atomic Age and early Silver Age comic books. Our focus is largely a function of this advisor's age, which is, shall we say, pre-Code. We fell in love with the comics we read in our youth and spent our years acquiring the issues we were unable to find back in the day. This quest was quite challenging before the organization of comic fandom in the 1960s. But now we have them all!

To some extent, we specialize in acquiring Atomic Age comics. They are of interest because from 1946 to 1954, there was a proliferation of titles embracing subject matter never addressed before. This included crime, horror, romance, war, science fiction, westerns, humor and tie-ins to radio, movies and television. Many of these comics are desirable because they featured the early work of prominent artists like Matt Baker, Wally Wood, Frank Frazetta, Harvey Kurtzman and many others. We delight in turning up off-beat titles like Uncle Miltie, Cryin' Lion, Sparkie, Radio Pixie and the like. They were emblematic of their time. They were precursors. One era makes the next one possible.

Golden Age: Timely comics continue to rule. When we can find them, they sell the same day we offer them! Nuff said. With DC comics, it all depends on the character. Fair to say that Batman is the preeminent title, along with Detective, especially lower numbers. Superman does well, not so much for Action, unless it is early on. Close behind are excellent titles like Flash, All-American, Green Lantern, All Star, More Fun, Star Spangled and Adventure. Especially in demand are the scarcer numbers of these titles, some of which flow over into the Atomic Age, such as later issues of Flash and Green Lantern. Wonder Woman and Sensation deserve special mention because, at long last, the Amazon princess has been recognized for her remarkable stories and artwork. It is noteworthy that even younger collectors are hunting these titles, many of which are generation-skipping.

The other major publishers are still of interest to serious collectors, but do not enjoy the same level of demand enjoyed by DC. For example, Quality had several superlative titles, like Plastic Man by Jack Cole, and Police, yet these books do not move as they should. The exception is Military, especially with Eisner art, and Blackhawk with Reed Crandall.

Fawcett comics were extremely popular in their day, but do not draw collectors as they once did. However, early Master Comics, and Capt. Marvel, Jr., are sought after for Mac Raboy art. World War II covers increase desirability. Early Whiz numbers fare well; some are relatively scarce. Mary Marvel has a following, too. MLJ, before giving way to Archie Andrews, produced some fine comics, particularly those with wartime covers. They sell steadily. Fiction House, the home of scantily clad ladies, are of limited interest, except for Planet, always a winner, and low numbers of Jumbo, with the oversized ones difficult to find.

Atomic Age: This era fascinates not only collectors of esoterica, but comic historians and scholars, such as Michelle Nolan, author of the master treatise on romance comics. We especially appreciate the period for the courage demonstrated by the publishers of that time, which in some cases were prosecuted for their art during the congressional inquiries of the 1950s. Comics caused juvenile delinquency, certain experts said. The end result was the Comics Code Authority.

A sampler of some of the non-superhero Atomic Age titles we sold this year would include Frankenstein, Fritzie Ritz, Joker, Mighty Mouse, Miss America, Paul Terry's Comics, Sea Hound, Terry-Toons and Sparkler. We also moved a lot of love comics ranging from High School Confidential Diary to True Bride-To-Be Romances. What great titles. The books most in demand from this period, aside from superheros, are late 1940s Timelys and their successor, Atlas. All Atlas titles sell, even the war comics, which have traditionally been somewhat slow. These are not necessarily high dollar books but they do have an audience.

DC continued putting out its well-established superhero titles during the Atomic Age. However, many issues of DC comics like Batman, Superman, World's Finest, Wonder Woman and others may not have been widely distributed, or saved, because they are very hard to find. Also, they were not well made and often have condition problems. Notably, DC also engaged in publishing somewhat experimental titles, often tied in to movies or television. Examples include Adventures of Alan Ladd, Bob Hope, Ozzie and Harriet,

Dale Evans, Dean Martin and Jerry Lewis and others. The early issues of these titles presented photo covers, which are very attractive and good sellers. Beyond this, these comics are slow movers, at least for the time being.

A few words about E.C. comics, also published during the Atomic Age. "Pre-trend" titles like Moon Girl and Land of the Lost (based on a radio show) are in demand, and do well. The "Trend" period, 1950-1954, of course, produced the most desirable comics, with horror titles leading the way. The crime suspense titles are next, followed by the science fiction genre and finally, the war comics. The final E.C. period, "New Direction", actually produced some superlative work from the all-time best stable, such as Impact, Piracy and Valor. E.C. comics from this time frame are bargains. Mad is a slow mover, which is hard to figure because it was so brilliantly conceived and executed. Yes, all this E.C. comic art has been reprinted, but nothing beats the experience of holding and reading the original. Like fine wine, the bouquet of an old comic book is unmistakable. Basement or attic? Basement, I think.

Silver Age: Early Silver Age comics, for the most part, deserve the value attributed to them. They constitute a significant milestone in the evolution of comics. As we say, one era makes the next one possible. The publishers and artists who produced these books are rightly revered. Issues such as Showcase #4, Amazing Fantasy #15, Hulk #1, Amazing Spider-Man #1 and Fantastic Four #1 are established icons now. We have sold these books many times over. They move out in all grades. There seems no end to the demand for low number Spideys and key issues of that title. They are beautiful books, lots of eye appeal. Early Tales of Suspense and Tales to Astonish, likewise. Daredevil and X-Men are steady.

As to DC comics: Batman is the character most in demand, especially the hard-to-find issues, Batman #80 to 100. Superman is a reliable seller, too. Not much to say about Superboy, Lois Lane and Jimmy Olson except that the lower numbers are on want lists. Key issues of Showcase and Brave and the Bold continue to do well. Early Strange Adventures are marketable, not so much House of Secrets and House of Mystery. It appears DC television shows (Arrow, The Flash, Gotham and Supergirl) have had an impact on the characters portrayed. This can be difficult to gauge. Many late Silver Age comics are not all that difficult to find, so condition can be an important factor in pricing.

Bringing it all Back Home: We do not traffic much in Bronze Age comics, but are in touch with colleagues who do. Much speculation persists here, maybe too much. We continue to advise fans to buy comics they like, not solely for investment purposes. One of the criteria for judging the artistic worth of a comic is the test of time. A truly memorable comic is one that can be read more than once and which evokes a new reaction a year or two later. Some comic art is eternal. If you doubt this, go back and read Carl Barks' Donald Duck Four Colors, or Will Eisner's Spirit or even the Frank Miller Daredevil stories. You may see things you did not see the first time. Comics with inherent artistic merit usually hold their value over time. So buy what you love.

Two other matters: First, if we strive to be precise in establishing Guide values, we should look at the prices achieved by the major auction houses, ComicConnect and Heritage. Both auctions regularly present highly graded books, usually including major keys and scarcer items. Thanks to the internet, the comic market is global in scope. Winning bids from everywhere should be taken into account when determining values.

Second, as many other advisors have reported, the major comic conventions have devolved into mere celebrations of popular culture, mostly movies. Comics are no longer the central focus of these enterprises. For example, the 2016 Wizard World ComicCon in Tulsa, we are told, presented only three (3) serious comic book dealers. For serious collectors and dealers, we recommend smaller conventions genuinely devoted to comics and related materials. One such gathering, we shamelessly endorse, is OAF Con, staged annually every fall in Norman, Oklahoma, under the superb guidance of long time collector Bart Bush. Real people and lots of old funny books. If you show up, you won't be disappointed. Until then, we wish every reader of this commentary the best of luck in finding the books you seek. Dicta et picta; comics abide.

TERRY HOKNES HOKNES COMICS

"Playing catch up" - this is a term I use to explain the larger than normal growth that some books make usually after years of being stagnant. The majority of vintage comics have slow but steady growth which keep the comic market consistent on an upward growth in price. However some books are "discovered" to be undervalued due to either modern movie hype or in comparison to similar type books whether based on age, importance or rarity. This can cause some books to have massive jumps in a short period of time. Some recent books that have seen massive growth in the past couple years include: Wonder Woman #98, Tales To Astonish #13, Peanuts #1, More Fun Comics #73. These are examples of books that have taken off for various reasons - but they all played "catch up". One of the fun aspects of the collecting world is for those who study their comic book history to actually learn more about vintage comics and discover gems that perhaps have gone ignored for a long period of time. Suspense Comics #3 is a perfect example of a book that two decades ago was a fairly cheap unimportant issue but now with constant growing attention has risen from $6.00 in the first Overstreet Price Guide to an incredible $100,000.00 in the last Guide.

Younger collectors seem to be primarily interested in superheroes that they can relate to. Unfortunately a huge chunk of comic book history is slowly becoming ignored as many newer collectors are not aware of the thousands of other cool comics that can be collected. Books that are historically important, in many cases much rarer (especially in high grade), and much more affordable. It's a win-win to hunt out treasures. One of the most shocking trends these days is that many collectors have no problem spending $500.00 for a brand new release variant flavour of the week book but don't realize they could be buying 80 year old vintage comics for less than $100.00.

I look for trends in collecting to see what is changing. The current comic book publishers put out so many rare limited variant covers now that almost the only new comics that are heating up in price are "ratio variants". This market has been growing now for the past 10 years and there are now many comics from the past decade that are now more valuable than Golden Age comics.

To help educate a new generation of collectors I have started the massive research project of the History of Comic Books starting with 1933 and looking at every single comic book issue from every publisher in my in-depth video documentary series which can be seen online at www.HoknesComics.com or at www.YouTube.com by searching for Comic Book History 1933.

My true love is for Golden Age and Silver Age comics and their amazing history. For over 20 years I have been researching and compiling data on the growth of comic books and self publish a series of books called "Investing In Comic Books". The purpose of this series is to help collectors/investors make smarter decisions about investing while learning the history of these books. My main resource is the annual Overstreet Price Guide which has documented the entire growth of this industry over the past 47 years. Record prices continue to be hit in all era's and genres. More info at www.HoknesComics.com.

Tips On Investing: Here are some of the things you need to know about before you start investing and spending big money on comic books. Bob Overstreet began publishing his Comic Book Price Guide Annual in 1970 and now 47 years later has helped establish the comics collectible market as one of the most consistent, trustworthy and safe investments. Overstreet's pricing information from the past 47 years is used to analyze the growth of each book in all conditions in my book series "Investing In Comic Books". To find out how strong the market is for a book you should do year to year price guide comparisons and then compare them to the highest dollar sales on Heritage or any other auction site to find out if people really are paying high prices to keep driving the price up on a particular comic book. Finally compare the book to other books of similar importance, year, genre and find out if the book is overpriced, under priced or on par with similar books.

Split Between Grades / Prices: Note that sometimes the NM copy might be going up in value but the lower grade copies might at the same time be dropping in value. Over the years the spread between low and high grade copies has been stretching. Back in 1970, a Mint comic was worth 4x that of a Good 2.0 copy. Now when it comes to key issues the split is usually around the 20x difference between NM 9.2 and GD 2.0. Also keep in mind that copies of key issues above 9.2 will sell for even more, creating sometimes a spread of 100x difference - meaning a book that sells for $2000 in GD might sell for $100,000 in NM 9.6. Therefore it's easy to see why most collectors prefer to go for the highest end copies as they drive the market and help push prices up each year. Beware that the majority of comic books graded FN 6.0 or less sell for less than the Guide price. Usually only rare or key issues sell above Guide in lower grades. eBay is the largest market for comic book sales and therefore due to shipping costs and bad grading most buyers seek out deals and do not want to pay Guide prices.

I personally believe that vintage comics value should be based a lot on its rarity and one of the best benefits of the CGC Census is we now get an idea of the quantity of comics that exist. Of course not every comic book has been "slabbed" but we get a quick idea which books are truly scarce and which books are getting attention and which are not. There are still some DC superhero comics from the 1940s that have less than 5 copies graded by CGC so even with the high price Guide values these books simply do not exist. Now that we have been grading books for 17 years, it's easy to get a picture of the true scarcity of thousands of Golden Age comics.

Researching Comic Books: The internet has made comic book collecting and archiving an amazing tool with the world at your fingertips. Some absolutely amazing websites exist with more data than you can imagine. Some of the best include:

Grand Comics Database - over 500,000 comic book covers from around the world and writer/artist/index info for most <http://www.comics.org/>

Comic Book DB - Info, checklists and chronologies of superheroes for DC and Marvel comicbookdb.com

Mike's DC Index - amazing site with index of every comic ever from every major publisher - sort able by dates, titles, etc. <http://www.dcindexes.com/>

Hot New Comics: I write over 200 columns a year reporting on the state of current popular back issues, hot books, speculated books and print runs of new books. Some of the best online websites for articles on investing in modern new comics can be found at comicsheatingup.net, investcomics.com, bleedingcool.com, comicbookspeculation.blogspot.com, comicbookscalping.com, hoknescomics.com.

Investing in new comics is a different game than vintage comics. It's mostly about buying, flipping and selling at just the right time. It's all about supply and demand. Many books each year can jump 1000% in value in only a month but this isn't a guarantee that the prices are going up and up. In fact most modern books peak after their initial big jump, settle and then fall back down if demand is not continual.

Hot Back Issues and the Speculator Market of 2016: Some extraordinary record prices hit on modern books that I have documented. Here are some of the fads that hit 2016: Animosity #1 (AfterShock Comics), Invincible Iron Man #7 and #9 (1st appearance of Riri Williams), The Vision #1-5 (Marvel Comics), Captain America Steve Rogers #1, NYX #3 (1st X-23), Spider-Man/Deadpool #1-3, and Seven To Eternity #1 (Image Comics).

Thanks for letting me contribute to the Overstreet Price Guide and a happy 47th anniversary to Bob!

GREG HOLLAND COLLECTOR

Disclaimer: Because I am a collector and have not spent even one day as a retailer, I have the honor of both not knowing what I'm talking about and writing this market report anyway. Now that my ignorance is declared, let's get started.

Comic Books: This report on the comic book market begins by ignoring comic books. It's far more important to write first about...

Movies and Television Series: The impact of recent comic-based movies and television series to the comic market is undeniable. Some say all these movies aren't bringing enough readers to the new comic market, and we're not seeing enough new faces buying back issues. I say we just need to relax. Christopher Reeve defined Superman for generations with just one movie in 1978. The impact of that one movie has continued for almost another 40 years because Cavill's Superman is compared to Reeve's Superman. I was two years old in 1978 and I determined to be Superman when I grew up because of that one movie, but it would be more than 12 years later before I even owned a Superman comic. It was nearly 30 years before I spent more than $100 on a Superman book, but I've spent 100 times that amount by now. The impact of today's movies and television series will grow for decades, with future collectors also wanting to own pieces of the history and origins of their favorite characters from childhood. All it took to make a lifelong impact for me was one two-hour movie when I was two years old. There are now hundreds of hours of comic-based movies and television series and millions of future collectors watching. We have to wait for the seeds to grow and not expect every two-to-twenty year old to start spending money on comics on the way home from the theater.

Sudden Key Issues: Who is Professor Zoom? What does the Black Mercy do? Is Harley Quinn more than just a pretty face? Why was Deadpool mad at Francis? Why would anyone trust an ex-convict like Luke Cage? Is that a walking tree and talking raccoon? Despite these stories happening up to 60 years ago in comic books, it is only in the last 5 years that millions of people found out the answers. The first appearance of a talking animal might be under $5 for thirty years straight, but in year 31 it could be $200 thanks to movies or television. While there is usually a drop in market prices a year after a movie, I'm not sure a single movie-driven instant key has returned to the lower prices seen before any pre-production was announced. Let's see what happens in a few decades when the nostalgia grows from the fans with their own growing up to do.

Variety of Variants: The comic book market has always had variant covers. Marvel Comics (#1) from 1939 exists with a cover that says "OCT" and variant that says "NOV". It was a second printing in November. That might not qualify as a variant for some collectors, but the marvel.com website notes them as variants. Superman #1 from 1939 had three printings, but there doesn't seem to be any way to tell them apart. You can be assured that Superman #1 will be discussed by its variants when we know which is which. Nothing has changed about these 1939 books, but the industry has changed the meaning of 'variant'. There is now a veritable variety of variant variations. Second printings, cover price changes, foreign editions, title color changes, anniversary reprints, foil, prism, chromium, alternate art, alternate contents, ratio incentives, convention exclusives, retailer exclusives, and even barcode lengths are all now regularly called variants. It's even possible to mix-and-match these descriptors to talk about the regular edition of "Vexing Variant-Man #1 and the chromium alternate art reprint from 5 years later with the extra pages of story exclusive to Foreign Land Comic Shop at the Other-Side-Of-The-World Con". Even as you read this sentence, you know which variant of the Overstreet Guide you're holding.

By Design or By Chance: The market is still adjusting to the number of variants available today. Books which were once unloved reprints, because they were the cheap substitute for a first printing might become highly-valued variants decades later. The final printings of Superman: The Man of Steel #18 regularly sell for more than the first printing, but the Superman #75 Platinum variant is the most valuable of all the Death, Funeral, and Return of Superman storylines. Superman #75 Platinum has been a coveted book since the day it was released as a planned limited edition variant. Superman: The Man of Steel #18 fourth and fifth printings weren't even listed in the Overstreet Guide until recently. Superman #75 Platinum is valuable by design, but Superman: The Man of Steel #18 fourth and fifth printings are valuable by chance. Some final printings for the Superman Death, Funeral, and Return storylines are only now being documented as existing. I don't believe more collectors want a later printing of a comic book than the first printing, but I do believe that the supply of later printings can be low enough to make them more valuable. If the number of copies in each book printing were the same, I have a feeling the first printing would win every time.

What I find myself asking about variants is what the journey for the books has been. Was a variant coveted from the day it was released? Then it has often had a smooth ride, being well-protected and prized by collectors. In the case of Superman #75 Platinum, it was limited and historic, and prized for being both from the first day. In the case of Superman: The Man of Steel #18 fourth and fifth printings, they were ignored for almost 20 years and are like recently-classified endangered species where we can only estimate the number remaining and we don't really know where to look to find them. These are very different journeys to value, and represent the two most common scenarios for higher variant values in the comic book market, planned editions and chance accidents.

The Journey To Today's Market: We see that variants do not currently make any significant impact on the Golden Age market because the journeys to survival for all Golden Age books were similar and driven mostly by chance. Silver Age variants are beginning to be discussed more often in terms of foreign editions, with U.K. pence copies being U.S. creations destined for the U.K. market. Does the fact that they're U.S. creations and scarcer make them candidates for premium value, or does the fact that they depict U.S. superheroes from U.S. publishers in a clearly non-U.S. packaging keep them discounted as they have been for fifty years? The Silver Age U.K. edition debate appears to be heating up. Bronze Age variants are focused primarily on the 30-cent and 35-cent variants of Marvel issues. Because significant quantities of these variants have not been found, it would appear that the endangered species description applies with few believed to be in existence mainly in a few particular geographies. Chance drove the 40-year journeys for Bronze Age variants, with no intentional value being designed into the variants themselves. Add the movie and television series to the discussion and the Star Wars #1 35-cent variant sits high above the market. There is also a growing realization that Star Wars #2 holds the first comic book appearances of Obi-Wan Kenobi, Han Solo, Chewbacca, and the Millennium Falcon, bringing the Star Wars #2 35-cent variant more attention as a result of the latest movies.

Variants for the 1980s and 1990s include later printings for many popular books and collectors are now beginning to notice the differences between direct editions and newsstand editions, with a side task of identifying Canadian editions with price variations. Thinking about the journeys of each type of book, the direct editions mainly took direct paths into caring collections, while newsstand editions often got mangled by the public before being tossed aside or returned unsold for refunds. When the newsstand market was larger than the direct market in the early 1980s, the two types of books may have survived in similar numbers. The direct market grew and later 1980s and 1990s newsstand editions are just beginning to be recognized for the tougher journeys they faced to survive in high grade conditions today. The 1990s explode with the first widely-known planned incentive variants specifically intended to create more initial and secondary market value. Designed retailer incentives dominate the comic market for 1990s and 2000s with newsstand editions and later printings in an early stage of being evaluated. While a barcode on the cover indicated a newsstand in the 1980s, the barcodes on direct editions in the 1990s may be confusing identities today. The difference is actually simple. Both barcodes have 12 numbers on the bottom. Ignore the 12 numbers under a barcode and see how many numbers are on the top right: newsstand editions have 2, direct editions have 5. You can even see the difference in a tiny photo because 2 numbers are skinnier bars than 5 numbers. If there's a diagonal line over a newsstand edition barcode, it's actually an early direct edition. The available supply for newsstand is likely to be the key factor in future value, with the survival in high grade condition being a reflection of chance over two decades rather than intentional protection from the first day of release like most prized retailer incentive variants.

For comics from 2000 to present, the whole market is heavily dominated by ratio incentives for retailers which required the purchase of 20, 50, 100, or any other specific number of regular editions to qualify for one copy of the variant. Ratio incentives are now being driven into the extreme with 1:1000 or higher variants becoming more common and selling for very high prices before they're even printed. Do new comics belong at the same prices as vintage key issues? Retailer exclusive variants are another type of planned variants which are hard to predict. They may be the most limited variant for some comics, but the journey for most copies is almost completely planned in advance. Local shop customers and online buyers usually obtain their copies with ease, even if they pay significantly more than cover price. For other collectors, a retailer exclusive can be like a souvenir from a place they've never visited. Picture someone actively collecting different Las Vegas casino poker chips but never actually leaving Ohio. It's hard to imagine wide demand for retailer and convention exclusives when most collectors have never been there. If the artwork catches the imagination of the speculator, however, retailer exclusive values can skyrocket immediately. Time will tell if those variants can sustain their altitude after the speculators move on to other gambles.

Current newsstand editions are actually scarcer now than any time in the past, but the market has not given them much attention. Many collectors don't see any difference between newsstand and direct editions because they often have the same artwork. Newsstands are still unlikely to survive the general public handling and returnable journey as often as direct editions exclusively sold in comic shops. Combine the journey with the lower number printed, and there are reasons to believe newsstands from the late 1980s to present are a class of variant on the cusp of breaking out. Other unexpected value in the future of the market is likely already with us but may be impossible to separate from the current fog of retailer incentives. If I had to throw out a guess about which unintentional variants today may have value tomorrow, I'd say first editions of trade paperbacks may be as overlooked today as the later printings of 1990s comics were 20 years ago.

Arguing... With Myself: I've purposefully ignored the story and interior page contents of the books in most of this variant discussion because ignoring the pages inside appears to be what the market is doing. How else could books from recent years sell repeatedly for thousands of dollars? I honestly don't know whether I should argue that extremely high variant prices belong at the same level as vintage key issues because current demand exceeds the variant supply, or if I should argue that the prices are ridiculous because planned exclusive incentive variant covers are usually wrapped around contents which aren't discussed at all. Have we decided the pages inside don't matter anymore? I honestly don't know whether I should argue that a list of the most valuable comic books of all time should have thousands of vintage issues above comics from recent years or if I should argue that the market decides value and the market has some new books selling above many of the classics. I don't know if I should argue that significant numbers of retailer incentive variants have been known to surface years later making heavy investment in recent variants based on low supply extremely dangerous, or if the risk of future discoveries is lower than the reward of having so few known copies today.

Conclusion: I don't know if these arguments will ever be settled. That leads us back to the disclaimer on this report, about how I'm just one collector who doesn't know much anyway, but I do appreciate the time you've taken to read all my ignorance.

STEVEN HOUSTON & JOHN DOLMAYAN TORPEDO COMICS STEVEN HOUSTON

The rumors are true! Torpedo Comics has finally opened up its first traditional comic store in Las Vegas, located at 8775 Lindell Rd, unit 150, Las Vegas, Nevada, 89139. The store went 'live' at 10am on Wednesday, August 24th, after ten days of Facebook announcements. The store represents a bold experiment for our company, as both John and I were determined to open a traditional comic store, devoid of gaming with all of its paraphernalia and customer base. There are about ten serious comic stores in Las Vegas, with most offering gaming products, with some having gaming and various role-playing games as their main focus. It was not our intent to compete with other stores within the gaming arena and as such, we stocked our store with 30,000 back issues (1980-2016) on the main floor with a special vintage room containing another 8,000 books (1955-79) as well as a healthy compliment of high-end CGC books. We received some well-meaning advice regarding the amount of space we allocated to back issues, with the main thrust of comments being that stores don't need that many back-issues anymore, due to the vast selection of trade paperbacks and hardcovers available to readers. With a full understanding of the advice, we proceeded with our large back-issue selection format anyway, trying to create a niche for ourselves here in Las Vegas, where there are currently no stores that feature back-issues as a specialty. I will have an update on the success/failure of this retail technique next year – watch this space!

As I write this report, Torpedo Comics is one day removed from its grand opening (December 3rd), an event, which in my humble opinion exceeded all expectations. For the entire month preceding the big day, we used both Facebook and digital billboards around town to advertise the event. We also created special access passes for those that wanted them, with seventeen lucky fans getting the chance to have lunch with Jim Lee, before heading to the store for the actual signing. We had close to five-hundred people for the signing, which took place from 2-6pm, without a hitch, a testament to our organization and pre-planning – not bad for our first signing! Now that the Jim Lee signing is behind us, we will be having many more signings in the months to come, hopefully making Torpedo Comics in Las Vegas the place to be for comic fans.

On a personal front, with the opening of the store, I had to step back into the contemporary world of new issues, with all the resulting ramifications (dealing with Diamond Comics) of running a comic store. We hired a store manager, but the ordering and basic functions of the store are my responsibility, something I had not done since the year 2000. Suddenly I found myself back in the world of new issues, having to research a multitude of publishers and having to gauge how many issues of each title we should order, without driving the store into the red. The main advantage of this situation for me was once again having my 'finger on the pulse' of new issues and once again joining the fast moving world of contemporary publishing.

New Issue Sales: I won't be going into much detail here, since we have only been open since August, but what I have discovered is extremely enlightening, but also alarming. As a fan of Marvel since the early 1980s, I've seen the Marvel Universe go through change after change, all in an effort to increase sales and up until a few years ago I was able to follow my favorite characters. That all changed within the last two-years, as formally favorite characters have undergone drastic changes – the result: Simple, as a fan I simply dropped whatever book I no longer found interesting. Fast-forward to today and it's my job to order product for the store – the result: It seems like I'm not alone in dropping titles. Our Marvel sales have been dismal, so low that I actually spoke to other dealers to see if it was just our area. If the low sales in our store are any indication of a nationwide trend, then Marvel is in trouble, but before they can 'fix' the problem, they will have to acknowledge that they actually have one.

Here's my brief theory as to why Marvel sales have dropped so much: Too much change too quickly. Let me explain further: Take a look at the drastic changes certain Marvel characters have undergone in the past few years – Thor is a woman, the Hulk is a Korean boy, Iron Man is a sixteen-year old girl and the Fantastic Four are no more and that's just the icon characters. When one takes the Marvel Universe as a whole, there seems to be an attempt in 2015-2016 to revamp their characters giving them a younger appeal, the business model is obvious to see – now is the time to bring in the next generation of Marvel fans. What seems odd to many is that Marvel did not have to look too far to get an example of trying to push your audience too far too fast, yes! - I'm talking about the now failed New 52 DC Universe. Sales had drifted so low that DC initiated yet another reboot, the so-called DC Rebirth, bringing back many elements of the pre-New 52 Universe, apparently to fans satisfaction as sales have increased. We can confirm the good reception for 'rebirth' material, as our sales keep going up week after week, while over on the Marvel titles, all I seem to do is drop order numbers, or even more drastic, drop entire titles from our Diamond Comics order. Next year I will be able to give a much more thorough accounting of new issue sales and trends, I just hope Marvel has come to its senses by then.

Silver Age Sales: Selected recent sales: Tales to Astonish #27 CGC 5.0, Fantastic Four #52 CGC 9.0 and Iron Man #1 CGC 9.0 for $8500 (convention sale), Fantastic Four #52 CGC 4.0 $500, Eternals #1 CGC 9.8 $300, Amazing Spider-Man #121 CGC 9.4 $1250, Amazing Spider-Man #122 CGC 9.4 $800, Showcase #30 CGC 8.0 $2300, Strange Tales #128 CGC 9.0 $200 (all store sales) Raw sales in store: Amazing Spider-Man #5 GD- $200, #8 GD $150, #9 GD/VG $300, #14 VG $450, #59 VF- $80, Avengers #7 VG+ $100, Batman #173 VF+ $115, Captain America #100 FN- $200, Daredevil #1 GD/VG $750, #16 FN/VF $100, Fantastic Four #4 VG- $1400, #12 FN- $1000, #36 VG/FN $125, #49 VG+ $160, Flash #145 FN/VF $60, #185 VF+ $50, Iron Man #1 FN- $350, Justice League of America #32 FN+ $50, Marvel Super-Heroes #12 VF $250, Strange Tales #108 VG $65, #118 VG+ $40, #128 VG+ $50, #161 VF- $48, #163 VF- $52, Thor #147 VF- $50, #164 VF+ $100, #167 VF- $35, #170 VF+ $80, X-Men #1 FR (cover detached) $700, #21 VF+ $150.

For the last five months we have noticed a downward trend in sales of our higher price CGC eBay books, not for lack of trying on the customers' part, as I have personally turned down countless low-ball offers on many of our books.

Silver Age Report: As usual it's all about the keys! Keys, keys and yet more keys. Amazing Fantasy #15 has surged back again, after a period of about a year when everyone seemed to go Incredible Hulk #1 crazy. Interestingly, a month before this report was written, the Dr. Strange movie was released to both fan and critical acclaim, while down here – in comic land, sales of the Doctor's first appearance in Strange Tales #110 have been relatively calm, with the major heat on this issue being two years ago. One book that seems to disappear as soon as it surfaces these days is Journey Into Mystery #103 – the first appearance of the Enchantress, a character rumored to make an appearance in the next Thor movie Ragnarok, slated for release in November 2017. We have not had a copy, even in low grade, for more than two years. Another character who is rumored to appear in the next Thor movie is the Grandmaster, however his first appearance in Avengers #69 has not exploded in demand and price yet, still holding close to the $200 mark for a NM- copy. Regardless of movie connections, Marvel's Silver Age product is still the most sought after, with low grade key issues selling for 2 to 5 times Guide prices – I dare you to price a good condition copy of Amazing Fantasy #15 for Guide price at your next show ($5500), the book will be purchased by another dealer so fast, it will make your head spin. Then the book would be sent in for pressing and grading, hoping for a 2.5, maybe 3.0 or if the stars have aligned, maybe a 3.5, then that book will be priced at between $17,000 and $20,000! That's the current state of key issue collecting in today's world, so if you do have un-pressed, unrestored keys, get to work, your books will be much in demand.

Over to DC Comics for a moment, their next movie blockbusters will be both Wonder Woman and Justice League. Wonder Woman's Silver Age sales have remained calm as always, as the real hot books for the Amazonian are from the Golden Age, however the Justice League's first appearance in Brave and the Bold #28 has not exploded as one would think. The fact that not many of these issues are coming out of the woodwork maybe hurting upward sales momentum, as anything above VF seems to be impossible – a thing of myth! Prices are going up for lower grades, from GD- through VG, which seems to be the only conditions available to collectors at this time. Showcase #4 (the first Silver Age Flash) seems to be in the same situation as Brave and the Bold #28, with a few sales in the lower grades, but even with a successful television series, this book is so scarce and expensive that 99.9% of all Flash fans have already taken that book out of their collecting equation. In terms of collector heat, for me, Silver Age product has lost a little steam for the regular collector, who seem to have absconded to the Bronze Age of comics.

Bronze Age Sales: Selected Raw sales: Action Comics #266 VG- $55, #304 FN/VF $45, Avengers #112 VG- $45, #118 VF $60, Annual #7 VF- $50, Batman #234 VG- $50, Batman Family #6 VG $40, #9 VF/NM $80, Captain Marvel #52 NM- $30, #62 NM- $20, Conan #8 VF+ $65, #25 NM $50, Daredevil #111 VF- $45, Defenders #1 VG $40, Fantastic Four #122 VF+ $40, Flash #202 NM $40, #208 VF+ $45, #211

VF- $40, #215 VF $45, #219 VF+ $50, Godzilla #1 VF-20, #18 VF+ $20, Iron Fist #10 VF/NM $40, Marvel Spotlight #7 VF $60, Star Wars #1 VG $30, Superman's Girlfriend Lois Lane #118 VF/NM $40, #137 VF- $25, Thor #174 VF/NM $70, #220 VF/NM $40, Wonder Woman #200 FN/VF $70, X-Men #94 FN- $275, #103 VF- $85, #104 VF/NM $100, #108 VF- $60, #112 VF/NM $90, #121 FN/VF $50, #125 VF- $40. CGC sales: Avengers #196 9.8 $450, 9.6 $150 (x2), Daredevil #158 9.4 $150, Ghost Rider #1 6.5 $175, Nova #1 9.0 $100, Superman's Pal Jimmy Olsen #135 9.4 $350, Giant-Size X-Men #1 9.4 $2000.

Bronze Age Report: The Bronze Age market just keeps growing and growing, not only for the obvious keys, but regular issues as well. For many years, books published within the 1976-79 era were easily available, often being found in bulk amounts in various warehouses across the United States. For Marvel, issues such as Black Panther #1 (1977), Devil Dinosaur #1 (1978), Eternals #1 (1976), Human Fly #1 (1977), John Carter Warlord of Mars #1 (1977), Machine Man #1 (1978), Micronauts #1 (1979), Ms. Marvel #1 (1977), Nova #1 (1976), Omega the Unknown #1 (1976), Peter Parker #1 (1976), Rom #1 (1979), Spider-Woman #1 (1978), Shogun Warriors #1 (1979), Star Wars #1, Tarzan #1, 2001: A Space Odyssey #1 (1976) and What If #1 (1977) were easy to find and extremely affordable. From the aforementioned list, six titles have yet to catch on: Human Fly, John Carter, Omega the Unknown, Shogun Warriors, Tarzan and 2001: A Space Odyssey, while Peter Parker #1 can still be found in unopened cases. The hottest title out of the bunch has to be Ms. Marvel, with high-grade

#1's (9.8) selling easily for over $1000! One also has to note that this book has been hot for THREE YEARS and shows little evidence of slowing down. Also astonishing is the fact that the entire 23-issue run is hot, with sales at every show – basically we are unable to keep this book in stock. Marvel has been pushing the Carol Danvers character within the contemporary Marvel Universe (see Civil War II), while Academy Award winner, Brie Larson has been chosen to play Captain Marvel in a 2019 blockbuster.

One of the stars of Captain America: Civil War, the Black Panther is also hot, with issue #1 selling raw (NM-) for $150, with CGC 9.8 copies selling for close to $600. A signature series signed by

Stan Lee broke the $1000 barrier in October of this year. For those of us who have been around awhile, its pretty ironic that issue #1 has become popular in recent years, as it was much maligned in its day, with fans swearing allegiance to the Don McGregor version seen in Jungle Action (#6-24) and loudly swearing off the Kirby version seen in Black Panther #1. The Black Panther title sells well throughout the entire run (#1-15), especially in the higher grades. We sell issue

Ms. Marvel #1 has been hot for 3 years and isn't slowing down with a movie on the way.

#15 (last issue) for $45 in NM-, while issues #2-13 move well at $25 in VF/NM, with NM- copies getting $35 each. Talking of Kirby, his other oddball titles, such as Devil Dinosaur, Eternals and Machine Man issue #1s are beginning to pick up, while the first appearance of Machine Man in 2001: A Space Odyssey #8 is close to being a $100 book these days. Star Wars has roared back to collecting life this past two years, with issue #1 still a hot commodity with true NM- 9.2 copies selling for $300 ($100 over Guide) at this time. This book, along with Ms. Marvel #1 are instantly picked up in NM- condition by dealers and collectors for pressing, making the 9.2 condition hotter than a 9.8 condition book (with both Ms. Marvel #1 and Star Wars #1 selling for just over $1000 in 9.8 condition). The first six issues of Star Wars sell extremely well at over Guide for NM- 9.2 condition copies, yet another modern day collecting aberration, as back in the day, stores and conventions were 'swimming' in these issues, while collectors/readers were purchasing copies in multiples off the rack.

While collectors snatch up as many copies of Ms. Marvel as they can find, they seem to have lost patience with Nova, as 9.8 copies of issue #1, have dropped from a high of $900 in 2014, down to $400 today, with other issues of the run (#2-25) not moving nearly as fast as a Ms. Marvel back-issue. The second Guardians of the Galaxy movie is coming out in summer 2017, maybe there will be a slight Nova appearance in the movie, or a brief appearance in Avengers: Infinity War, causing collectors to look at this book again, but as for right now, Nova has cooled off considerably. As for the three 'toy' titles, Micronauts, Rom and Shogun Warriors, Rom #1 seems to be the book most in demand. Currently the Guide lists NM- copies at $65, however we price them at $100, with CGC 9.8 copies going for over $300. We price NM- copies of Micronauts #1 at $30 and Shogun Warriors #1 at $20, although to be honest demand for Shogun Warriors is rather lackluster.

As for DC, Batman holds sway over the entire DC Comics output from the mid-to-late Bronze Age period, in fact, one can say that perhaps in no other era, does Batman have such dominance over the rest of 'his' fellow DC titles. Without being too controversial, one can say that DC's output from 1976 through 1979 was rather uninspired, as evidenced by a lack of collector activity for anything other than Batman. Regarding new titles collectors have All-Star Comics (1976), Batman Family (late 1975), Blackhawk (#244, 1976), Black Lightning (1977), DC Comics Presents (1978), DC Special Series (1977), DC Super-Stars (1976), Firestorm (1978), Freedom Fighters (1976), Jonah Hex (1977), Karate Kid (1976), Kobra (1976), Men of War (1977), Secret Society of Super-Villains (1976), Starfire (1976), Star Hunters (1977), Super Friends (1976) and Warlord (1976). From the aforementioned list, the only issues that really had any collector appeal, or were even requested on occasion, were Batman Family #6 (first Joker's daughter, August 1976) and issue #9, which features a wonderful Batgirl vs. the Joker's daughter cover. We sold a VG+ copy of issue #6 for $40 and a nice VF/NM copy of issue #9 for $80! (Note the current NM-Guide price is $65).

The other DC book that we get asked for from this time period is DC Super-Stars #17 (November 1977), the first appearance of the Earth-2 Huntress. This is one of those issues where condition is everything, as due to the size of the issue (52 pages), the spine loves to turn, making true NM- copies harder to find than one thinks. We sold a VF+ copy for $100, not bad when one considers that the current Guide price for a VF is $54! The sad thing is that both aforementioned issues are related to Batman – the only character that fans seem interested to collect within the mid-to-late Bronze Age of the DC Universe.

Moving into the earlier Bronze Age period (1970-75), this is where collectors and speculators are pouring hundreds and thousands of dollars into the hobby, mainly purchasing Marvel keys. Yes, once again, Marvel is the king of this era, but DC does have some more than just key Batman and Detective issues to locate, including genres other than super-heroes, such as war, western and horror. Before I delve into DC, let's get back to Marvel for the moment and talk about the top three books of the 1970-75 era: Incredible Hulk #181 (first full Wolverine), Giant-Size X-Men #1 (first New X-Men) and Iron Man #55 (first Thanos). Demand for Hulk #181s has not abated, in fact, sales of mid-grade copies are now outstripping the higher grades due to the massive price differential. Forget about keeping raw copies in stock, in any grade, they sell – immediately. We sell GD (2.0) copies for $500 and unless the actual copy is beyond ugly, a dealer will purchase the book for $500. In fact, all grades except 9.8 are still on the upward swing, with 9.6 copies getting the most heat. This is due to pressing of course, as dealers, collectors, speculators and investors are all seeking out that perfect 9.6 copy – by 'perfect', I'm referring to a book that has the potential to be a 9.8. The demand for 9.6 copies is reaching critical mass, as CGC copies are cracked, sent in and pressed and then, if need be cracked again and again and again. The winner in all of this? CGC and CBCS of course, the loser (long term) are the collectors who may be destroying high grade copies as time passes by with all the incessant pressing (and other currently legal restorations). In my humble opinion, the CGC census may already be irrelevant, as countless 9.6 copies are turned into 9.8s.

Giant-Size X-Men #1 and Iron Man #1 are still hot, while Hero For Hire #1 (1972) is blazing hot, with a sale recently of a 9.8 copy for the ridiculous sum of $24,000! (Note – this book guides at $900 in NM- 9.2) I would have to say that at this moment, the demand for Hero For Hire #1s outstrips the demand for Incredible Hulk #181s, something that becomes quite obvious when one compares CGC census totals between the two issues. To date, Incredible Hulk #181 has 98 certified 9.8 copies, while Hero For Hire #1, has only 11 copies graded at 9.8. Hero For Hire #1 has become one of those "perfect storm" books, meaning that: (1) After a long period of time, collectors have suddenly decided that they NEED this issue, (2) Collectors have discovered that high-grade copies of this book are akin to “hens teeth” with that dark cover seemingly begging to crease and (3) Popularity has exploded further, due to a critically acclaimed television series which has driven demand to almost hysterical levels. We did not see a high-grade copy of this book all year, instead having to make do with a FN- copy, which I priced at $200. The book Guides at $108 in FN, but that did not matter, at the first show we showcased the book it was the first book to sell off our wall.

As for other keys published in this era, the sheer amount of quality material is enough to boggle the mind, the following books are what we at Torpedo put on our Bronze Age wall: (Marvel) Amazing Adventures #11 (first new Beast), Amazing Spider-Man #96-98 (drug issues), #100 (anniversary issue), #101 (first Morbius), 119-120 (Hulk issues), #121 (death Gwen Stacy), #122 (death Green Goblin), #129 (first Punisher), #136 (first Harry Osborn Goblin), #149 (first Clone), Astonishing Tales #25 (first Deathlok), Avengers #83 (first Lady Liberators – HOT), #93 (Giant Kree/Skull War), #100 (Barry Smith), #112 (first Mantis – HOT), #116-118 (Avengers/Defenders), #125 (Thanos), Captain Marvel #25 (Starlin), #28 (Thanos cover – HOT), #33 (Thanos war conclusion), Champions #1, Conan #1, Daredevil #131 (first Bullseye), Defenders #1, #10 (Thor vs. Hulk), Dr. Strange #1 (1974), Fantastic Four #100 (anniversary issue), #112 (Hulk vs. Thing), Fear #10 (Man-Thing), #20 (Morbius), Frankenstein #1, Ghost Rider #1, Incredible Hulk #141 (first Doc Samson), #180-182 (Wolverine appearances), Annual #5 (Groot appearance), Inhumans #1 (1975), Invaders #1, Iron Fist #1, Iron Man #55, Jungle Action #6 (Black Panther), Man-Thing #1, Marvel Super Special #1, 5 (Kiss), Marvel Feature #1 (first Defenders), #4 (Ant-Man), Marvel Premiere #1 (Warlock), #3 (Dr. Strange – HOT), #15 (first Iron Fist – HOT), Marvel Preview #2 (Punisher), #4 (Starlord), #7 (Rocket Raccoon), Marvel Spotlight #2 (first Werewolf), #5 (first Ghost Rider), Marvel Team-Up #1 (HOT in high grade), Marvel Two-in-One #1, Savage Sword of Conan #1, Savage Tales #1 (first Man-Thing), Special Marvel Edition #15 (first Master of Kung-Fu), Strange Tales #169 (first Brother Voodoo – HOT in high-grade), #178 (Warlock), #180 (first Gamora), Sub-Mariner #34, 35 (Defenders), Supernatural Thrillers #5 (first Living Mummy), Tomb of Dracula #1, #10 (first Blade), Warlock #1, Werewolf by Night #1, #32 (first Moon Knight – HOT), X-Men #94, 95, 97. We have had nearly all of these books in the last year, with the hottest books being either Hero For Hire #1, or Werewolf by Night #32. We sold a VG-copy of Werewolf by Night #32 for $150 – no questions (or discounts asked). Television exposure has increased interest in Iron Fist’s first appearance in Marvel Premiere #15, while the hit Dr. Strange movie has increased demand for nice copies of Marvel Premiere #3 and Dr. Strange #1. As of writing the second movie preview from Guardians of the Galaxy 2 has hit social media, increasing interest in Avengers #112 – the first appearance of Mantis, while Valkyrie’s appearance in Avengers #83 momentarily shot up in price as rumors to her role in the Thor: Ragnarok movie swept through the internet.

DC’s comic universe of the early to mid 1970s contains less key issues, but some of the issues are in extreme high demand: All-Star Western #10 (first Jonah Hex), Batman #227 (cover swipe of Detective #31 – HOT), #232 (first Ra’s al Ghul), #234 (first modern Two-Face), #251 (classic Joker issue), Demon #1, Detective Comics #400 (first Man-Bat), #411 (first Talia), Forever People #1 (first full Darkseid), Ghosts #1, Green Lantern #76 (Neal Adams), #85 (drug issue), House of Secrets #92 (first Swamp Thing), Joker #1, Kamandi #1, Mister Miracle #1, New Gods #1, Shazam #1, Supergirl #1, Superman #233 (classic Neal Adams cover), Superman’s Girlfriend Lois Lane #106 (Black Lois Lane), Superman’s Pal Jimmy Olsen #134 (first Darkseid), Swamp Thing #1, Weird War Tales #1 and Wonder Woman #199, 200 (Jeff Jones covers). The upcoming Justice League movie is sparking interest in Darkseid’s appearances, as well as sparking some interest in Jack Kirby’s ‘Fourth World’ stories, but as usual in this era, Batman is king. Those trying to put together high-grade runs of early 1970s Batman and Detective had better get used to paying over Guide, sometimes, way over Guide to complete such a task – especially when one is talking about the Neal Adams’ issues, which show no signs of slowing down at this time.

This modern section has proven very successful, with most sales coming from our new store. Books that do not get a second look at shows are moving successfully at the store, a testament to our faith in back issue sales at Torpedo Comics.

1980s Back Issue Report: If you've read through my reports regarding the 1990s and up, you may have noticed no mention regarding condition, with customers expecting NM- 9.2 copies at the very least, something that is easily achievable, even the most cost-conscious collector. However, comics published during the 1980s are no longer easily available in higher conditions, especially if you collect issues between 1980-84. Now to be clear, I'm not saying most 1980s comics are scarce in high grade, far from it, as evidenced by dollar bin sales at conventions where tens of thousands of comics published during the 1980s are still readily available. At the Wizard World Chicago two years ago, I was astonished to see a "big-time" dealer, actually picking up handfuls of 1980s comics from another dealer who was selling comics for a dollar. I quickly noticed that the issues were clean, as if they had been printed yesterday and began to pick up piles of the books for Torpedo. Within minutes I saw other "big-time" dealers and speculators pulling issues out of the boxes, each glaring at the issues, obviously seeking out potential 9.8 copies. How things have changed, as I know that just a few years ago, those same dealers would have scoffed at the dollar books and walked by, with a stack of Gold, Silver or Bronze Age keys under their arms.

What I found fascinating were what titles and more specifically, the era of those titles that were being pulled. Within thirty minutes, nearly every book from 1980-1983 was gone, except for the Action Comics, Alpha Flight, Fantastic Four, Superman, Warlord and World's Finest. I scooped up nice runs of Avengers, Doctor Strange, Flash, Marvel Team-Up, Marvel Two-in-One, Micronauts and New Mutants. The above scenario seemingly proves a theory of mine, a theory developed over years of purchasing bulk books from store closeouts, storage locations and even warehouse purchases. In terms of obscene amounts of bulk copies (300-1000 copies), I rarely see those numbers for comics published pre-1984. I've had the odd single issue such as 300 copies of Moon Knight #1 (1980), but when it comes to issue after issue of large bulk numbers, I've discovered that after 1984 and especially by 1986, many issues can still be found in huge amounts. The only problem is that many of the issues are not NM- 9.2 copies anymore, more like VF/NM or VF+ copies, after years of being stored in less than satisfactory conditions. In fact, 90% of our higher-grade 1980s issues are not from warehouse or store stock, but private collections.

Okay, with that said, what's actually selling? For DC, its obvious – Batman and Batman, followed by more Batman. We price 9.2 copies of Batman (non-key issues) at $25 ranging from issue #319-350, which is a full $10 over Guide. Batman collectors with an eye for quality have no problem paying over Guide for clean copies and pay way over Guide for the 1980s Batman keys: #357 (first Jason Todd) an easy sale at $250 in NM- shape, #366 (Jason Todd as Robin, Joker appearance) $50, #368 (first new Robin in costume) $45, #386 (first Black Mask) $100, #400 (Anniversary issue, 1986) $50, #404 (first Miller Year One) $45, #426 (Death in the Family) $35, #428 ('Death' of Robin) $60, #442 (first Timothy Drake as Robin, 1989) $15. Also still hot is the Dark Knight, with issue #1 an easy $150 in NM-, while issue #4, featuring the classic red Superman cover has now eclipsed issue #2-3, with NM- copies selling for $45. Batman: The Killing Joke (first print, 1988) sells easily for $100 in raw NM- 9.2 condition, while CGC 9.2 copies are a tougher sale, with collectors seeking out the higher grades, which speaks to another facet of 1980s comic collecting – pressing. The Killing Joke is a great example of how things have turned 180 degrees regarding high grades, potential for higher grades and locked in grades. Once the grade has been locked in, say 9.8, I'm seeing resistance from many collectors/speculators/amateur dealers, while a 9.6 has 'potential' to be improved upon. A true NM- copy of The Killing Joke is almost impossible for speculators to resist, as the difference between a 9.2 and a 9.8 is significant, while a 9.9 grade will garner a huge financial windfall. Thus, a potential purchaser will give a raw copy a full review, seeking out any minor flaw that can be removed by pressing. As soon as the collector spies a potential 'fatal flaw' – or a flaw that locks the book in at 9.2, they will put the book back, realizing there is nothing to be gained from that copy. This technique holds true for CGC copies as well, with 9.8s sitting on wall displays, gathering dust, while other dealers and convention attendees check 9.6 copies again and again, using their little hand-lights to pour over the books flaws, hoping that there's a chance for improvement via pressing. If the person succeeds in pressing the book from a 9.6 to a 9.8, then that book is placed on eBay, where collectors, who are unable to travel to well-stocked shows, or stores, will jump on the chance to purchase a 9.8 copy of what they are looking for. This financial gain on each book after successful grading and pressing can be immense, creating a modern day 'gold rush', as skilled graders pour over CGCs looking for that great deal, either to turn via eBay, or on the rare occasion, to upgrade their own copy.

Returning once again to what collectors are looking for in 1980s comics, as I've stated before, DC has Batman, but little else. Watchmen has gained further attention after dropping off the dizzy heights of 2008-09, when the movie sent collectors into a frenzy. For those that know, DC's most recent re-boot, 'Rebirth' has significant ties to the Watchmen universe, although as of this writing, DC editorial is cleverly revealing small parts of an ongoing mystery that will one day reveal the connection. As of now, the Watchmen twelve-issue mini-series may not be the purely self-contained universe within the comic industry, as it has been since it was originally published in 1986-87, but rather a series that features key moments in the current DC Universe – watch this space! On a dourer note, the 1980s DC Universe contains whole swaths of back-issues that simply sit, slowly being covered with dust, even when discounted. All Superman titles, Brave and the Bold, Legion of Super-Heroes, most non-Alan Moore issues of Swamp Thing, Hawkman and most Justice League of America issues (after 1984) are seemingly invisible to collectors. Flash sales have improved due to the exposure of the successful television show, especially on issues #324-350 (1983-85), particularly issues #324-325 (Reverse Flash appearances). New Teen Titans #2 (first Deathstroke) is still hot, with CGC 9.8 copies hovering around the $600 price, however, more importantly, collectors seem to be purchasing other copies of the 1980-84 run, dare I say it – putting the run together! Clean copies is the name of the game here, as there are hundreds of thousands of these issues in circulation, as it was one of the most heavily ordered titles of the entire 1980s, so if you have FN/VF copies you are out of luck, NM and above are required for this series. I sell raw issue #1 NM- copies for $80, issues #3-9 for $20 each, issue #10 (second Deathstroke) for $30. Issues #11 up are extremely common, so unless the issue is NM- 9.2 or above, I don't sell them. Suicide Squad #1 (1987) has dropped in price, with 9.8 copies selling for $120, down from a high of high of $550 in 2015. The surprise for me this year has been the lack of interest regarding Wonder Woman, quite astonishing when one considers that she appeared in the Batman v Superman movie and her own project has already excited fans with what looks like a quality preview.

Marvel's output from the 1980s fares a lot better than DC at this time, with a much more diverse series of titles that actually sell. As for the classic runs of books, Amazing Spider-Man is still king, while X-Men seems to have slipped in recent years, possibly the result of less than stellar sales on current day X-Men issues? Much the same as DC's 1980s output, Marvel's comics from 1980-83 are getting harder to find in true NM- 9.2 conditions, unless the collection is purchased from a private collector. Good examples of runs that are getting harder to replace in high grade are: Avengers #191-230, Captain America #241-283, Incredible Hulk #243-279, Iron Man #130-169 and Thor #291-336. If we do get nice NM- copies of the aforementioned issues I price the books over Guide, with 9.4 copies at 3 times Guide and 9.6 or above singled out for CGC. Let's be clear here, none of the aforementioned runs are rare, in fact, they are extremely common in lower grades (VF- and below) with many copies in FN being seen in dollar bins at shows, but with trade paperbacks replacing 'reading copies' of these books, collectors who are putting these runs together want clean NM- 9.2 or higher conditions.

Other titles that seem to be picking up (if the books are nice) are: Power Man and Iron Fist, Rom, Star Wars and Transformers. With the latter two titles, it's not hard to see why sales would be good, however Rom is a true collecting anomaly. This book was found in huge amounts for years with cases of each issue found in warehouse and store backrooms around the country for years. Over the last five years, collectors have been putting runs together, forced to purchase the originals, due to the fact that no trade paperbacks are currently available for the run. Once again, thousands of mid-grade copies of Rom still fill discount bins across the United States, but those clean 9.2 or 9.4 issues are not so common anymore. While searching eBay over the course of a year, I saw a range of prices for the set #1-75 plus the four annuals, but never a set advertised as NM. Most of the sets were VF, or FN to VF, with prices of $200 through $300 for the set! Yes, we are talking about Rom here – not X-Men, or Amazing Spider-Man, but Rom, a book that was thought of as a joke for years. Doctor Strange issues have bumped a little in sales, especially issues #39-62, with Guide prices ranging from $6 to $4 each, these issues are a steal right now. I fully expect the price to go up with the next Guide, as I am already pricing NM- 9.2 copies of #39-49 at $10 each with issue #60 (Dracula & Scarlet Witch cover) priced at $15 in NM- 9.2. Compared to DC's output in the 1980s, Marvel's product sells over a much more diverse series of titles, from Star Comics Ewoks to Rocket Raccoon, all the usual icon super-hero titles and the licensed hits such as Star Wars. 1980s Marvel is indeed thriving, as long as the book is high grade!

1990s Back Issue Report: What a strange era for comics, on one hand we have super-hot comics like New Mutants #98 (first Deadpool, 1991) and Batman Adventures #12 (first Harley Quinn, 1993), we have critically acclaimed series like Sandman, Starman and Bone, while on the other hand, we have warehouses (and storage locations) full of X-Men #1 (1991) and Turok #1 (1993). Something strange has been happening this last year, mainly on eBay, which directly affects 1990s comics – that being the rise in cost (or minimum bid) on multiple titles that were once worthless. The best example of this must be the Guardians of the Galaxy series from 1990-1995, a series that has constantly been way above my purchasing price for the last two years. The series began as a hot book in 1990, but by 1992, this book was considered a second-tier title, if that, the proof being in the late 1990s when I was dealing with bulk comics, I found tens of thousands of Guardians issues. What I realized later, was that I was finding the same issues, again and again, usually issues #6-46. Here we are in 2016 and collectors have been trying to put this run together and have found the last twelve issues are not as easily found as the rest, thus when 'full runs' are put up on eBay, it's usually #1-45, not #1-62 and the four annuals. To some this may sound preposterous, but I had a customer ask me a year ago to get him a full set of clean NM issues, his budget being $100. I found a few sets, but he had to pay more, almost $200 for a true NM set! Regarding the usual 1990s collectible or at least desirable issues, Amazing Spider-Man #361 (first full Carnage, 1992) is a $100 in NM- raw condition, X-Men #366 (first Gambit, 1990), is a $200 in NM- raw condition, Preacher #1 has cooled in recent months, with NM copies (raw) getting $200, while 9.8 copies now range in at the $500 mark, way down from last year. Once again, collectors and speculators need to know that when it comes to a modern book, the price will explode for a few months and then as soon as more high grade copies come out of the woodwork, the price will fall – every time!

As for the mainline Marvel titles, runs of Captain America, Daredevil, Fantastic Four, Incredible Hulk, Iron Man, Spider-Man, Thor and the X-Men have to be discounted heavily to move, with a few issues being considered good enough to “collect”, such as Captain America #360 (first Crossbones) and Iron Man #282 (first War Machine). DC has Batman, but not the mainline title, which was produced in huge amounts, but rather titles such as Batman Adventures (1992-1995), which collectors have discovered, were not printed in such large amounts. Annual #1 from 1994 is an easy sell for $45 in NM shape, while Batman Adventures: Mad Love is still a hot issue, with the first print easily being $100 in NM-, even the prestige format version, which used to be seen everywhere now sells for $30 or more. Batman and Robin Adventures (1995-1997) sells well, especially issue #8, which features Poison Ivy and Harley ($25 in NM-). Batman Beyond #1 (1999) has become a hot book in recent years, with issue #1 selling for $30 or more in NM- condition. One title that has increased in value recently is Deathstroke the Terminator (1991-1996), especially if one wants to purchase an entire set. Similar to what I already mentioned about the 1990s Guardians of the Galaxy title, the Deathstroke run is garnering extremely high “buy-it-now” prices. Another tough run to put together from DC’s 1990’s era, is Lobo – the series that ran from 1993 to 1999 (#1-64). At the moment, the Overstreet Guide lists many of the issues at $3 each, this has to change, as many of the issues, especially from issue 50 on are not that easy to locate.

Although when many collectors talk about G.I Joe or Transformers, most think of the classic 1980s era, but for those seeking full sets, collectors have to extend those runs into the 1990s, only to discover that the later issues are harder to find than the earlier issues. G.I. Joe issue #96 is dated January 1990, with Transformers hitting the 1990s with issue #62, which leaves a further 59 issues of G.I. Joe and 18 issues of Transformers. Another thing that collectors discover with these issues is the horrible rippled-look of many of the issues, the product of an overzealous printing process, which overcooked the issues. Many collectors/speculators are now pressing these issues, to get clean copies, something that was near impossible ten years ago. We are currently pricing Transformers at $10 for most issues in NM between #96-138, while pricing issue #139 (Transformers cover) at $25. From issue #145 through #155 is where most of the collector heat is, as those wanting full sets looking for clean issues will pay over Guide every day. We price #146-149 at $15 each, with #150, being $25. #151 and #152 in NM- are $30, #153 is $45, #154 is $80 and the last issue, #155 is $125. As for the Transformers, the demand is even higher, with issues #62-80 going for way over Guide in NM-/NM conditions. We price issues #62-69 at $25 for NM- and send higher grades off to CGC immediately. Issue #70 ($30), #71-76 ($45), #77-79 ($60), #80 ($100).

One of the longest running titles to end in the 1990s was Conan the Barbarian, concluding with issue #275 (1993), which we currently price at $75 in NM-. Interestingly, when our store opened its doors in August, this was one of the wall-books that sold right away. Other hot (or at least in higher demand) 1990s books (in NM- condition) include Adventures of Superman #500 Platinum Edition $50, Akira #38 (last issue) $150, Alf #48 (controversial rape cover) $125, Batman Adventures #12 (1993, first Harley Quinn) $700, Birds of Prey #8 (Nightwing appearance, 1999) $75, Bloodshot #0 Gold Edition $50, #51 (last issue) $100, Bone #1 (1991, first print) $1000, Deadpool #1 (1997) $80, Elseworlds 80-page Giant (1999), $200, Evil Ernie #1 (Eternity, 1991, first Lady Death), Flash #92 (1994, first Impulse) $60, Ghost in the Shell #1 (1995) $200, Gold Digger #1 (1992) $100, Harbinger #0 (Pink edition, 1993) $60, Harbinger #1 (1992) $80, Incredible Hulk #377 (1991, Third Print) $200, Iron Man #282 (1992, first War Machine) $35, Johnny the Homicidal Maniac #1 (1995) $150, Lady Death #1 (1994) $40, Liberty Meadows #1 (1999) $35, Lobo #64 (1999, last issue) $30, Lone Wolf and Cub #45 (1991, last issue) $30, Marvel Super-Heroes #8 (1991, first Squirrel Girl – I’m not kidding!!) $75, Milk & Cheese #1 (1991) $150,

Miracleman #24 (1993, last issue) $40, New Mutants #98 (1991, first Deadpool) $250, Next Men #21 (1993, first full comic book appearance of Hellboy) $90, 100 Bullets #1 (1999) $45, Preacher #1 (1995) $200, Savage Sword of Conan #235 (1995, last issue) $60, Silver Surfer #44 (first Infinity Gauntlet) $75, Solar Man of the Atom #10 (1992 – no fingerprints please!) $45, Spider-Man #1 (1990, Platinum Edition) $250, Spider-Man #1 (Gold second print w/UPC code) $225, Strangers in Paradise #1 (1993) $250, Tank Girl #1 (1991) $45 – okay, this price needs to be changed in the guide, Transmetropolitan #1 (1997) $50, Venom: Lethal Protector #1 (Gold) $75, (Black Cover/printing error edition) $600, What If? #105 (1998, first Spider-Girl) $30, Wolverine #145 (1999, Nabisco variant) $250, Wonder Woman #72 (1993, classic Brian Bolland cover) $25 – price change, price change!!

I would be remiss if I did not mention Marvel’s 1990s cosmic era – specifically, those issues featuring the mad Titan, Thanos who will be seen on tens of thousands of big screens around the world within a few years. Speculation is still running rampant, not only within the comic reading community, but across entertainment outlets worldwide, as to what movies will feature a Thanos appearance, cameo or scene. Speculation explodes to new levels when one talks about the individual Infinity Gems or the actual Infinity Gauntlet and where or how it will be utilized within Marvel's cinematic universe, however, within the world of comics, such appearances are already set in stone. The amazing thing about the actual gauntlet's first appearance, in Silver Surfer #44 (1990) is that it was not until last year's Overstreet (volume #46) that it was actually annotated. Only a few years ago this issue was listed in $5 in the Guide, with only the headline "Thanos cover" but what a difference a few years make. Currently, a CGC 9.8 sells constantly for around $300, while speculators and pressing aficionado are scooping up any nice looking raw copies for between $75 and $100. Infinity Gauntlet #1-6 still sell very well, above Guide in fact, an amazing thing when one considers the massive print-run each issue had. The Guide lists issue #1 at $35 in NM-, however, for us a price of $45 is more reasonable, due to the fact that if we price the book lower, it's purchased by other dealers right away. The Guide lists issues #2-6 at $15, however, we always price issue #6 higher, from $20 to $25 depending on the quality of the issue. Sales of Infinity War initially went through the roof a year ago, however prices have stabilized in recent months, as news concerning the actual Infinity War movie seem to point to a decidedly different story. Issues #1-4 (#1 $8, #2-4 $5) are plentiful, with issue #1 available in obscene amounts, however issues #5-6 (#5 $10, #6 $12) were not ordered as heavily and as such, we price them higher than #1-4. The same scenario holds for Infinity Crusade, with issues #1-4 easily available (#1 $6, #2-4 $5 each), while issues #5 and #6 seem to have been ordered less. We price issue #5 at $7 and issue #6 at $10.

In conclusion, the 1990s era has certainly made a comeback in recent years, with collectors and speculators taking a serious look at 1990s product, comics that were once universally hailed as "junk" are now getting some time back in the limelight. Many collectors are beginning to discover the 1990s have two distinct mini-eras, 1990-1994 and 1995-1999. The first era coincides with the speculation boom, and record breaking print runs, while from 1994, print runs begin to drop as the industry slid into recession as collectors left the market, leaving only hardcore readers. I can't tell you how many times I've purchased collections from the 1990s, nearly all stocked heavily with multiples from 1990-1994, however from my own personal experience many of the 1990s collectors had stopped collecting by 1996 and this may explain why sellers on eBay are getting more bang for their buck selling full, complete runs of 1990s material.

In Conclusion: With all the super-hero product currently available via television and movies, we within the comic business are still experiencing a "Golden Age" of wider pop culture exposure, with everyone seemingly wanting to be involved in super-hero movies, television, or at least be seen at Comic con. For me, I see signs of future problems, mostly with the current direction of creativity and marketing within current new issue product (from Marvel and DC), but one has to understand – right now, more "civilians" are being exposed to our hobby everyday, we need to make sure they have a great time in our world and make it easy for them to hang around.

JOHN DOLMAYAN - TORPEDO COMICS

The Year Of Living Dangerously: 2016 has been a difficult year for trade paperback convention sales, as we saw a major drop at almost every convention with the exception of C2E2 where we saw a 20% increase. With convention prices rising almost yearly we will most likely scale back on our booth space and build a more streamlined booth configuration.

Torpedo's first time displaying at the Amazing Comic Con Hawaii will most likely be its last, with lackluster sales on both trade paperbacks and our high-end Silver/Bronze booths. The show would have been a complete loss if not for major slashing of trade paperback prices that seemed to motivate buyers to open their wallets. The almost non-existent high-end sales coupled with the massive costs associated with transporting to Hawaii essentially assured Torpedo could not take a risk on the show in the foreseeable future.

C2E2 (Chicago): This show continues to outperform nearly every other show in regards to trade paperback sales nearly surpassing San Diego Comic-Con and certainly surpassing SDCC as far as profitability. The convention center is centrally located and well organized bringing in tens of thousands of customers who actually are interested in comics. We are building trust and a reputation for spot on tight grading with the local collectors of Silver-Bronze and high-end investment level CGC/CBCS books increasing sales gradually every year. There is great competition from nearly all high-end Midwest dealers and exceptional buying and trading opportunities all across the board and we enjoy that aspect of this convention as well as the competition to win new clients business.

Emerald City (Seattle): After hearing about this show being the greatest show for back issue sales and high end books flying off the shelves I was shocked to have just an okay show sales wise. The nightmare started when I was informed days before the show that we would be charged drayage by the local mafia otherwise known as either GES or Freeman. For anyone unfamiliar with this, drayage is a charge (by weight) to take your goods from the loading dock of the convention center to your booth. Some conventions work out a deal to spare us those costs and some don't (we usually pass on the ones that don't). This is the reason you haven't seen us at the NYCC and probably never will. After I was informed that we would be given a special discounted rate of $15,000 instead of $30,000 to take our product the nearly 100 feet to our booth (you read that correctly, not around the world, just 100 feet or so to our booth space just inside of the loading docks) we started thinking about canceling the show for the second time in two years. We were informed that at this late hour we would not receive a refund on our booth space so after calming down and evaluating the situation and rather than pay the ridiculous fee I made some calls and arranged an offsite warehouse to transfer everything out of the semi truck and into two Ryder trucks. This was arduous and unnecessary work as well as dangerous as we have large cases that are designed to be forklifted, someone could easily have been injured in the process and we will not undertake it again. At the end of the very slow show we then repeated the process to get our product home. Thankfully we did not pay the extortion and figured a way to navigate around it. In 2017 we are taking a minimal set up that can go in one Ryder truck. Let's hope we do better this time.

Wizard World (Chicago): Our second slowest show of the year and getting worse every year. The local union couldn't be nicer and more helpful showing that unions meant to protect the working man can still benefit the community and companies they provide service to. A well organized convention but our customers spend far too much time waiting in lines for autographs and not enough time walking the floor, giving us a chance to show them our products. We are taking a smaller more streamlined booth configuration in hopes that the organizers can figure something out to get more people on the show floor and out of all day lines. We had some small sales and the trade paperbacks did just okay, but I was able to broker a big deal at the end of the show to a client from the west coast to make the show a break even. Overall very dissatisfied and disappointed in the lack of empathy towards the exhibitors.

Silicon Valley Comic Con (San Jose): Silicon Valley, home of big brains, big bucks, and mediocre sales. Deep in the recesses of the show hidden between two toy dealers at a location Indiana Jones couldn't find was the Torpedo Comics booth. With over 2 million dollars of stock you'd think we would have hit it out of the park at this San Francisco adjacent (one of the best comic book markets) comic con. Unfortunately we had a terrible location, fortunately we found some customers and were able to do just enough business to make a small profit. Steve Wyatt is doing a great job on this growing convention, hope next year goes better.

San Diego Comic Con (San Diego): The best show in the world keeps getting more expensive and we keep making less sales. Trade paperbacks took a massive 30% drop in sales, this is up from the 10% drop of the last three years. There are less people looking for comics or who even know what comics are. Thankfully they rarely venture into the Gold and Silver pavilion where sales have improved every year. With about 50% of our sales to dealers as opposed to 60% of previous years we've seen a steady growth of customer acquisition and a consistent return of customers from previous conventions. We are building our brand and the public's faith in our grading and quality is translating into sales and more sales. San Diego Comic-Con is by far the best organized and most enjoyable convention, but wow, are the booth spaces expensive and getting more so. I'm surprised some exhibitors can afford to do the show and sad to see many old timers have stopped attending altogether. Is it possible to keep a show based on comics that has outgrown the comic industry and become a pop culture monster still comic-centric? Or do we face the inevitable truth that the convention everyone based their conventions on is no longer ours, has transcended our hobby, and is bigger than comics. It will be interesting to see how it evolves and what our place will be in its evolution or possibly devolution.

We are proud to be a part of this industry, and we love comics and the altruistic nature of the heroes portrayed in them. Come share our passion for them at our new store in Las Vegas, Nevada. You won't be disappointed.

JEFF ITKIN ELITE COMIC SOURCE

Hello to everybody reading this, thank you for taking the time. There have been some big changes on my end, but before I get into all that I would like to thank Bob Overstreet and his team, they work so hard to put this guide together every year and we are lucky to have them. Now, back to those changes. The biggest was in the start of this year, where I have branched off on my own again with a new identity in the Comic Marketplace. In the beginning of January 2015 I merged my then existing comic company "Pow Crunch Bang Comics" with a good friend of mine (Ken Dyber of Cloud 9 Comics), and have been half owner of Cloud 9 Comics since. The last couple of years have been a whirlwind, with many great memories and moments, but something was missing. I pulled away from some of the things I really wanted to bring to comic collectors and fans, outside of just great comics. These last 2 years we have been so bogged down with opening a store that the time I could have put towards the fun of being innovative and creative was lost. Therefore, I have started 2 different websites. The first is www.elitecomicssource.com, which will slowly roll out through 2017 as a "Source" for comics and comic art. The second will be www.thecomicsurge.com, which will provide multimedia (podcasts, trailers and more) related information. I hope for it to be informative and interesting, but still a fun and a playful site to visit.

Then and Now: I will just jump right in and say it, no sugar coating here. "Last year was one of the weakest years for back issues and Key sales I have seen in the last 5 years." Of course there were new benchmark prices and gains for some books, as there are every year, but the market overall felt stagnant. This was evident in all genres except early Atomic Age and Golden Age; which makes sense as the ratio of demand for those books is higher than supply. There was a clear and evident push back of demand and pricing in 2016, especially with Keys of all degree, whether it was 1st to 3rd tier. I believe this push back comes from the large base of buyers that entered the market with the comic movie craze. I feel they have begun to educate themselves more and the consumer that sellers have been so accustomed to having the past few years has changed. This group of buyers no longer seems to impulse buy as they have in the past. They have come to the realization that Silver to Modern Age comics are not rare and can be found at any large convention in multiples of multiples. This new thought process stems from their already brief experiences or observations that the Comic Market can have major fluctuations. That it's more difficult for a comic to retain its newly appointed/hyped value than originally expected, especially when driven by a fleeting or trending event such as a TV show or movie.

Though sales were down in 2016, I do think that 2017 will have a resurgence in buyers. Especially with DC's commitment to their cinematic universe with the arrival of long-awaited characters and teams to make their modern movie debuts. It will be a better year, a more diverse (not just Marvel Keys) year in the collectibles market, with more energy at conventions and anticipation and excitement that should carry through for the next few years.

Movies/TV/Cartoons: Last year we saw some big movies hit the theater screen, but 2017 will be one to really set the tone for comic collecting the next 3 years. The introduction and push of DC's characters onto the Silver Screen will be one that all comic fans are eager to see. With the Wonder Woman trailers and quasi-success of Suicide Squad and Batman v Superman it seems like DC is finally figuring out how to make an appealing movie. There is still room for growth on their end if you ask me, as neither Suicide Squad nor Bats v. Sups was outstanding. As expected, Marvel continues to succeed in growing their Universe and pushing their Infinity War story line. Golf clap and kudos to them to constantly keeping us entertained and surprising us with successful interpretations of comic books characters in film.

Current/Modern Age(2003-Now): Going to just touch on this briefly. This span of comics like every new era is an exciting, innovative and fun time for comics. They offer great art, outstanding story lines, and interesting, relatable and lovable characters. It's comforting to see some good things continuing to be published as it's very important to keep readership interest so we can continue to create a future of collectors. DC relaunched their Universe in 2016. It was well received by fans so if you are looking to get back into comics, it may be a great time to start up again.

Most of our strongest sales this last year for the shop were in graphic novels and TPBs. This was consistent with the previous year and a trend I don't see slowing down. A large group of readers can't and don't visit their comic shop every week to pick up their new comics. Instead, most of what we see is a customer coming in once or maybe twice a month to pick up a new trade they either heard about, ones they are currently reading and or ones they would like to try. This is still a great way to keep up to date on what's occurring in the comic world and really the only way I can stay somewhat current of what's happening in the industry. Also, it's a great way to interact with your customers and maybe open their eyes to some new titles.

As far as current comics go, it is the toughest of all time frames to speculate on. With the large number of new comics released every week, a lot of it will come in hot and fast, run its course and burn out quickly. An example of the difficulty of speculating in the market are that the highest grossing sales come from variant covers. When I use the term Variant Cover that is a loaded term as I can't even imagine how many Variant Covers are out there. For the sake of this article, I will say there are 10,000 in the Current Age with more published every week. Some of the top Variants are listed here have very impressive prices: Batman #608 RRP Variant Cover CGC 9.8 $4,050, Ms. Marvel #2 1:50 Molina 2014 Variant CGC 9.8 $2,200, Saga #1 Diamond Retailer Variant CGC 9.8 $1,700, X-23 #1 Variant Dell'otto CGC 9.8 $1,200, and The Dark Knight Returns: The Last Crusade Jim Lee 1:500 CGC 9.8 $1,025 etc. One of the biggest books as well was a more common variant, Captain Marvel #17 2nd print with Kamala Khan on the cover, this is her first appearance and one of the hotter books this past year with pricing around $200-$800 for NM- to NM+. Search eBay finished auction listings for "Variant" and it goes on and on with books you had no idea existed. You can then throw in sketch covers and signatures and it is just too wacky for me to keep up with.

Chrome Age/Steel Age(1992-2003): This is what I am naming it now. I'm tired of over thinking it and waiting for someone to come up with some magical name. It's been almost 25 years since the end of the Copper Age. It's time for a new designation, as far too much has occurred in the comic industry to not create a new divide. From the variety of dynamic covers such as die cut, fold outs and Chrome covers (Chrome Age) to the Death of the Man of Steel (Steel Age). It was a great time frame for innovation of new heroes and a new generation of artist and their styles. It brought us successful publishers such as Image and Valiant and the long line of characters that drove a generation of readers and collectors. Not much going on here that isn't also occurring in the Current/Modern

NYX #3, the debut of X-23, is a high demand book from what could be called the Chrome Age.

Age. Some of the hotter books that were non-Variant covers in high demand were NYX #3 and Batman Adventures #12 (slowed down a bit from its epic interest in 2015), all Amazing Spider-Man, all Spawn and Valiant back issues.

Bronze and Copper Age: They continue to be the two strongest selling time frames. We can monitor this by the quantity of back issues sold in a convention environment for us. This is no surprise with the quality and amount of so many great heroes to come from these eras. With the success of movies and TV shows continuing to integrate characters from these Ages, it helps keep characters and interest relevant and current. Don't get me wrong, we do have to sell the comics at half Guide, unless they are extremely high grade or Key issues, but this has been a standard practice for us and many others for a decade now. Another draw of the BA and CA of comics was the wonderful cover and interior art, especially in the Bronze Age. There was a new level of dynamic and exciting art brought to paper. Some of the hottest books of last year that still have room for growth are House of Secrets #92 in all grades as well Tomb of Dracula #10, Batman #251, Superman's Pal Jimmy Olsen #134 and Amazing Spider-Man #129. Top sales for 2016 were Marvel Spotlight #5 CGC 9.8 $48,500, Star Wars #1 35 cent Price Variant CGC 9.4 $26,290, Hero for Hire #1 CGC 9.8 $24,000, X-Men #94 CGC 9.8 $15,535, Incredible Hulk #181 CGC 9.8 CGC 9.8 $15,000, Amazing Spider-Man #129 CGC 9.8 $10,600 and one of the more interesting sales was a Night Nurse #1 CGC 9.8 for $7,700. The books most in demand for us in the Copper Age were New Mutants #87 and 98, Amazing Spider-Man #238, 252, 300, and Teenage Mutant Ninja Turtles #1.

Silver Age: Keys, keys and more keys. Marvel plays its usual role as the gale wind that blows all other publishers aside. It continues to drive the industry and interest level of collectors and investors. No big surprises here, just people keeping it simple and looking for key books. The most well-known and recognized comics for a majority of collectors come from this era, but despite that, it was still a soft year for Silver Age. I don't know if there will be a bounce back this year for Marvel Keys, but I do see DC Keys having a very strong year and the start of their long-awaited growth to comic relevancy congruent with Marvels.

This is a huge movie year for DC and a chance to grow its brand to new fans and expose their world of characters. Key books for purchase that are currently undervalued are Fantastic Four #1, 5 and 48, X-Men #1, Brave and the Bold #28 and 54, Avengers #1 and 4, Amazing Spider-Man #1, 3, 14, Justice League #1, Aquaman #1, Showcase #34, Journey Into Mystery #83, Showcase #22, Green Lantern #1, Tales to Astonish #27 and Adventure Comics #247. Some of the blockbuster prices of last year were Aquaman #1 CGC 9.4 $14,000, Detective Comics #359 CGC 9.4 $13,300, Amazing Fantasy #15 CGC 9.4 $454,100, Showcase #4 8.0 $84,000 and Incredible Hulk #1 9.2 $375,000.

Golden Age: Last year I ranted and raved about this being the most fulfilling genre to collect and how exciting acquiring these books can be. Well let me reiterate that nothing has changed and the Marketplace continues to agree. Unrestored GA Blue Chip books in this time frame of superhero keys continue to be the most consistent in gained values, have the most interest and are the easiest to sell. Really cool right, but you may be reading this and think, "Whoop de freaking do for you if you can afford to buy those!" Which I totally understand, but here is where the mind-blowing begins, "The restored and conserved market is making a push." Yes, I said it out loud. This trend was always looming in the background, but I feel in 2016 it really started to build into something bigger and by the end of the year its interest level has hit an all-time high with new gains to be had in 2017 and no end in sight.

"Our collectible has gotten to that point!" As the comic market continues to grow exponentially every year, a larger group of books enters the realm of unobtainability for collectors. Those Mega Keys in the lowest end of grading can still cost you $30K-$150K, which obviously is a lot of money for 90% of collectors. This realization has led to people succumbing to the feeling and notion that the need and void in their collection can only be filled with a restored or conserved copy. If a place can be found for these books amongst investors and collectors in our market (which I believe has already begun) then it will give new hope and drive for many old and new collectors. Of the many years I have been in this industry, I have spoken to countless people who have either given up on obtaining certain books or just left the collectibles completely for that same reason. This avenue would revitalize those groups of people and new collectors as well. The two things that need to occur for this transition to grow exponentially is their own comfort level to invest (make no doubt about it, comics at this point are an investment) and trust in what they are putting their hard-earned money into. Luckily with sites such as GPA or search engines for Auction Houses past sale history, we have been able to truly monitor and verify growth and trends from actual sales data.

Here are some of my observations for the hottest comics and trends of 2016 that will also continue into 2017, outside of the usual Mega Key suspects that we all know about. All Captain America Comics were extremely popular, especially in low grade, as it seems that everyone wants to get them any way they can and there appears to be this stigma that your collection isn't a collection without having at least one GA Captain America in it. I think the Golden Age Caps are always a smart buy and still far undervalued in mid to high grade. Also in extremely high demand and probably the hottest of books were all Joker covers in Detective Comics and Batman. As if the Clown Prince needed more attention already, some of these books are having huge gains from already strong 2015 sales, with some numbers doubling what they sold for just a year prior. My prediction for those books in 2017 is that there is still demand and interest but prices have reached a peak until 2018. All things Wonder Woman were extremely strong, especially her first appearance in All Star #8 which hit a record numbers all year including a CGC 9.0 sale for $411,000. Her 2nd and 3rd appearance have also been in extremely high demand with a Wonder Woman #1 CGC 9.0 selling for $290,000. I see strong growth in her first 3 appearances continuing through 2017 and forward.

As it goes for non-Super Hero comics, there was a huge demand for Horror titles this year, as well as everything Matt Baker. Most of the interest was for EC titles, but just about all Horror was relevant and seemed to be appealing to collectors last year and I am sure it will continue into this year. Matt Baker is already a prevalent name in the community, but his demand was an all-time high this year, and any Baker Romance was near impossible to keep in stock. Good Girl Art and Science Fiction titles were second for demand and Crime took a distant third this year. This information does not affect my feelings towards these genres from the late '40s to early '50s as it is probably the most undervalued and appreciated time frame. I think it has the most potential, undiscovered growth in collectability and value. It should be on everyone's radar for investing and collecting. I will buy most any high grade and reasonably priced Romance, Horror, Sci-Fi, Super Hero, Good Girl Art and or Crime in this time frame.

Other impressive numbers that were reached in 2016 were: Action Comics #1 CGC 5.5 $956,000, Action Comics #242 CGC 8.0 $34,000, Action Comics #252 CGC 8.0 $15,300, Batman #1 CGC 8.0 $390,000, Batman #15 CGC 9.0 $9,000, Captain America Comics #1 CGC 8.0 $288,000, Captain America Comics nn CGC 2.5 $9,500, Detective Comics #37 CGC 6.0 $21,000, Detective Comics #40 8.5 $27,500, Detective Comics #69 CGC 5.5 $10,900, Detective Comics #71 CGC 7.5 $11,600, Detective Comics #168 CGC $18,000, More Fun #52 CGC 3.0 $39,000 and Superman #1 CGC 4.0 $295,000.

Wrapping it up, I am starting two new sites, elitecomic-source and thecomicsurge this year, so keep your eyes open and have a little patience as I am still fleshing them out. Last year was a slow year for comics and I did not see much or any growth in any era except Golden Age. I imagine the planned movies for this year will push a different group of super heroes that are not as mainstream as Marvel's characters. This should create a new spark for comic enthusiast, as a new Universe can now be collected. The GA was strong last year and will continue as the demand increases and supply doesn't. Restored and conserved Mega Keys are becoming a viable way for a collector and/or investor to acquire the comic they can no longer can afford, but still provide a solid investment. Remember, collecting is supposed to be fun and if you're not having fun, you are doing something wrong. Thanks for everyone who read this and I'll leave you with one final note and my mantra for those investing in comics, "Buy smart, sell smarter.

NICK KATRADIS COMIC & COMIC ART COLLECTOR

2016 was another banner year for comics and original comic art. As a comic fan of over 45 years, I am reveling in this newly created familiarity by mainstream America of the beloved comic book characters that we collectors grew up with.

It seems like only yesterday when comic collectors had to keep their passion for comics to themselves. I remember as an 11 year old in the early 1970s, only my two closest friends knew that I read and collected comics. And they swore secrecy to the outside world or my "image" in school would have been tarnished. These days, I can bring up any comic character from the big screen at a house party and most people are aware of them and/or are collectors themselves. One recent example of this was a few months ago when I changed dentists. When I mentioned comics to my new local dentist on my first visit, he said "Oh, I still have my comic book collection from childhood, too!"

As more and more superhero movies are produced by Marvel and DC, mainstream America is getting quite familiar with comic book characters that were once only known to comic book fans.

As I write this report, Doctor Strange has crossed over $653 million in global box office receipts. This is astounding because Dr. Strange is a character that up until a few months ago was one only known to comic geeks. These days, it seems Marvel can do no wrong with its movies. And DC's upcoming movies also seem to be generating the similar levels of anticipation.

Overview: I have been a comic book collector since 1972. I also started collecting comic art in 2002, driven mostly by nostalgia in seeing the original art to the comics I read as a youngster, mostly Bronze Age art.

In 2014, not too long after I became an Overstreet Advisor, I started to certify many comics from my personal collection. I did this for two main reasons:

First, like most collectors that are 50 years old or older, I have become more aware of my own mortality, and I have to take steps to arrange for an orderly succession to my wife and kids of my comics and my original comic art collection. Nothing is more sobering for any collector in any hobby than to come to the realization that our children just do not have the same passion that we have for our hobby. So slabbing my top books was necessary to prevent damage to them and make them much easier to appraise to determine their value once they are certified.

Second, our hobby of collecting comics, fueled by the movies about comic characters, has become big business. Unfortunately, it seems that comics have become a commodity, similar to buying a TV or refrigerator. All you need to do today to own a comic is to simply have the funds to purchase it. You then search for it on eBay, or on a comic dealer's website, or simply search for it on the seemingly endless and weekly auctions conducted by the major Comic auction houses, and simply buy it. For decades, comic collectors searched for months and quite often for years for a specific comic. Without the power of the internet our options were limited, though perhaps more rewarding when we finally found a comic we needed. The same applied when we decided to sell.

Grading services like CGC and CBCS have helped to create a boom in the price structure of many comics.

A "raw" book has its advantages, but these days if it is not certified, most frequently you cannot get a multiple of Guide price if you decide to sell it. To their credit, grading services have filled a huge need in the hobby, by doing all the heavy lifting for us collectors. In the old days, when we found a Gold, Silver, or Bronze Age comic, we had to use our own expertise to make sure it was not trimmed, color touched, no glue on the spine, loose staples, pieces missing, etc. And we had to, of course, determine a grade for the book so we could figure out what we would consider paying for it or what to sell it for. But all that expertise is not required these days. All you have to do is buy a slabbed book instead of taking the risk of buying a raw book. It usually costs more but there is little anxiety about other factors.

CGC and CBCS grade the book, which is usually the toughest thing to do correctly. But they also help determine if the book has been restored, which would render its value to only a fraction of what an unrestored copy is worth. As collectors, once we know the grade of the book, and can ascertain that it was not restored, then we can more determine a price for it.

eBay on any given day has over 110,000 CGC comics for sale. Raw comic listings on eBay are in the millions. In addition, comic dealers have increased in numbers once again. Most dealers are online these days but there are still a lot of brick and mortar stores around the country.

Estate Planning: As comics and comic art have skyrocketed in value, and some have become more valuable than many people's homes, all collectors should spend the time to develop a detailed plan of succession, basically what to do with their collections after they are gone.

In the past few years, I have asked many fellow collectors about what would happen to their collections of comics and comic art after they are gone, and I have been stunned that many large collectors have hardly ever thought about it, and many have not put a plan in place.

This implies to me that many collectors today have not devoted the necessary time to create instructions for the future of their treasures. So what would happen upon their untimely demise and/or if a tragic event occurs, which will instantly place their family in the daunting position of deciding what to do with their collections.

It's so important that we all allocate the time and energy to create a plan so our family would know exactly how to prepare to manage an orderly and meaningful disbursement of our collections. All collectors should maintain a detailed inventory of their comics and comic art. They should document what they paid for each comic and/or art and properly document what the market value of each item is. And these values should be updated at least once a year.

More important is for the collector to leave detailed instructions to their family of what to sell and what not to sell. Every collector should have detailed lists of what items are to be kept in the family and distributed to each family member, and what items should be prepared for sale.

In addition, each collector should have one or more trusted individuals that are collectors and directly involved in the hobby that can advise and that can help the family with organizing and determining a plan for the portion of the collection that is to be sold. These individuals should be named in the will or an outside document that provides details as to their respective participation in the process.

I would also recommend that the decision of who should be placed in this advisory role should be done very carefully, and thoroughly researched. Any advisor should be someone who the collector feels will not place their personal interests over those of the family, and be someone who will not compromise the family's best course of action. Any advisor should also be compensated so he is motivated to benefit the family's interests. The collector should also document his wishes to the family on how the individual would be paid and how much.

As morbid as all of this may sound, it is imperative that every collector leaves detailed directions to his or her family as to how he or she would want his collection to be treated. Each collector should make their wishes clearly known to their family members, and in writing. This way the family will make the right decisions with regard to their collections and prevent arguments and squabbling, and minimize any family stress about what to do.

Original Comic Art: As more and more collectors of comics migrate to collecting comic art, I have noticed a few trends occurring, some of which are positive and some which are not.

First, new collectors that enter comic art have no price guide to give them specific pricing on what comic art is worth. Back in 1992, Jerry Weist did publish Original Comic Art: Identification and Price Guide, which tried to cover prices for comic book art, newspaper strips, and pulp art. But it fell short since it did not include mainstream artists who are very popular today and whose art has exploded in value. In 2000, an updated edition was published called The Comic Art Price Guide, but that also fell short as tracking and recording sales of original art is far more difficult than collecting comic books. However, this Guide can be used as a tool for novices in the hobby to get familiar with many artists that are not currently discussed and/or remembered by the collecting community.

Buying or selling a comic has become easier because services like CGC, CBCS, GPA, and The Overstreet Comic Book Price Guide, have created a "market price" for every comic ever printed. But when collecting original comic art, new collectors usually lack the knowledge and a clear grasp on what a piece of art should sell for. A little homework will go a long way. New collectors should join Comic Art Fans (www.comicartfans.com), and search the huge site for comic art they may want to own. They can also look at historical actual auction sales on Heritage Auctions archives, which provide for free all of their actual auction sales going back to 2001. Lastly, they can search comic art dealer sites, which usually give specific pricing on comic art.

Prices of original comic art can have a great range, even between pages from the same issue, because comic art pricing is based on content. So if a page has the hero fighting the villain in every panel, the pricing will be far greater than a plain page with no hero or villain on the page. Pricing is also greatly dependent on the historical significance of the comic. So the storyline and its substance plays a big role in the value of the art. Most importantly, comic art values reflect the popularity of the artist and/or inker. Even an average page from an average title drawn by Jack Kirby will be much more desirable than a lot of the more visually appealing pages by less popular and less revered artists. And comic art is basically character driven. So a Batman page is usually more desirable than any other DC character, just as a Spider-Man page is usually more desirable than any other Marvel character.

And lastly, the value of the art depends on whether it is from a primary title as opposed to a secondary title the character appeared in. Example: obtaining a page of art from Amazing Spider-Man is typically more desirable and much more valuable than obtaining a page of art from Spectacular Spider-Man or Web of Spider-Man, which were titles that featured the same character but they came out decades after the primary title. The primary title pages are older and much more difficult to obtain and usually much more expensive. And the primary title pages are usually from the creator of the character so the price of the art reflects it.

All this criteria will help determine what price that original comic art will sell for. Today, there is the additional factor of comic art done digitally on a computer by the artist and the inker basically inking a copy of the original. This is called “blue line art” and many older and more seasoned collectors avoid it as it does not have the original pencils of the artist underneath the finished art. The penciled and inked art exist separately or the penciled art may not even exist outside of the artist’s computer.

Fans of original comic art have grown exponentially the past 10 years as more and more comic fans have become aware of the existence of the original art of their favorite artist. Modern art is very popular today as new and younger collectors enter the hobby. Since modern art reflects what the younger collector is currently reading, it may be more desirable than an older page drawn by someone many years ago. But that’s where some pitfalls of collecting may lie.

Even though Modern art today can be usually purchased cheaper than comic art published decades ago, it may not be cheap at all. A lot of modern art drawn today may not hold its value down the road, since the artists are usually less known and the title they are working on may not be around for long. If the story in the comic is uneventful, its desirability in the future will fade quickly. As a result, Modern art can be a more risky “investment” of a collector’s time, energy, and money than an older or more vintage piece of art, since it has not yet established a collector base. Many of the characters being published today, even if they are existing characters, may not be desirable to collectors in the near future if the comic is cancelled and /or the storyline does not resonate with collectors in the future.

Vintage art – basically art from the 1960s to the 1990s – may on the other hand be more expensive to purchase but it may hold its value better and appreciate more than the newer art since the character and/or storyline has been around much longer and have already established a track record and fans over the years.

As a lifelong comic fan, and a collector of comic art for over 15 years, I want to give some advice to younger collectors that do not yet have the focus or the scope of what they should collect and how.

First and foremost, limit yourself to an era that resonates with you on a personal level. I collect mostly Bronze Age comic art, since I first read comics as a teen in the early 1970s. When I first started collecting comic art I was buying comic art from the ‘60s, ‘70s, and ‘90s. I was all over the map in buying. Back then most comic art was cheap, so I got away with it. At today’s astronomical prices, I would not have lasted long. So after a few years, I gravitated to collecting mostly 1970s art and I learned not to waste my bullets because in comic art opportunities arise to buy when you are least prepared.

Also, by collecting comic art from a period that I have read first hand almost every comic that was being published at the time, I actually have an advantage over the next guy in finding undervalued art because I may remember the storyline and its importance more than the next guy. Knowledge is power, and this hobby is no exception. Also by limiting my collecting focus, I don’t fall into the pitfall as a collector of buying “eye candy” art that catches my eye but ages bad very quickly and does not retain its value over time.

I collect mostly based on two criteria: artistic merit of the art and nostalgia. Both are prerequisites to building a quality collection of comic art. But comic art is a hobby based primarily on nostalgia. How else can most of us that have spent absurd amounts of money on a piece of comic art rationally convince ourselves that it was worth it. Vintage comic art commands such high prices these days, that without the personal connection to the piece, a collector will tend to sell it before long as his taste will change or his pocket book will tell him it has. I have kept hundreds of pieces in my collection for 15 years or so because they are part of my well being and selling is just not an option. And time is the best friend of any collecting. If you hold anything over time, you will usually do better than something you owned for a very short time.

Another important piece to collecting is you have to decide early on who your favorite artists are and start to buy quality examples of their work, based on your pocket. Slowly you will learn to gravitate to better and better examples of their work. And you will not be tempted to buy anything that comes along. If you have a good eye for art, you should chose to collect the work of great artists, without losing the conviction and start to second guess yourself. Other collectors may try to sway you away from the artists you collect. But if you do your homework and can see quality in the work in your favorite artists, history will reward you when the collective wisdom of the other collectors finally see what you see. “Never run with the herd,” I always say.

While collecting your favorite artists is great, don’t be blind to what art is available at any given time. Always “buy the best piece of art you can afford at the time”. So if a great page is offered for sale, by a great artist, at a fair price, you grab it if you can. Don’t walk away because it’s not one of your favorite artists. Opportunity only knocks a few times and you have to know to answer the door. Quality comic art stays buried in collections for decades so if you get a chance to buy an extraordinary page, go for it.

Another piece of advice is that comic art is like real estate. You prefer that you buy the ugliest house in the best neighborhood than the nicest house in the worse neighborhood. So if you have a choice to buy a Spider-Man cover by a lesser artist or a great Flintstones cover, buy the Spider-man cover. If you have a choice of a Batman cover or a lesser DC character, buy the Batman cover, even by a lesser artist. Because in comic art, the popularity of the character on the page greatly determines and defines its resale value in the future.

I want to end my market report with saying that as a collector of both comics and comic art, I am truly astounded by the popularity both hobbies have achieved over the past 5-10 years. I feel the comic industry is currently at its zenith in recognition and awareness by the general public, but it is also at this time that I think it is most vulnerable.

As most collectors know, collecting comics and/or comic art has become increasingly challenging and most difficult for the average collector to afford. It seems that the prices have skyrocketed too far and too fast. The health of any industry is measured by how many people participate in it, and it’s the collectors in the middle that are getting shut out. The past few years, I have met a lot of collectors that are either half way out of the hobby or are contemplating getting out. The reason they give is they cannot afford to buy much of what they used to collect. So many of them are cashing out and moving on. Is the hobby poised for a steep correction? Who knows. But as more and more collectors are aging, they are slowly selling their collections to fund retirement and/or fund other purchases in their lives. So the question is, will the music stop any time soon, and if it stops, who can guarantee they will have a chair to sit on.

COLLECTOR

Well, the Bells are ringing, and it’s not just because it’s the holiday season.

This year saw the largest lot of Canadian war-time comics (WECA Comics—see my article in Overstreet #44) that has ever come onto the market and almost all appeared on ComicLink. A huge collection of couple hundred of these books was sent into the auction site at the end of last year or early this year (the collector insisted on remaining anonymous but they were most probably Canadian). They slabbed them and then gently released them in focused auctions throughout the year.

Back in late 2013 when I started writing about these old Canadian books, a bunch of us hoped that collections would start coming out of the woodwork but in three years they have only trickled out into the market and collectors have been starved for them. In the last two years, we have seen two significant collections go into university archives. One at Ryerson in Toronto and the other at Western in London, Ontario. Collectors and the marketplace lament this but researchers laude it.

To have a large collection like this feed the market for just about the entire year has been a luxury. These old Canadian comics are many times scarcer (think Gerber 7s for most as a starting point) than most American Golden Age books and there was no Silver Age in Canada through the ‘60s to shore up a collecting culture for them. Five to ten years ago, these books were neglected throwaways with dealers knowing almost nothing about them and the great portion of them could be had for under $100 a copy. Strangely, they still don’t merit any real place in this guide you’ve got in your hands and the dozen or so that have found their way into the listings are, for the most part, listed erroneously with unrealistic price points.

A group of us north of the border have managed to put together the first solid, comprehensive checklist and price guide done for these 760 or so Canadian war time comics and look for it out in 2017, Canada’s Sesquicentennial.

But let’s look at where we’re at this year with all these ComicLink auction results. Here are the winning bids for about the top third of the 160 books or so that were auctioned on ComicLink this year:

|    | Issue                | Grade | Sale Price |

Now what can we take away from these results?

First, Bell Features books seem to have solidified in the market as the most desirable of all the Canadian war time books (also known as Canadian Whites and WECA books). Out of these top 50 results, 44 are Bells. They have essentially become the template for what a Canadian Golden Age comic is, namely, American looking on the outside and chewy Canadian maple on the inside. The other publishers never got it quite right the way that Bell did. Vancouver's Maple Leaf Publications, though they have Brok Windsor, Sgt. Canuck, and Cosmo and are the rarest to find, were too staid and steeped in the culture of wholesome literature adventure of the old British annuals. Toronto's other big publisher, Anglo-American, seems to be unable to escape the taint of those cheap looking two-colour newsprint covers they sported for the first four years and the stigma of being mostly a vehicle for Fawcett script redraws until eventually creating its own heroes. However, their main character, Freelance, always lends them some buoyancy and will do more so with Chapterhouse's reboot of the character in 2017. Montreal's Canadian Heroes, never got past looking like a Canadian counterpart of American True Comics or Real Life Comics though they are passionately collected by those with a wider interest in Canadiana. So with Bell books it looks like the cream has risen to the top.

As with all comics, values are character driven. The top 3 books feature Nelvana as do 6 out of the top 10 books, in fact, about a third of all the books on this list of results are there because they contain a Nelvana cover or story. To a lesser extent, other main Bell characters that prop up values are Johnny Canuck, The Penguin, and Speed Savage. This same effect is found in the other main publishers as well. Brok Windsor covers and appearances boost the values of Maple Leaf books, Freelance does this for Anglo-American books, and Canada Jack does the same for the Montreal books.

Another thing that you'll notice is that grade doesn't seem to be as attached to price point in the consistent gradient way we find it is with Golden Age or Silver Age American books. Take a look at the two Nelvanas that top of the list, or the three Triumphs at Nos. 20-22, or the two Triumphs at Nos. 35-36, and Triumph #21 is even a Nelvana cover. This is because of the scarcity of supply with these books. Many of these books, once ComicLink had them slabbed, were the only copies on the census. Even the most common books have only 4 or 5 copies slabbed. This means that collectors will often snap these books up regardless of grade because they might not see another copy come up for a long time, if ever. My fellow advisor and collector Walter Durajlija calls this factor "utility of ownership." Think about grabbing it while you see it or you might regret it.

This brings me to a little beef with CGC and why they continue to put "Canadian Edition" on the info strips at the top of the slabbed books. This is an unwitting condescension that implies that these comics are only later or foreign editions of American books, which can't be farther from the truth. OK, I can see you stamping this on slabbed copies of the Canadian reprint books that came out 1947-56, but not on these. For these books, it should simple read something like "Canadian Comic" period.

What 2016 has showed us concerning Canadian war time comics, is that they have become highly desirable books and that there is a solid market out there for them. Their value profile has higher peaks on it than have ever been reached before and we're still in the early stages of this market. As more is known and understood about them, I only see an upside.

ROBERT KRAUSE PRIMO COMICS

Greetings from Primo Comics! We operate an online comic book store at primocomics.com as well as an eBay store at primo comics<sup>1</sup>. Visit our online stores for great deals on desirable comics. 2016 has been a very strong year for comic book sales from the Golden Age to Copper Age. As comic book related movies continue to popularize the genre globally, the respective characters and the related comic books become more in demand. This is ever-important to the long-term success and demand in the vintage comic book market. For there to be a sustained long-term collector market, the medium needs to attract new collectors, not just fans of the movies. We have been witnessing this trend which is very heartening to us as well as encouraging to the success of the market.

Mid to Lower Grade Comics: High grade, key and non-key comics continue to be in perpetual demand. The demand is so strong that it has become quite difficult to replace these issues once sold. These issues are being purchased by collectors as core holdings in their collections. This then takes these books off the market to an indeterminant amount of time, perhaps for many years. This has the impact of creating perceived scarcity in the marketplace for a particular issue, further driving prices higher. This has also created what we see as an opportunity in the mid to lower grade market for both key and non-key vintage comics. The prices of these mid-grade books are still very reasonable with there being no real competition to acquire these books. This is particularly true for mid and lower grade Silver Age books from Marvel and DC.

We believe that it is only a matter of time before the confluence of an ever increasing collector base demanding vintage books and the scarcity of high grade books manifests itself in a move down to the next desirable tier, mid to lower grade books. This will cause an inevitable increase in prices for these mid to lower grade respective books. The only real demand that collectors appear to have it that the book is complete. Even in lower grades, collectors want to ensure the book is structurally sound. They accept writing in or on the book, loss of gloss and even staple pops. Many of these Silver Age books are 50 years or older and collectors realize that having a copy of a book they want, even in lower grade, is better than never owning a copy at all.

Foreign Comics: This area of collecting is the undiscovered country and the wild west. The foreign comics market is very fractured and no one truly knows what is out there. I am speaking here of the Marvel and DC equivalents outside the United States. These books are basically black and white reprints of comics printed in the United States with many times new and interesting covers and at times oversized as well. I mention this area of collecting since it is tremendously under-collected by fans in the United States and can still be purchased for little money. The United Kingdom editions in the 1970s are oversized and offer great collector eye appeal both inside and outside of the book with new or varied covers of their USA counterparts. You can also find key books printed in various languages for a fraction of the USA equivalents. There is true scarcity here particularly in higher grade. These foreign editions are notoriously in lower grades and true high grades are very difficult to find. A collector does not have the real ability to be choosy though since the offered example of a comic might be the only one you find for quite some time. Buy these books when you see them since you may not see another.

BEN LABONOG COLLECTOR

Overview of the Market: “Considering print errors like miscut covers, bad registration, books with no staple holes, blank inside covers, double covers etc...it’s really funny that people make such a stink about grade. Books were not intended to be mint.” – Anonymous

That was a quote a dear friend emailed me recently and I thought it was on point with regards to comics. Sure, that number in the upper left hand corner of the slab can translate into a nice vacation, retirement funds, college tuition, a new home, or pay off debt. But once you have a complete and presentable copy, it doesn’t matter if it’s a GD/VG or a FN+ unless one is upgrading to get rid of a major eyesore of a defect such as a spine roll, Marvel chipping, piece out of FC, or faded colors. With these astronomical price points (we all witnessed a $10 Million dollar auction at the end of 2016), save some money and enjoy a lower grade book that still looks great in a Mylar or a slab. As I mentioned in last year’s report, I think it’s prudent to downgrade those expensive keys and get the same book in lower grade plus cash to buy other books you want. Another friend of mine told me he was recently offered about $1 million dollars for a book in his collection. I advised him to try and downgrade the book and cash the rest out for more books. Or simply keep the book unless he needed the money for something important. There’s no sense chopping down a money tree!

I was looking at CGC census numbers that I had printed out in 2006 and compared them to some current numbers for 2016. Here is a sampling of what I found:

2016 (65 total copies)

Action Comics # 7 2006 (15 total copies),
2016 (42 total copies)

All-American Comics #16 2006 (17 total copies),
2016 (47 total copies)

Batman #1 2006 (98 total copies), 2016 (231 total copies)

Captain America Comics #1 2006 (67 total copies),
2016 (151 total copies)

Detective Comics #27 2006 (31 total copies),
2016 (64 total copies)

Detective Comics #29 2006 (20 total copies),
2016 (56 total copies)

Detective Comics #31 2006 (32 total copies),
2016 (81 total copies)

Marvel Comics #1 2006 (37 total copies),
2016 (59 total copies)

Marvel Mystery #9 2006 (20 total copies),
2016 (45 total copies)

Superman #1 2006 (60 total copies), 2016 (124 total copies)
Suspense #3 2006 (10 total copies), 2016 (32 total copies)

It took ten years for these books to double or triple in census numbers. When comparing SA/BA census numbers in the same time span, the SA/BA census numbers reflect a tripling/quadrupling or close to fivefold (Avengers #1- the Avengers films undoubtedly created a spike in submissions.) increase over the same ten years.

Fantastic Four #1 2006 (574 total copies),
2016 (1802 total copies)

Incredible Hulk #1 2006 (450 total copies),
2016 (1343 total copies)

Amazing Fantasy #15 2006 (844 total copies),
2016 (2609 total copies)

Amazing Spider-Man #1 2006 (1196 total copies),
2016 (3073 total copies)

X-Men #1 2006 (1088 total copies), 2016 (3544 total copies)

Avengers #1 2006 (629 total copies), 2016 (3034 total copies)

There could be some statistical errors in the CGC census if the same copies were re-graded and counted more than once on the census, but overall it shows reasonable empirical data that show GA comics are much scarcer than SA/BA comics. Supply and demand create a market, but add rarity into the mix and you have the unique Golden Age comic realm. Gerber's scarcity ratings in his 1989 Photo Journals were somewhat accurate in the pre-internet days. I would not expect the census numbers to double or triple in another ten years. We would be lucky to see a 10-20% increase.

As I suggested to Bob Overstreet last year regarding some additions to a few listings (Action Comics #7 – 1st time the word Superman printed on a cover, Captain America Comics #2 – 1st app. round shield), here are a few more books that I believe should be considered to be broken out (or adjusted) in the guide listings and have the following notes added to them:

Detective Comics #13 (rare; 17 copies on CGC census) – Classic Speed Saunders cover by Flessel

Detective Comics #18 – Classic Fu Manchu cover by Flessel

Detective Comics #18 – Classic Fu Manchu cover by Flessel

More Fun Comics #32 – contains ad for Action Comics #1

USA Comics #8 (rare; 16 copies on CGC census)- Classic Schomburg Japanese plane cover; bondage-c

Golden Age: Ok, let's talk about Timelys! Captain America Comics #3 has been skyrocketing in demand the past several years now. I remember winning a VG copy from the Dentist off eBay in 2000 for $2,715. That copy is sitting in someone's vault right now, and is quickly approaching $20k in value. With all of Stan

Lee's comic convention signature events and movie cameos, it's not a secret why Cap #3 is a hot book since it was his 1st work for Timely (Marvel) in 1941. In addition, it features a classic Schomburg Red Skull bondage cover, a rare yellow cover in the run, and Simon & Kirby interior art. I don't believe it is rare by GA standards (86 total copies on the CGC census), but I haven't seen many unrestored copies on the open market lately. Collectors and dealers have become bullish on prices and reluctant to sell. Stan Lee was fortunate to land his first work in a landmark title/character.

Conversely, Jack Kirby's 1st signed work for Timely was a one shot book called Red Raven Comics #1 (August 1940). RR #1 certainly deserves more respect and demand, but it is sadly buried in other non-mainstream hero comics that don't have a Hollywood script. Joe Simon had just recruited a young Kirby from Fox to work with him and Martin Goodman. It is a tough book (41 total copies on the CGC census) and sports a fantastic cover by Kirby and two interior stories (Mercury and Comet Pierce) drawn and inked by the King himself. Goodman was doing so much cross marketing in 1940 to compete with other publishers, that he even included a few interior panels advertising the ground breaking battle between the Human Torch and Sub-Mariner (Marvel Mystery Comics #9, July 1940) that was currently on sale at the time. RR #1 is a must have for the Timely enthusiast or the Kirby fan.

Earlier in 2016, a friend sent me a listing on eBay for a low grade Marvel Mystery Comics #4. The book was from an original owner found in an Eastern Pennsylvania estate. The owner was selling his parents' home, and he found the book stashed away in a cupboard along with a few of his Archie comics. The Marvel Mystery #4 was the only superhero comic in the pile. I thought it was a cool story. I have not seen an unrestored, CGC Marvel Mystery #4 offered in the open market for quite some time. It's a wild, Goodman Timely featuring the 1st Sub-Mariner cover (by Schomburg) as he is attacking Nazi sailors with a metal wrench while saving a girl in bondage. This is also the 1st Nazi Timely cover presented in a pulp-like fashion, green colored sea, and a ship with a pink colored mast. However, without a Hollywood script, Sub-Mariner has lost appeal with the general masses. Only the true Timely fans can still appreciate the original mutant!

The rarity of Golden Age comics should never be underestimated. The market continues to be healthy with the strongest demand being for 1st appearances and classic, unique covers. There are not many unrestored copies of pre-1945 books left, so it is quite a treat to be able to find them in their original condition. Even if you can't afford or don't want to spend five figures on a Cap #1, Superman #1, or Batman #1, there are many other comics that are more affordable and could provide healthy returns such as: Superman #3, Batman #11,47, Detective #156, Cap #2,33, Marvel Mystery #15, and Whiz #18 (great train cover!).

If you are a new collector out there and aren't sure what GA to collect, I would highly recommend the 1989 Gerber Photo Journal Guide to Comic Books (Vol. 1 & 2). You can peruse over 20,000 cover images of GA comic covers that will grab your attention. This was the resource that Suspense Comics #3 was first given widespread exposure. In addition, if you want to study up on Timely Comics, I would point out George Olshevsky's 1979 article "The Origin of Marvel Comics" that was published in the 10th Overstreet Price Guide. The Olshevsky article has some valuable information and perspective on all the early Timely titles and points out the unique color and printing challenges Goodman had with Marvel Comics #1.

Silver Age: The Doctor Strange movie was surprisingly great! In fact, the following week I picked up a copy of Strange Tales #115 at Marc Newman's (House of Comics) Berkeley Con (great little show!) just so I could read the origin. It's a good thing Doctor Strange's origin is not in Strange Tales #110, because the #115 is still an affordable bargain and the origin is pretty close to the actual movie. Great movie and great read! The demand for ST #110 has been pretty consistent. I just wish Doctor Strange had a clean, full cover in the early Strange Tales run, but since he was a minor character at the time, he always shared a split cover with the Torch or Thing.

I'm a big fan of the early, 12-cent bubble Marvels... especially FFs. For the new SA collectors out there or for the seasoned dealers who have forgotten, there are many hidden gems (pin up pages and cool ads) in the early Marvels. Take a look and make sure to count those pages on raw books: FF #2 - Thing pin up; FF #3 - Torch pin up; FF #4 - Mr. Fantastic pin up; FF #5 - House ad for Hulk #1; FF #8 - Torch facts page; FF #9 - How the Torch flies page; FF #10 - Invisible Girl pin up; FF #11 - Subby pin up; FF #13 - House ad for TOS #39 & ASM #1; Hulk #2 - House ad for FF #5.

SA Marvels have the best stories and the keys can be quite liquid, but, truthfully, it is a bit tiring to see multiple copies of them in every auction and convention. Every 1st appearance of any character is now hoarded and placed in the spec box in anticipation of a future Hollywood movie. It is great to see books like TTA #13 out of the $1.00 bin and now on dealers' walls. But I am a firm believer that a bad movie should not decrease the value or demand of a popular character's 1st appearance or title. It will be interesting to see how the market continues to respond in 2017 to movies such as Logan (Hulk #181), Guardians of the Galaxy (MSH #18), Wonder Woman (All Star #8), Spider-Man: Homecoming (AF #15), and Justice League (B&B #28). My guess is that the blue chip keys will continue to be solid investments. If you are looking for a Tales of Suspense #39, try to get a copy that doesn't have the right edge quotation marks cut off.

It's somewhat of a challenge to get a copy of that book with both sets of quotation marks clearly present. Also, finding a copy with more blue space under the table at the bottom left front cover can also be a challenge to find. Perhaps the greatest story of the Marvel Silver Age is the Galactus/Silver Surfer trilogy done by Lee & Kirby in Fantastic Four #48-50. Low grade copies are still cheap and readily available. Every comic fan should read that saga.

On the DC Silver front, Detective Comics #225 (1st Martian Manhunter) has cooled off a bit after some big sales in late 2015 and early 2016. Action Comics #252 (1st Supergirl) seems to have cooled significantly as well. Adventure Comics #210 (1st Krypto, the Superdog) still grabs me for some reason; maybe because it was released during the first month of the CCA code and is still one of the scarcer DC Silver keys. I still think Showcase #6 (1st Challengers) is an under-valued key as it is a pre-FF Kirby creation. The art on a Showcase #6 reminds me of Kirby FF panels for sure. Green Lantern #8 (1961) features a fantastic grey tone cover and one of the best SA DC stories I have read. I highly recommend grabbing that book while it is still affordable.

Lastly, I have noticed that some newer collectors are attempting to collect runs of Silver Age titles, and they avoid paying the big money for the keys (i.e. AF #15 and ASM #1) and go for the #2 - #300. Then they complain that they can never afford the big keys. Sometimes one has to complete runs to experience that quantity is not always satisfying. I would recommend that one should go for the big books first and then fill in their runs with popular covers or favorite villain appearances next. The good thing with Silver Age is that they are plentiful and they will always be available, so sell off those runs and focus on obtaining the key books first. You may be much happier owning 2 small boxes of quality key material instead of 12 boxes of semi complete runs with less key books.

Golden Age Sales and Purchases: Adventure Comics #46 CGC 1.0 $1,000; Captain America Comics #3 CGC 3.0 $11,995; Daring Mystery Comics #1 CGC 1.0 $1,200; Daring Mystery Comics #4 FR/GD $495; Marvel Mystery Comics #4 GD $2,130; Marvel Mystery Comics #5 (complete front and back covers only) $563; More Fun Comics #32 FAIR $250; Mystic Comics #5 FAIR (missing page) $300; Red Raven Comics #1 App GD+ (missing BC) $1,100; USA Comics #6 CGC 1.5 $1,472; USA Comics #10 CGC 2.5 $935; USA Comics #10 CGC 2.5 (restored) $675 and Whiz Comics #18 VG+ $500.

Silver Age Sales and Purchases: Action Comics #242 PGX 4.0 $1,550; Adventure Comics #210 CGC 3.5 $1,550; Adventure Comics #210 FAIR $340; Adventure Comics #247 CGC 2.0 $875; Batman #121 CGC 4.0 $850; Detective Comics #226 GD/VG $250; Green Lantern #8 FN/VF $175; Incredible Hulk #2 CGC 5.0 $1,250; Showcase #6 CGC 2.0 $250; Showcase #30 CGC 1.8 $170; Strange Tales #115 GD $35; X-Men #4 CGC 5.0 $550.

Bronze Age Sales and Purchases: Amazing Spider-Man

#121 CGC 4.0 $175; Marvel Super Special #16 CGC 9.0 $66; Sgt. Rock #329 (Whitman) FN/VF $110; X-Men #94 VG $150; X-Men #94 FN/VF $300.

Copper-Modern Age Sales and Purchases: Harbinger #1 NM $150; X-Factor #24 VG $8.

Which prices should come up: Captain America Comics #3 should be ranked higher than Captain America Comics #2 based on past and current price point sales. Cap 3s are selling for about $4k/point. Suggested listing in the Guide for GD2.0 should be $8,000 and VG4.0 $16,000. Red Raven Comics #1 - Since Stan Lee's 1st work for Timely (Cap 3) experiences a lot of demand and record sales, it's time Jack Kirby's 1st signed work for Timely get some much deserved recognition. My suggestion for listing in the Guide for GD2.0 should be $3000 and VG4.0 $6000. USA Comics #7 - I've seen incomplete copies sell for close to $1500. I witnessed an apparent GD/VG (amateur resto) copy sell at SDCC 2016 for close to $2,000. In the past I have sold a CGC 2.5 for $2,750 and purchased a raw copy in FR/GD for $1,500. My suggestion for listing in the Guide is GD2.0 $2,000 and VG4.0 $4,000. USA Comics #8 - in 25 years of collecting Gold, it is by far the rarest of the USA Cap covers. I think this issue should be broken out in the Guide listing as (scarce) and "a Classic Schomburg bondage Japanese plane cover." A CGC 2.5 brittle sold for $1700+, and I sold that same copy four years ago for $2,500. My suggestion for listing in the Guide is GD2.0 $1500 and VG4.0 $3,000.

Which prices should come down: All-American Comics #16 - should not be ranked higher than Marvel Comics #1, Batman #1, or Captain America Comics #1; All-American Comics #16 should still be in the top 10, but not the top 5 Golden Age books.

BEN LICHTENSTEIN ZAPP COMICS

Greetings from the Garden State! The comic book biz continues to steam along and we're happy to contribute another market report. After 23 years in business, I look forward to my "job" every day!

Our 2 brick and mortar shops in Wayne and Manalapan continue to thrive, as back issue sales remain strong. I've stopped trying to predict a peak in sales, as the past 6 or 7 years have continued to post gains. We are focused on comics books, but also sell gaming cards, trading cards, action figures (new and vintage) and all things related. We enjoy buying and selling secondary market stuff, like back issues, single cards, vintage toys, etc.

On the new issue front, DC made a big splash with the Rebirth line, which rebooted their entire line-up. DC continues to be very retailer-friendly, with a cover price of $2.99 across the boards and also returnability for retailers. This allowed us to order very heavily with confidence.

Customer response was positive and we sold very high numbers of the first issues. Sales have continued as readers are enjoying the writing. Marvel continues to disappoint, with a disjointed editorial plan and high cover prices. There are lots of wonderful independent titles coming out, some showing legs, such as Saga, Outcast, Southern Bastards, and some fizzling out. Back issues of independents continue to be very hard to manage, with extreme volatility and short supply when a title takes off. Walking Dead has not slowed down at all. Sales are very strong on new and back issues.

Free Comic Book Day continues to be a winner, with big crowds enjoying our hobby and supporting us. As the online market continues to expand, customers are showing us that they still value getting out of the house and shopping in-person at their friendly neighborhood comic shop.

Local Comic Book Shop Day is a new event to promote brick and mortar shops. 2016 is the second year for this event and I'm hopeful that it gathers more steam.

Social media continues to be instrumental in communicating with our customers and marketing our shop. Without exaggeration, it is essential to our business.

My partner Corry Brown, with a help from the highly amusing Dave Potosnak, connects to our customers in real time with all the different digital platforms. Please check out Corry and Dave's Zapp Talk videos, Zapp Podcast and general Facebook mayhem-I promise you will be at least mildly amused.

Back Issues - Some trends we're noting: There is white-hot demand for Golden Age books, including the usual Batmans and Timelys, as well as the more obscure stuff. We're seeing much more demand now for these books, as many collectors have finished their Silver Age runs and are chasing the much rarer Golden Age stuff. Atomic Age also showed lots more interest.

Early Actions and Detectives, any Batman key, Joker covers, etc. all show amazing demand and price jumps. This has also pulled along prices and interest in lesser titles, as some of these books get out of range and buyers look at more affordable options. Many, many books are selling at multiples of Guide.

The stigma of restoration on Golden Age books is not nearly as important as Silver Age. A sizable Golden Age collection surfaced in my area and was pieced out to many dealers, including myself. It included nearly every major title from 1940s to 1950s. The owner of the collection had applied lots of unnecessary "conservation" including tape, glue, color, etc. Otherwise the books had beautiful eye appeal. We had many happy customers who are not bothered at all by the restoration and are happy to get scarce Golden Age books at a reasonable price. Sales were brisk, as we discounted from 30% to 60% off of unrestored prices. I sold nearly 100% of it in less than a month. Wish I had bought even more (sigh)....

In contrast, restoration on Silver Age, depending on type, has a large negative impact. For example, we bought a beautiful Hulk #1, which graded 8.0 trimmed from CGC. Unrestored: $70K. Trimmed top edge: $8,000 book. When I purchased it, I had to give the seller the bad news on an otherwise gorgeous book. The price hit is not at great for slight color touch but the general good supply of Silver Age means a buyer can afford to be picky.

I was happy to pick up many 1950s collections of DCs and sales were very strong. Copies with strong color strike and eye appeal sell very easily, with Flash, Showcase, Wonder Woman and Batman in particular selling the best. We're also seeing increased demand for the DC Sci-Fi stuff from the 1950s, which have often some cool covers, and are not easy to find in better than VG.

Pre-Hero Marvel continue to sell, but I am seeing some softening of demand if it's not a prototype book. I personally love these books, but it appears buyers are focusing on other areas this years.

Archies have picked up nicely, with new issues doing a little better and vintage books (especially pre-1960) really hot!

Silver Age and Bronze Age continue to sell, with prices on most books stabilizing. Not much new to report there. However, I am seeing prices increasing on most 1962/1963 Marvels. In particular, the first 10 issues of all major Marvel titles are showing even stronger pricing and demand, with no end in sight.

As usual, we're seeing the typical spikes in demand for first appearances of characters that are mentioned or introduced in movie and TV. The Netflix Marvel series have been very well received, with Luke Cage, Daredevil, Jessica Jones getting lots of heat. DC is really killing it with their TV series doing great, such as Gotham, Arrow, Flash, etc.

Batman v Superman and Suicide Squad were fun, but didn't have the same Marvel movie cohesiveness and continuity. As of this writing, Doctor Strange was just released and I thought it was very well done. Doctor Strange back issues have been selling steadily, whereas up to 2 years ago, they were near-unsalable.

Our business model is to offer fair, competitive pricing every day rather than price high and then run sales or specials. But, once a year, we hold our legendary pre-Black Friday sale, with big discounts on all back issues, TPBs and toys. This year was our best ever, as customers bought stacks and stacks of back issues. This shows a healthy interest in the hobby beyond just the usual eBay/Facebook flippers. We're very active buyers of collections and selling those non-key books is a must if we want to keep buying collections. Dealing only in keys is a tough gig, as buying individual key issues with even a small margin is tough to do consistently. It would be very difficult to restock our higher end stuff if I didn't purchase entire collections, so we really love it when the "bin" books move.

We attended several conventions this year. We're doing well at most conventions, with plenty of demand at all price levels. Lots of readers are filling in their runs of cheap stuff, and lots of middle buyers are digging in the bargain books for cheap Silver/Bronze, and there are the usual hordes of key issue buyers.

New York Comic Con is our biggest sales event. It continues to grow, with sales very solid on both the bin stock and the wall books.

A sampling of key books we moved this year: Action #252 $2,800; Adventure Comics #247 $3,000; Batman #227,232,244,251; Brave & the Bold #28 $2750; Detective #359,395,400,411,474; Showcase #7,9,13,14,20,22 and more. Hulk #181 (about 20 copies from 2.0 to 9.6) still my number one requested book. Amazing Spider-Man #1-101,121,122,129 (about a dozen copies from 2.0 up to 9.8). Tomb of Dracula #10; Werewolf By Night #32 (multiple copies, could have sold many more). X-Men #1-14,94-142; and Giant-Size X-Men #1 (probably as hot as Hulk #181 right now, just not as expensive).

Other random observations: At the risk of repeating myself, Batman would easily be my best selling back issue if I could only find enough of the pre-1980 stuff.

Flash has heated up, with very high interest in both the new Rebirth title and vintage back issues. I could sell tons more Flash Silver and Bronze Age back issues if there was ample supply. It's one of my most requested titles right now.

Superman and related titles, in particular from 1962 to present are still very slow. I'm able to sell the Superman Family titles only at a steep discount, usually 60% to 75% below Guide. Pre-1960, though, sales are very strong, particularly if they are 6.0 or higher.

1950s DCs are definitely hard to find above 4.0, so we have lots of buyers for even the weaker titles.

Amazing Spider-Man #252 and Secret Wars #8 have moved up in price and demand.

New Mutants #87 exploded, about doubling in value after Cable movie news hit.

New Mutants #98 peaked at $1,000 in 9.8, and as ample supply hits, has stabilized at $650. Raw copies sell quickly for $200 to $300.

Wonder Woman of all eras continue to sell very well, and the upcoming movie has only stoked the fires. This tied in with the increased interest in female characters in general. I can't get enough Wonder Woman before 1980!

While non-key issues of Bronze/Copper/Modern are abundant, we are seeing brisk sales when priced accordingly. "Box stock" does move well, but does need to be heavily discounted if in low to mid-grade, usually 40% to 70% off of Overstreet. Copies in 8.0 to 9.4, with nice eye appeal, which sell quickly at Guide or close to it. We believe in turning over our inventory and don't wish to run a museum. I'm known as a tight grader who prices realistically. This helps us sell more of the non-key issues as well as keys.

On the buying front, we've been busy. It is as competitive as ever, with more and more dealers entering the market and competing for collections. We were able to buy as much as last year, but it didn't come easily.

After some spirited bidding, we purchased a high-grade collection of late Silver to Bronze Age books. These were handpicked by a finicky buyer. Average condition 9.4 to 9.6

and many achieved 9.8, such as Amazing Spider-Man #129 and Batman #251 in 9.8. Several dealers remarked that this collection was of pedigree quality. Sales have been strong so far, showing plenty of interest in books with exceptional structure and eye appeal.

Pressing continues to grow, as it's no longer the trade secret that it once was. It seems everyone's pressing their own books, with mixed results. I do not do my own pressing, as I would prefer to pay others for the service. It has become a necessary part of the business but I'm judicious in what I choose to press. I often will sell a book un-pressed and leave a little money on the table if I don't think it's a sizable enough improvement.

Overall, sales in 2016 were up very nicely over 2015 and I would like to thank everyone who has bought from, or sold to us this year. I also want to thank my staff at Zapp, which I believe is the best team I've ever had the pleasure of working with.

STEPHEN LIPSON COLLECTOR

Not many people are aware that Canada published their own comics during the Golden Age. These wartime era comics hosted a stable of superheroes that were both analogous and indigenous to Canada. Such iconic heroes as Nelvana of the Northern Lights and her brethren spoke to Canada's role on both the Home front and smashing the Axis abroad.

These comics were published primarily from 1941-1946, as a result of the implementation of the War Exchange Conservation Act, wherein non-essential items were prohibited for import into Canada, including pulp literature. As a result, Canada started its own fledgling comic book industry.

These comics were essentially published with colour covers, with interiors that were published in black and white, in order to defray costly publishing expenses. Hence, these comics are now referred to as "Canadian Whites" by both collectors and historians alike. That said, the very early issues of Wow Comics published by Bell Features and the very early issues of Better Comics published by Maple Leaf sport colour interiors.

The first publisher was Maple Leaf Publishing books out of Vancouver, BC such as Better Comics, Rocket Comics, Bing Bang Comics and Lucky Comics. The aforementioned Maple Leaf comics introduced the first Canadian superhero in Better Comics #1 in March of 1941 (The Iron Man). Maple Leaf comics are deemed to be the scarcest and command a premium when changing hands. Anglo American (Double "A") Publishing in Toronto introduced Freelance and a host of Fawcett derived characters to Canada, including Captain Marvel and Spy Smasher. The next publisher was Bell Features in Toronto with Johnny Canuck, Nelvana, the Penguin and Thunderfist, etc. in such flagship titles as Dime Comics, Triumph Comics, Active Comics, and Commando Comics. Finally, Educational Projects out of Montreal, Quebec introduced Canada Jack in its flagship title, Canadian Heroes.

It is important to note that these vestiges of Canadian Pop Culture helped create a Canadian identity within their pages. Canada Jack was an athlete that battled the 5th column saboteurs on the Canadian home front in Canadian Heroes comic books. While he was not larger than life and not endowed with super powers, the Canadian youth of the Second World War at home could emulate and subsequently identify with Canada Jack. This sort of homegrown sentiment could also be likened to Johnny Canuck, who while also was not larger than life, helped smash the Axis abroad, including Hitler.

Nelvana was the first superhero with a Canadian national identity, and graced the pages of Triumph Comics. In fact, Nelvana pre-dated Wonder Woman by almost four months! She came to aid of the indigenous peoples of the North West Territories in her early appearances, and could fly along the Aurora Borealis.

Sadly, the War Exchange Conservation Act was repealed in 1946, and subsequently American comic books were allowed to be imported into Canada. Hence, Captain America and Superman and their brethren replaced their Canadian counterparts in full colour for only a dime. This ushered in the demise of the "Canadian Whites", as the floundering industry could no longer compete. The last ditch efforts to produce Canadian homegrown comics in full color just did not stand up against their American predecessors. Subsequently, many of the publishing houses in Canada folded, including Anglo-American publishing, Maple Leaf Publishing, and eventually Bell Features.

2016 was a pivotal year for Canadian Golden Age comic books (AKA: Canadian Whites) in terms of not only prices realized at auction, but new unseen rarities coming to light.

One such remarkable discovery was an obscure comic/pulp was published in Toronto by Victory Publishing entitled Victory in May 1941. On its cover is a rather crude rendering of an unknown Canadian costumed superhero named Rock Thunder by none other than Ted Steele. Ted was a prolific artist in the Bell Features publishing stable in Toronto during the war years. He contributed such characters such as Speed Savage (the White Mask) for Triumph Comics. Rock Thunder currently remains an enigma. However, some information has come to light regarding this elusive book and I would suggest that albeit a pulp, it is significantly historic in the realm of Canadian Golden Age pop culture for a few reasons:

ROCK THUNDER...1st Canadian costumed superhero rendered by Ted Steele after Wolf Savage in April 1941. Rock appeared a scant two months after Canada's first superhero appeared in Better Comics # 1 in March of 1941 named Iron Man by Vern Miller.

This hero preceeded Nelvana, Johnny Canuck, Freelance, Thunderfist, et al. In fact, Rock Thunder may have been a crude prototype of the White Mask, (AKA Speed Savage).

The book screams Canadian, right down to the Maple Leaf on Rock Thunder's Chest. The costume with the boots, gloves, and the two guns are similar to that of the later costume donned by Speed Savage. The title is emblazoned with the colors of the Union Jack, that was contemporaneously Great Britain's flag. Remember, Canada was a British commonwealth nation in 1941.

The tome is both fascinating and über-rare, with only one other known copy in existence in a private collection. Victory is an esoteric book that is now only coming to light as a hidden gem in the arena of the Canadian Golden Age of comics.

In Spring of 2016, Comiclink accepted a consignment of roughly 300 Canadian Whites by an anonymous consignor that are being auctioned off over several auctions into 2017. Some of the prices realized have been stunning. The highlights speak volumes (pun intended)

Notable 2016 Canadian Golden Age Comic Sales Via Auction: Robin Hood #1 Uncertified $3399.00; Victory #1 CGC 5.0 $2175.00; Nelvana NN CGC 5.0 $14750.00; Triumph Comics #7 CGC 2.0 $9000.00; Dime Comics #1 CGC 3.5 $5800.00; Commando Comics #1 CGC 0.5 wrong back cover $3000.00; Triumph-Adventure Comics #4 CGC 0.5 3.0 $2600.00; and Wow Comics #18 CGC 2.5 $3600.00

Notable 2016 Personal Sales: Marvel Mystery 128 Page Timely Annual Uncertified Extensive professional Restoration $7800.00; Jewish War Heroes # 2 Uncertified $2700.00 and Weird Suspensstories # 1 CGC 6.5 $3500.00

Based on the aforementioned auction results and personal sales, it looks like prices are strong across the board and show no signs of slowing down. Scarcity and Demand are the driving factors. It should be interesting to see if the prices come out of the stratosphere in 2017.

DOUG MABRY THE GREAT ESCAPE

Greetings once again from Tennessee and Kentucky! The comic market continues to plug along pushed forward by other media. But how long can that last? At some point, TV and movies will have mined every minor character ever created, and first appearances seem to be what's driving the market right now. In fact, the back issue market seems to consist in the largest part of people trying to find first appearances no matter how obscure. Except for Batman, X-Men, and Spider-Man, this year has been slow for people putting together runs. But the comic market is nothing if not cyclical, and who knows what next year will bring?

While back issue sales have been steady in terms of dollars, if not units moved, the new comic market has slowed a bit this year. DC's Rebirth reboot has not caught the public's imagination like the New 52 did. In fact, it seemed to be a great jumping off point for many of our customers. It could be that people find themselves disenfranchised after investing so much energy in the books for them to be rebooted so often, it could be that the stories just don't appeal to them as much, or it could be some other factor like the economy. Whatever the case, Rebirth has not achieved like the New 52.

Marvel, however, continues to move along at a pretty consistent pace. In particular, the Netflix series seem to have translated into sales of those characters more than even the movies have. The consistent quality of the Marvel Cinematic Universe has kept their comics as relevant as ever. Now let's talk about some specifics.

Golden Age: This has been a pretty strong area for us this year. We've gotten in more Golden Age than we have since the Great Recession in 2008-2010. And the prices on the more sought after books have really increased in the last year. I monitor prices in this area pretty closely, and I've seen substantial increases in demand and price on things like the Better/Standard/Nedor line. In particular, the esoteric super-hero comics are bringing way over Guide in many cases. MLJ books have always been tough to find and pricey, but low grade copies are through the roof. Also hot are the Ace comics like Super-Mystery, Prize Comics, and Harvey's Speed Comics. On the other hand, I've seen a bit of a softening for pre-Code horror this year. I was able to purchase a couple of the most sought after horror covers for substantially less than in the past few years, and we've had a few that have sat on the walls here for a few months before selling. Of course, the pre-Code horror market seems to go through these swings every few years, so it's really nothing new.

Silver Age: Silver Age books, on the other hand, have been disappearing into collections and not coming back out. While we've managed to acquire a good bit, including lots of keys, we just aren't seeing the quantities that we used to see, much less any big runs. On the other hand, some of the DC Silver Age that we have haven't been moving much, so we still have a lot of it in stock. At least in our area, titles like Action, Adventure, Metal Men, Mystery In Space, House Of Mystery, World's Finest, Lois Lane, Superboy, and Jimmy Olsen are much slower sellers.

Bronze Age: This seems to be the hottest and most volatile market at the moment. There are still enough books out there to be had, but few enough to cause lots of demand. And everyone is looking for the first appearances of overlooked characters that are plentiful in these books.

Modern Age: The '90s are finally back! We can't keep back issues of Spawn in stock! It's now been twenty-six years since 1990, and for lots of the current collectors, that was the stuff they grew up with. We've started selling lots of 1980s and '90s titles that we had even quit stocking for awhile. I can't keep any of the first series of Suicide Squad in stock, and when I do find them they're usually rough from being thrown into quarter boxes for years. But I've even had people

The Canadian Golden Age
in CGC 5.0 sold for $2175.

putting together runs of Firestorm and New Mutants.

Well, that's to overview. And now on to some sales of note:

Platinum Age: Little Orphan Annie #1, VG, $100, #2, VG, $75.00, #3, VG, $75.00, #4, VG+, $80.00, #5, Fine, $90.00, Smitty #1, VG, $100.00, #4, GD, $45.00, Smokey Stover #1, Fine, $150.00.

We also acquired several pages of Gene Colan original art from the first issue of the Howard The Duck magazine that sold from $450.00 to $725.00.

That's it for this year! If you're in the area, stop in and see us!

JON MCCLURE COLLECTOR

Greetings from Portland, Oregon! Sales this year on eBay were slow at times, but sales from Black Friday to December 5th include Batman #96 VG- (minor restoration) for $80, #109 VG $95, #153 VF- $149, #157 FN+ $110, #357 NM for $140, #181 FN $295, Daredevil #3-5 set in GD for $149, Detective #198 VG- $175, #216 GD/VG Justice League of America #9 VG $110, Marvel Premiere #15 (Marvel value stamp out) G/VG for $45, Speed Carter Spaceman #2-5 GD/VG set $275, Tales of Suspense #4 GD for $75, World's Finest #80 (minor amateur restoration) $70, #94 VG $150, X-Men #3 VG- $175, #12 VG- (minor tape) $99, and #13 F+ $149.

Low to mid-grade Marvels of any kind starting at $5 sold in antique malls at 135% Guide or higher. Double Guide was not uncommon to receive from speculators and collectors looking for undervalued and overlooked titles. Comics sometimes sell in person that just won't move online, even at a fraction of the cost, and reminding buyers that such books are forty years old can help close a deal. Walking Dead has slowed a bit since season seven's "head smashing" episode as it turned off many longtime readers and watchers. Can't say I disagree as Glenn's death, in my view, was unnecessary and inappropriate, and he was a highly relatable character going back to season one. Most customers watch as well as collect, so when one goes, the other feels it. I'm a small sampling so others may have had a very different retail response.

DCs were slow to move this year in general except for key issues. Archies sold well overall. I sold less low grade Dells this year except for Western titles in the $5 to $15 range at an average of 100% Guide, with Westerns bringing about 60-75% Guide. Charlton Romance sales slowed this year, with low to mid-grade copies selling in the $5 to $15 range, although with no resistance to $20 and up on VF or better copies. Comic sales in general were slightly up (regardless of publisher) from last year, with TV and movie tie-ins keys impossible to keep in stock.

Marvel Type 1 test market cover price variants continue to break record sales results that are well above the listed values of easy to find Bronze Age key books such as Incredible Hulk #181(11/74) listed in OPG #46 at $3000 in raw 9.2 NM-. The highest recorded sale for a 9.4 Star Wars #1 35 cent variant is currently $26,290! Type 1 variants lead the herd in demand due to scarcity because such variants were not created to be collectible. Publisher experiments in the 20th century repeatedly birthed Type 1 cover price variants immediately before universal price hikes, such as the shift from 10 to 12 cents per copy that occurred in January 1962, and the 25 cent to 30 cent shift famously embodied by the Marvel variants cover dated 4-8/1976 and from 30 to 35 cents for variants cover dated 6-10/1977. Despite much heckling back in the day from fellow advisors and critics, when I discovered and publicized the existence of the Marvel cover price variants in August 1997, such comics have soared in popularity and value. For a history of comic book variants from the Golden Age to the present, as well as a list of known variants and a lexicon of variant types, with examples that continue to evolve and expand, refer to my article from 2010 in the Overstreet Comic Book Price Guide #40, "A History of Publisher Experimentation and Variant Comic Books," pages #1010-1038.

Marvel Type 1 test market cover price variants are absolutely the hottest Bronze Age books pursued by collectors and speculators, with some comics realizing prices of 40 or more times than the same non-variant issues, and often double digit multiples of listed Guide values! Auction results on Marvel test market variants can fluctuate wildly. Key books listed by the Guide in the top 10 Gold, Silver and Bronze Age categories are there due to consistent sales and demand, and two of the top Bronze Age comics are 35 cent variants. With the Iron Fist Netflix show coming out in March 2017, the already hot Iron Fist #14 35 cent variant should get a bump.

The ratio of regular 30 cent copies of Star Wars #1 in CGC 9.4 NM to 9.8 NM/M (there are over 2000) to the 35 cent variant of #1 is 200 to 1, according to the CGC census. Roughly twenty certified 35 cent copies exist in NM 9.4 or better, of which two certified copies exist in CGC 9.6 NM+ condition to date. One CGC 9.6 NM+ 35 cent variant sold in June 2015 on ComicLink for $36,500! The highest graded examples of Marvel variants are bringing truly astronomical prices at auction.

Archie 15 cent Type 1 cover price variants now have over 80% confirmed to exist, so I feel confident that all 112 issues will eventually surface. Doug Sulipa and I estimate that such 15 cent variants are about 500 times or scarcer than their 12 cent counterparts. In 2015 the few 15 cent variants that changed hands went for only about 2-3 times Guide of 12 cent editions when they changed hands at all. In 2015, the sci/fi and monster 1961-1962 regular 12 cent issues sold for about 3-5 times Guide, so the 15 cent variants of these books should logically be higher in value. It's difficult to nail down actual worth when such items are rarely change hands, and the listings do not appear in the Guide yet, although collectors and dealers are well aware. I believe all 15 cent Archie Type 1 cover price variants have enormous investment potential, especially the three super-keys: Archie's Madhouse #22(10/62), Archie's Girls Betty and Veronica #75(3/62) and Josie #1(2/63).

Sixteen different Type 1 Charlton 15 cent test market cover price variants from March 1962 may be out there, but currently Space War #15(3/62) and Texas Rangers #32(3/62) are the only two examples confirmed to exist. Such 15 cent variants are so scarce and unknown to collectors that no sales have ever been reported, and only four total copies are confirmed to exist(three #32s and one #15). No additional 15 cent variants surfaced in the last year, and real value is difficult to judge without any money changing hands. I find such cusp era variants interesting and hope collectors will share acquisitions with me and/or the Guide so I can disseminate the information.

U.S. published Type 1a cover price variants simultaneously published for foreign distribution are increasing in demand according to Doug Sulipa. Bronze and Copper Age Marvel and to a lesser extent DC Type 1a Canadian cover price variants are now routinely selling for 150-400% Guide, and select CGC high grade key issues of popular characters have been bringing 400-2000% of Guide; such books are at least 10 times scarcer due to low print runs. Canada's population is about 10% of the US population, thus about 10% of all Print Runs are Canadian copies, however roughly 80% of the surviving copies are Direct Editions, bought in comic shops and saved by collectors. Most of the Newsstand editions were bought by non-collecting readers, with a much lower survival rate, and most are well read FR/GD to FN/VF copies. Most VF/NM or better Type 1a Canadian Newsstand Cover Price Variants are 50 to 300 times scarcer than their US Direct Market counterparts in high grade; randomly checking the CGC census will substantiate this for most items. High grade examples from the Silver and Bronze age of Type 1a variants are scarcer still, largely due to damages that occurred in transit, and in particular water damage found on pence editions shipped overseas. Such difficulties predate contemporary standard procedures like simultaneous off-site printing, a reality that renders the concept of origination meaningless, at least for modern books. Marvel collectors dominate about 75% of the Type 1a Canadian cover price and British pence variant market, while DC and the others split the remaining 25%, with non-DC books accounting for less than 10% of total sales, a ratio that steepens when you hit the 1990s, when Type 1a cover price variants that don't say Marvel or at least DC have yet to show any real pulse outside of key issues.

Interest is increasing in the five DC pence issues that exist from the early Bronze Age: Action #402(7/71), Adventure #408(7/71), Detective #413(7/71), Flash #208(8/71), and Superman's Pal Jimmy Olsen #139(7/71). Action #402, Detective #413, and Flash #208 have Neal Adams covers, and the Flash issue is a 52 page Giant, so such books have attractive qualities beyond just being Type 1a variants, and can bring 300-400% Guide or more than cents editions. Interest is also increasing in DC pence editions published from March 1978 to September 1981, and such books often bring double Guide or more.

Dell Canadian and U.K. Type 1a cover price editions are being collected more, and currently sell at a modest premium of 125-150% of standard cents editions. Western Publishing's Type 1a Canadian 75 cent cover price variants of 60 cent Whitmans from 1984 sell briskly at 300-400% Guide due to extremely low print runs, according to Doug Sulipa, who states that he has a waiting list for any copies in Fine Plus or better condition. It should be noted that alleged copies of 1983 Type 1a 75 cent Whitman variants do not exist. Whitman pre-pack comics dated 8-12/1980 are red hot sellers due to scarcity and bring $100-$500 or more in Very Fine or better condition. Some dealers have been trying to sell GD/VG copies of the 8-12/1980 Gold Key comics with asking prices of $500 to $1000, which is too much for the market to bear and discourages some collectors from pursuing such scarce books at all as they cannot afford to collect them or complete sets, and also collectors can get more bang for their buck elsewhere. That said, consider a different and more sensible sale, such as the ultra-scarce Black Hole #4(9/80), the highest graded copy, selling in CGC 9.8 for a stunning $6250 on 2/21/2014! Refer to my article, "The Whitman Mystery," in Comic Book Marketplace magazine #85-86(9-10/01) for the strange story behind what caused the scarcity of Gold Key/Whitman comics dated 1980-1984 and their untimely demise!

Early Marvel Direct Sale Editions are scarcer and sell for an average of 200-300% of regular newsstand editions according to Doug Sulipa; such books were sometimes erroneously referred to as "Marvel Whitmans" due to their simultaneous distribution in department and drug stores in Whitman bags. Early Marvel Direct Market Editions have a duality of purpose, and thus have the unique honor of being "special market editions" that required a secondary market to help justify the cost of their existence in smaller print runs. The Direct Sales market was in its infancy, and Marvel wanted to monitor retailers' return credits, hence the confusion surrounding the odd but necessary difference in appearance between such books and their newsstand counterparts. Short gaps in production occurred from 2/1977 to 5/1979, as it cost less for Marvel to roll the dice against bogus returns than over-produce books erratically purchased by chain retailers. All early Direct Market Editions were produced except for the cover dates 1-3/1978, 7/1978, and 3-4/1979, and such comics are sought after largely by hardcore Marvel collectors and completists.

Collectibles have long been a hedge against inflation. Thoughtful buyers and speculative investors of comic books usually enjoy a faster, higher return than slower liquid investments. Sell your books while they are hot!

TODD McDEVITT NEW DIMENSION COMICS

First a little background on me to support why the folks at Overstreet deem my ranting worthy of some space in The Guide. I just celebrated my 30th year of opening my 1st store. I've been dealing in comics for over half my life. Now, I'm up to 6 store locations in the Pittsburgh, PA region. I also attend a lot conventions in the northeast especially. If I can drive there, I get there! Where I'm a bit weaker in online. I don't sell much there because I don't need to. All the great collections I buy get gobbled up by my store customers, and

I take highlights on the road to the conventions. In fact, I'm very often pursuing collections while I travel. I've been accused of being the American Pickers of comics especially when I roll up in my similar looking cargo van. The difference is that I don't usually "pick" because I want to buy it all!

This past year has been filled with pregnant pauses. Comics have spiraled upwards again. But when will the bubble burst? Record prices continue to be set. I've even had folks offer me big collections at a pricey premium saying that "these are going to be worth more soon". They might be right, but that's not how this works. While most comics are trending up, some have faltered. Thor #344 was a solid $25 book for a good while, and while it's the 1st Malekith, a big part of me saw this jump in price and said "who cares?". Plus, this is deep enough into the popular Walt Simonson run that orders would have increased, so there are plenty out there. I may be a prophet since I priced 2 this week at $12. The dips seem to come when the speculation doesn't pay off. By the time this sees ink, Moon Knight may or may not be a Netflix hit. Today, I priced a #1 at $25. This was a $3 book a year ago. I sold a Werewolf By Night #32 (FN/VF) for $500 recently as well. Good luck, Moon Knight!!

Bulk buying: I had a guy call me this week with an unopened CASE of Daredevil #181 for sale. I just bought a collection with 3 of this book this week. I keep pricing it at $25 and it keeps moving, but it is not something I really need 200 copies of.

Folks are reaching that age where they want to simplify their lives and cash in their collections. I almost prefer dealing with them. Guys that have been collecting for years get how the process works. They understand the market, the hobby, and my role in it. Often, they are very reasonable about what price to sell their collection for. Sure, they can do it the hard way and likely make more, but that takes time, effort, and a giant learning curve. And they know that and are happy to part with them into my fold. I'm at a point in my career that guys I have been selling to for decades are now ready to sell them and I'm flattered they think highly enough of me to continue supporting New Dimension Comics.

This past year I attended more comicons (apparently this is now a real word) than ever. It's always great to hit the road, enjoy a new town, buy some collections, and meet with friends and peers. Plus, it's been interesting to watch this scene evolve in recent years. Cons used to be a meeting of fans and collectors seeking to immerse themselves even deeper into the hobby. They are still there, but so are new factions. Families, cosplayers, celebrity autograph hounds. But, these are not folks looking to dig for an obscure back issue. So, I often have a choice when I vend at these. Do I just bring a traditional selection of long boxes of comics and a display wall of vintage goodies? Or, do I bring items with popular appeal for the masses? Sometimes I do both. This new breed of con attendee is browsing. They will stroll the aisles to see what comicon is all about. So, if you can catch their eye with a popular thing, you can make a few bucks. “Few” is the key word. They may already be down on funds from admission costs or autograph fees. My best seller last year? Pokémon comics for $3-6. At one show, I made about $1000 on these while my Hulk #181 sat on my display rack unloved.

Cosplay may be creating the collectors of the future. Many veteran dealers are annoyed by these folks. They clutter up the aisles and don't spend money on traditional comics much. The joke is that they don't have pockets, so they don't have anywhere to carry money. But, they are there. They are dipping into the hobby. It's a new way to turn kids onto comics. They may just be gathering in hallways and taking selfies for now, but some of them will embrace comics all the way. Ten years from now, they will be out of college and starting career jobs, so they will have money rolling in. Some small percentage of cosplayers will become collectors. A guy who dressed up as Deadpool might become nostalgic for that New Mutants #98 that they could not afford when he was younger and chase one down. I had a gal dressed as a Vulcan buy a Gold Key Star Trek from me that she planned to frame.

STEVE MORTENSEN MIRACLE COMICS

2016 was another great year for comics in all genres. I was surprised to see the surge in post-2000, “Millennial Age,” comics. Led by issues like Walking Dead #1 and Saga #1 as well as Copper/Modern Age stalwarts like New Mutants #98, Batman Adventures #12, New Teen Titans #2, and Teenage Mutant Ninja Turtles #1, the high-end (9.8+) market has exploded. New Mutants #98 sells for $600 in 9.8 and $7,500 in 9.9; Batman Adventures #12 sells for $2,000 in 9.8; New Teen Titans #2 sells for $600 in 9.8; Teenage Mutant Ninja Turtles #1 (1st Print) sells for $27,000 in 9.8. Walking Dead #1 has been selling for $3,000 in 9.8 and $14,000 in 9.9. Saga #1 has shown great potential and had a big surge in 2016. It sells for $400 in 9.8 and the variant edition sells for $1,500 in 9.8.

Wonder Woman's first appearance in All Star Comics #8 has been very strong. The first appearances of the triad of Batman, Superman, and Wonder Woman are seeing their prices rise with the impact of the movies (Batman v Superman, Wonder Woman - 2017). All Star Comics #8 (December 1941) sold for $411,000 in 9.0 in April 2015. This issue came out the same month as the Pearl Harbor bombing that brought the country into World War II. This past December 7 marked the 75th anniversary of Pearl Harbor, which also launched an explosion of comics that were popular with the troops. During the war, comics served a dual role of providing entertainment to the troops and spreading war-related messages like “The Red Cross Needs Your Support.” Action Comics #1 (June 1938) sold for $3.2 million in the same grade in 2014 and Detective Comics #27 (May 1939) sold for $1 million in 2010 in 8.0. There is still a wide gap in prices, however All Star Comics #8 has seen a 35% gain in 5.5 since 2014 ($45,000 in 2014 to $65,000 in 2016).

Luke Cage Hero for Hire and Marvel Spotlight #5 (1st Ghost Rider) have seen some incredible numbers in 9.8 condition. In February of 2016, Luke Cage Hero for Hire #1 sold for $24,000 in 9.8. It last sold in 2014 for $6,102 in 9.8 – a 293% increase in price. Luke Cage has been a highly popular character recently, partly due to the new TV show. Marvel Spotlight #5 in 9.8 last sold for $48,500 in October of 2016. The previous sale was in 2013 when the book sold for $13,145. In 2016, Luke Cage Hero for Hire #1 had a NM- 9.2 Guide value of $900 and Marvel Spotlight #5 had a NM- 9.2 Guide value of $950. This shows the incredible power of third-party grading on high-end comics.

Suicide Squad was a popular movie this year. Its Silver Age first appearance in Brave and the Bold #25 has shot up in value since the movie was announced. In 2015, a copy in 9.2 sold for $25,000. Low grade Good copies sold in the $700 range in 2016.

Speaking of Suicide Squad, one of my and my daughter's favorite characters is Killer Croc. We like to buy toys and comics of him and it has become a bonding experience for us. His physical characteristics have morphed over the years. He first took the form of a WWE wrestler that had the skin of a lizard (1983). Newer versions of the character make him more alligator-like with the form of a massive, man-eating monster. There are several issues that claim the first appearance of Killer Croc. Detective Comics #523 is the earliest with a cameo appearance (February 1983). That issue sells in 9.8 for $100. Batman #357 is next, also with a cameo appearance (March 1983). That issue sells in 9.8 for $500. It is also the first appearance of Jason Todd. Batman #358 is considered Croc's first full appearance (April 1983) and it sells in 9.8 for $300. Croc's first cover appearance is Detective Comics #525 (April 1983) and it sells in 9.8 for $100. This cover shows him from the back arising out of the sewers. His first cover appearance in Batman is issue #359 (May 1983) and it sells in 9.8 for $165. That is the first time we see him from the front on a comic book cover with an array of villains around him. This is the iconic cover that fans associate with his first appearance.

An early Killer Croc cameo and Jason Todd's debut make Batman #357 a strong seller.

In closing, a note about buying and selling: I purchased several collections this year and passed on many others. I've found the adage of “buy what you know” also applies to “sell what you know.” Recently, a friend of mine gave me a referral for a collection. The owner purchased storage lockers and was looking to offload a collection he found in a locker he bought. He had no idea what he was selling and unknowledgeable on the prices of comics. In addition, he did not understand condition. To the novice eye, a Fine comic looks like a Near Mint comic under the presentation of a bag and board. As mentioned above, the prices are far apart. I wasn't expecting a Near Mint collection, however, I buy in bulk and sometimes take my chances on what will pass a 9.8 pre-screen. I specialize in 1980s-current comics, which are best purchased in larger quantities. I made him a fair offer but he refused, thinking that he had something of great value. I've found some of my best deals over the years have come from fellow dealers who understand condition and prices.

The excitement is all in the hunt. This hobby has given me great satisfaction over my 30+ years of collecting. The community that exists in the hobby is very supportive and passionate about collecting. I'm looking forward to 2017 and what lies ahead for the comic market.

MARC NATHAN CARDS, COMICS AND COLLECTIBLES BALTIMORE COMIC-CON

This hasn't been an easy year for new comics, but some Gold, Silver and Bronze Age titles have thrived.

New Comics: It was a tough year for new books based on missed opportunities from publishers, but DC Comics came through in the middle of the year with Rebirth. Rebirth sold very well – while Marvel Comics titles currently this year did not sell that well for lots of reasons. Some of that was due to late shipping, with delayed roll outs of new number ones. Marvel did have some hits this year; Black Panther was certainly a hit. It was easy to see that was going to happen. Here we are, though, on Thanksgiving weekend and the Civil War II event has not even come close to an ending. That was a summer event – Civil War II #1 came out in May. It seems like the number of titles coming out of the event; the future of the Marvel Universe, people are tired of already. It's dragged on too long.

It seems that Marvel is starting their titles over regardless of what title it is because of new creative teams and story arcs. If you look at older volumes of trade paperbacks, say Daredevil for instance, and you look at the numbering for the Brian Bendis run and the Ed Brubaker run, they were sequential issues of the comics, but they were volumes #1 #2, #3, and #4. So, I think publishers are treating the monthlies the same way they are treating the trades by publishing the comics (via) different volumes – which is that a new creative team gets a new number one and a new direction. It seems like that's how they are doing it.

From this time last year, one new publisher that shows it's achieving above the rest is Aftershock. And, it's still growing. Every title that they release should be here for the long haul because Aftershock is making some very good comics, with a couple of breakaway hits. The whole line should be looked at. They are a very good publisher, and I hope they are around forever.

BOOM! Studios has been producing quality comics this year like Strange Fruit, Klaus, Skybourne, The Woods and Goldie Vance – all of which are great four-color hits that sell very well to readers. Valiant Entertainment also makes some very good, underrated books.

Image Comics chugs along with something new every month, and they certainly have a lot of followers. Image is probably one of the most diverse of today's comic book publishers because there is no house style. Plus it's not a superhero line like it was 20 years ago. It's what each creator brings to the table – and what they bring to the table are usually fresh ideas. There can be a Western, there can be a fantasy, there can be a comedy and there could be a drama. The bottom line: Image Comics publishes creator-driven stories.

Golden Age: In Golden Age, what issues are hot are not necessarily the keys unless it's Batman and Detective Comics. They are head and shoulders the best-selling of the Golden Age DC titles – especially when you have a Joker cover. Superman and Action Comics sell extremely well if they have a World War II cover. Almost all Action issues are hot.

With Timely Comics, as soon I get them they leave, so they don't matter. And, at good conventions, everything esoteric can sell, such as '50s Horror and Sci-Fi comics which sell great, especially if they have a strange looking cover like you've never seen before.

EC sell great, while Dells also sell very well. Dells are very underrated with how well they sell. At a convention, I would recommend putting photo covers on the wall. You'd be surprised how well they sell – especially John Wayne and I Love Lucy covers. Anything you have in inventory; you'd be surprised.

At the same time, a couple of the publishers are difficult to sell. Like Lev Gleason titles, which are very slow. Everything Fiction House is hit or miss. Some Quality Comics are still selling very well, while others are still sitting – even if they are great comics.

Silver Age: Marvel Silver Age has been selling as well as it ever has, if not better – probably based on movies, TV, and interest. Any first appearance of any Marvel character could be listed as hot; I don't care which character it is. Any speculation at all is driving all of them.

Likewise, in some cases, the same is going on with DC Silver Age first appearances, but not like Marvel where it's across the board. Although, some DC first appearances get hot, too.

So, everything Marvel sells, as well as DC keys. Comic books runs are slow, except for, again, Batman and Detective. Batman Silver Age books outsell the Detectives, except for the Neal Adams books. Everything Neal Adams is selling above board. Get every Neal Adams title that you can get your hands on. Partially, the high success rate of his books is because Neal has been to so many conventions this year – he’s out of the house, so he’s around. And he’s doing new books for DC Comics like Superman: The Coming of the Supermen.

Bronze Age: Everything that’s Bronze Age from Marvel is selling well. Even titles low on the list like Strange Tales: Brother Voodoo sell great. Things like that – it’s everything across the board.

Bronze is even hotter than Silver Age books now because everybody can buy it – not just a select few.

And all retailers and collectors can continue to enjoy the hobby because of that one unbeatable principle: comics are for everyone. Whether it is reading the books, adding them to your collections, or just pulling off that one fantastic sale that’s going to lead to many more on the horizon, comic books have had a long, glorious history, and look forward to an even brighter future. In other words, comics stand the test of time.

JOSH NATHANSON, DOUGLAS GILLOCK & RICK HIRSCH COMICLINK

ComicLink.com has been serving the comic book collecting community for 22 years now as a consignment-based firm. Between our Featured and Focused Auctions and The Exchange, we have leveraged the power of the Internet since 1996 as a primary conduit between buyers and sellers transacting in the sale of valuable vintage comic books and related original art online. To date, over 300,000 vintage comic books have transacted between ComicLink buyers and sellers. We are pleased to report that 2016 was the biggest year we’ve ever seen for our auction division. Aggressive buyers scooped up many thousands of certified comic books and original artwork to enhance their collections, setting hundreds (if not thousands) of sales records for the hobby. We saw a continuation of the trend of the past couple of years, where strength was exhibited across virtually every collecting genre. From Golden Age rarities of the 1930s and early ‘50s to the Silver and Bronze Age keys and high-grades of the late 1950s through the ‘70s, and right up through Copper and Modern Age era, the bar was raised on record sales this year. We see this growth trend continuing for years to come. Superhero movies are now the #1 most popular form of entertainment in the world with the build up and release of each film capturing massive attention from millions of fans. 2017 will be the biggest year yet for Hollywood movies and TV shows devoted to our beloved characters and the attention from the mainstream world will continue to create new collectors for decades to come who will be interested in the vintage appearances of their favorites.

Amazing Spider-Man #2, with the debut of The Vulture, was one of the exceptional sales of the year.

Silver Age: Demand for Silver Age comics is as strong as it has ever been. As usual, major Marvel and DC keys led the way in 2016 with exceptional results for several premiere and “1st app” issues achieved. The traditional keys sold for record amounts including X-Men #1 CGC 9.6 for $350,000, Incredible Hulk #1 CCG 9.0 for $275,000 and Tales to Astonish #27 CGC 9.4 for $205,501. Later Silver Age keys have started seeing some amazing prices including Fantastic Four #52 (1st Black Panther) CGC 9.8 Curator pedigree for $90,000, Superman #199 (1st Superman/Flash race) CGC 9.6 for $19,750 and Detective Comics #359 (1st Batgirl) CGC 9.4 Pacific Coast pedigree for $13,380. In addition to the usual list of valuable books that most collectors are very familiar with, we saw some exceptional prices paid for books that don’t immediately come to mind when you think “valuable Silver Age comics”. For example, X-Men #28 (1st Banshee) CGC 9.8 sold for $9,901, Iron Man #7 CGC 9.8 from the Rocky Mountain collection sold for $7,500, The Flash #144 CGC 9.6 sold for $4,450, Justice League of America #19 CGC 9.4 sold for $4,100, and Marvel Super-Heroes #15 (the Medusa issue) in CGC 9.8 went for $2,400! There were hundreds of similar examples of books with prices that would shock collectors who have not been paying close attention to the market in recent years. The Bronze and Modern report below shows this trend continues into the 1970s and beyond.

With many thousands of transactions throughout the year, there are way too many examples on ComicLink.com to list all of the exceptional results here, but here are some representative Silver Age examples: Action Comics #252 (1st Supergirl) CGC 8.0 for $15,300, #254 (1st adult Bizarro) CGC 9.2 for $1,750, Adventure Comics #247 (1st Legion of Superheroes) CGC 6.0 for $6,212, #335 CGC 9.8 for $2,066, Amazing Spider-Man #1 (2nd appearance, series begins) CGC 9.2 for $75,000, #2 (1st Vulture) CGC 9.0 for $8,400, #3 (1st Doctor Octopus) CGC 9.0 for $7,100, #6 (1st Lizard) CGC 9.4 for $7,864, #16 (1st crossover with Daredevil) CGC 9.8 for $17,750, #22 CGC 9.8 for $15,500, #23 (early Green Goblin) CGC 9.6 for $11,111, #39 (1st Romita art, Green Goblin revealed as Norman Osborn) CGC 9.4 for $2,660, #50 (1st Kingpin) CGC 9.2 for $2,657, #71 (Quicksilver appearance) CGC 9.8 for $1,977, Aquaman #1 CGC 9.4 for $14,001, #35 (1st Black Manta) CGC 9.0 for $1,601, Avengers #4 (1st SA Captain America) CGC 9.0 for $7,300, #53 (X-Men crossover) CGC 9.8 for $1,351, #55 (1st full Ultron) CGC 9.8 for $5,950, #57 (1st Vision) CGC 9.4 for $2,012, Batman #189 (1st SA Scarecrow) CGC 9.6 for $2,400, Brave and the Bold #25 (1st Suicide Squad) CGC 8.5 for $6,125, #28 (1st Justice League) CGC 7.5 for $13,350, Captain America #100 (SA series begins) CGC 9.9 for $63,500, #110 (classic Steranko Hulk cover) CGC 9.8 for $1,777, Captain Marvel #1 (series begins) CGC 9.8 for $4,100, #17 CGC 9.8 for $1,877, #18 (Carol Dan-

Golden Age: Golden Age continued to be a key focus for many of ComicLink's buyers in 2016 and we were excited to offer the largest selection of quality Golden Age books at auction that we've ever provided to our buyers, including hundreds of certified examples from key pedigrees including Mile High, San Francisco, Big Apple, Larson and many more. Early appearances of DC's "Trinity" of Superman, Batman and Wonder Woman saw many record prices across grades this year. The extreme rarity of the early issues of Action Comics and Detective Comics coupled with the popularity of the characters has driven up prices on all of the late 1930s issues to a high degree. These books are in high demand in any grade--even coverless. Wonder Woman's successful introduction into DC's cinematic universe has collectors paying big prices for her colorful Golden Age adventures. Covers from throughout the Golden Age featuring Batman villains including Joker, Penguin, Catwoman, Two-Face, Riddler and Scarecrow were in especially high demand. Classic covers including the World War II Timely/Marvel era work of Alex Schomburg and the more memorable pre-Code horror classics of the early 1950s continued to explode in value as well. We were excited to auction a large collection of extremely rare Canadian Whites that sold at high prices even in very low grade. In many cases with this collection, these are the only examples that have ever surfaced!

Just a small sampling of top 2016 Golden Age sales includes Action Comics #7 (2nd Superman cover) CGC 6.0 for $175,000 and CGC 2.0 for $71,000, #10 (3rd Superman cover) CGC 0.5 for $9,600, #13 (4th Superman cover) CGC 6.5 for $70,777, #17 CGC 6.0 for $11,518, #19 CGC 6.5 for $7,877, #23 (1st Luthor) CGC 6.5 for $28,052, #96 CGC 9.6 for $3,350, Adventure Comics #60 (last Sandman in gas mask cover) CGC 8.0 for $3,577, #72 (1st Simon & Kirby DC art) CGC 8.5 for $7,500, All Star Comics #8 (1st Wonder Woman) CGC 2.0 for $32,000, All Winners Comics #12 CGC 8.0 for $7,700, #19 (1st Marvel team comic ever--the All Winners Squad) CGC 7.0 for $6,350, Amazing-Man Comics #5 (1st issue) CGC 6.0 Larson pedigree for $10,501, #13 CGC 8.0 Mile High pedigree for $2,700, #26 CGC 3.0 for $7,060, America's Best Comics #7 CGC 6.5 for $2,358, Archie Comics #50 (classic Betty "headlights" cover) CGC 8.0 for $4,600, Batman #1 (1st Joker & 1st Catwoman) CGC 2.5 for $64,000, #3 (1st Catwoman in costume) CGC 6.0 for $3,634, #6 CGC 8.5 for $5,600, #63 (1st Killer Moth) CGC 7.0 for $1,479, Black Cat Mystery #50 (classic horror face melting cover) CGC 8.5 for $9,867, Blue Beetle #32 CGC 9.4 Mile High pedigree for $6,000, Captain America Comics #1 (1st Captain America, Bucky and Red Skull) CGC 2.0 for $45,000, #2 (2nd Captain America and Bucky) CBCS 5.5 for $8,100, #6 CGC 8.5 for $13,249, #18 CGC 9.6 for $32,000, #49 CGC 9.6 for $9,976, Captain America Comics #NN (rare 132 page "Annual" from 1942) CGC 2.5 for $9,560, Scarcity and particularly scarcity in grade are key factors here with buyers extremely educated on the availability of these items and stepping up aggressively when they did come to market. The Golden Age market is also extremely cover driven right now and even at the lower end of the pricing spectrum a book with a stand-out cover can blow the doors off Guide prices when properly promoted.

Bronze Age and Modern Age: It was not that many years ago that there were only a handful of valuable comics from 1970 and beyond that would sell for $1,000 or more. In recent years that number has increased exponentially thanks to the impact of Hollywood and the realization that books from these eras, the oldest of which will be 50 years old in a few years, are not as plentiful in high grade as once thought. While the strong prices for first appearances is not surprising, perhaps even more impressive is seeing prices of $1,000, $2000 and up for non-key "run" books from the early '70s on titles such as Iron Man, Captain America and Thor and X-Men. Check out the prices at the end of this section for the

X-Men reprint era issues for an example of how books once thought to have little value are now seen as highly collectible with large price tags that once only applied to Golden Age and Silver Age keys. Scarcity in high grade has led to books like X-Men #76 selling for $3,400 in CGC 9.6, higher than the much more famous X-Men #94 in the same grade! When a book like Night Nurse #1 in CGC 9.8 sells for $7,700 like it did in December of 2016, you know the Bronze Age has started to truly earn its name! With dozens of movies and TV shows now featuring characters of this era, with many more to come, there seems to be no end to the potential for these great comics. The 1980s right now are like the 1970s of 10 or 15 years ago, with only a handful of books selling for big bucks. While '80s books exist in high grade in greater supply than '70s books, it would not surprise us to see an explosion of interest in early '80s books over the next few years, along with corresponding price increases. When the Power Pack and New Warriors movies are inevitably announced, don't say we didn't warn you!

2017 seems poised to be filled with many more record-breakers on ComicLink.com. With over two decades online serving buyers and sellers in the collecting community, ComicLink is the longest running and most established consignment service in the hobby. If you have material like some of the books or artwork described above and you would like to achieve the types of prices described, come to the web site, view our auction schedule, and give us a call and we will work hand-in-hand with you to optimize the value of your collection. Not only do we sell original art and certified comic books, but we also help owners of collections of every experience level to maximize the value of their collections. We assist owners with everything from evaluating their comic books for third party grading certification with CGC and CBCS to processing, marketing and selling them. We do all this work, and offer upfront cash advances, for a very minimal commission rate, with the focus being a high level of service for each of our sellers.

TOM NELSON TOP NOTCH COMICS

Another year is in the books here in early December 2016 for my 2016 market recap and report for the 2017 Overstreet Comic Book Price Guide.

We as a business sell back issues 100% online from the Golden Age to just a few years ago. We do not sell new comics or have a Diamond account. I tend to stay away from current hot moderns and specialize in collectable comics that have gained collector status.

We did sell thousands of Gold and Silver Age comics through a number of online brokers this year and sales were very strong. I want to concentrate my market report this year on books from 1970-1999 and break them up into three eras: 1970-1979, 1980-1989, and 1990 to 1999. I'm going to put together my top 10 from each of these eras and concentrate on comics that had decent distribution to the entire United States. That means I'm not going to include price variants, errors, recalled, pre-packs, convention exclusives, mail away comics and other books that had very spotty distribution. I realize they are valuable and collectable, but tracking sales is difficult as some do not trade on the open market. My goal with these lists is to hit the comic collecting community square. My requirement to qualify for my top ten lists is the book is sold online at least monthly in any type of grade, not necessary high grade, and is available at most major conventions.

Here we go with the 1970 - 1979 listing the 9.2 value:

- 1) Incredible Hulk #181 - $3,500
- 2) Cerebus #1 - $3,000

- 3) House of Secrets #92 - $2,500
- 4) Scooby Doo #1 - $2,500
- 5) Green Lantern #76 - $1,800
- 6) Hero for Hire #1 - $1,500
- 7) Amazing Spider-Man #129 - $1,500
- 8) Giant-Size X-Men #1 - $1,500
- 9) Iron Man #55 - $1,400
- 10) Werewolf By Night #32 - $1,300

The undisputed king of the Bronze Age is the first appearance of Wolverine in Incredible Hulk #181. The second position goes to an independent comic book that is scarce in high grade Cerebus #1 from 1977. A book who has climbed the charts in the past few years is from the DC Horror line House of Secrets #92 the first appearance of Swamp Thing. Number four is a Gold Key comic book Scooby Doo #1 from 1970, which is the first comic adaptation of this classic Saturday morning cartoon. A book that has been sliding down the charts the past few years is Green Lantern #76. An emerging book on the charts inspired by Netflix is Hero For Hire #1, the first appearance of Luke Cage at #6. The very popular Amazing Spider-Man #129 with the first appearance of Punisher has seen big increases this year and gets the #7 spot. Number #8 is taken by Giant-Size X-Men #1 which brings us the new X-Men team in 1975. Another book that has risen dramatically in recent years is Iron Man #55 the first appearance of Thanos in the ninth spot. The final spot for this year's top ten is Werewolf By Night #32 the first appearance of Moon Knight. Books that are knocking at the door for breaking into the top ten are Marvel Spotlight #5 and X-Men #94.

Here are the top ten from 1980-1989:

- 1) Teenage Mutant Ninja Turtles #1 - $4,000
- 2) Albedo #2 - $1,200
- 3) Teenage Mutant Ninja Turtles #1 2nd print - $600
- 4) Archie's Girls, Betty and Veronica #320 - $300
- 5) Daredevil #168 - $250
- 6) Crow #1 - $250
- 7) Amazing Spider-Man #300 - $250
- 8) Primer #2 - $195
- 9) New Teen Titans #2 - $185
- 10) Batman #357 - $185

The big book from the 1980s is Teenage Mutant Ninja Turtles #1 and there is no dispute about this book being King. Second goes to an Independent Albedo #2 with the first Usagi Yojimbo. Third is the second printing of Turtles #1 which had a print run of 6,000 copies. Fourth is Archie's Girls, Betty and Veronica #320 first Cheryl Blossom. Daredevil #168 has had a strong year with Frank Miller's first Elektra. A surprise book that has been moving up is Crow #1, not his first appearance but a desirable cover on a #1. The popular Amazing Spider-Man #300 first Venom is at #7. At #8 is Primer #2 is the first appearance of Grendel. New Teen Titans #2 is the first appearance of Deathstroke. The final book in our top ten is Batman #357 the first Killer Croc and Jason Todd. The list is dominated by 5

Independents, two Marvel and two DC. The print runs on the Marvel and DC are so much higher than the Independents. The demand for Turtles #1 first printing of 3000 is so high that it has pulled up the original second printing. Books on the edge of breaking the top ten Incredible Hulk #271, and Batman Dark Knight Returns #1.

- 1) Bone #1 - $1,000
- 2) Batman Adventures #12 - $500
- 3) Marvel Collectible Classics: Spider-Man #1 - $350
- 4) The Goon #1 - $250
- 5) New Mutants #98 - $250
- 6) Incredible Hulk #377 3rd printing - $250
- 7) Spawn #1 Black & White edition - $200
- 8) Preacher #1 - $175
- 9) Spider-Man #1 Platinum - $175
- 10) Marvel Collectible Classics: Spider-Man #2 - $175

Bone #1 is an independent comic book that leads the way in the 1990s decade as the most valuable comic book. A strong second place is Batman Adventures #12 being the first appearance of Harley Quinn. There is strong demand for her first appearance as she was cast in the Suicide Squad movie. Marvel Collectible Classics Spider-Man #1 lands at the #3 spot and is the Chrome version of Amazing Spider-Man #300 printed in 1998. #4 is The Goon #1 by Avatar printed in 1999. New Mutants #98 is the first appearance of Deadpool and is at the #5 position, with the strong supply of copies on the market the price of this book dropped from early 2016 when the movie was released. The Incredible Hulk #377 3rd printing has strong sales and demand on eBay and gets the 6th spot. Spot #7 is Spawn #1 Black and White printed in 1997. Preacher #1 saw strong price swings when the TV show aired in May and the price was dropping each month after the show aired but it finished up the year selling for around $175.00. At #9 is Spider-Man #1 Platinum edition printed in 1990. The final slot at #10 is the second of the Marvel Collectible Classics Spider-Man #2 1998 which is the Chrome version of 1990 Spider-Man #1. So out of my top ten there are 5 comics which are first full appearances of characters and the other five comics are reprints that are limited compared to the originals, but have desirable cover art. Books hovering just outside my list are Evil Ernie #1 and Strangers in Paradise #1.

Some of the best Modern books from 2000-2014 are Walking Dead #1 which is the King. Some other books which have been climbing in price and are turning into solid keys: NYX #3 the first appearance of X-23, Saga #1, Invincible #1, and Y the Last Man #1.

Some sales this year all in CGC certified grades: Adventure #269 6.5 $249.95, Adventure #346 8.0 $139.95, Albedo #2 8.5 $1,000.00, All Star Comics #58 9.6 $499.95, Amazing Spider-Man #6 7.0 $949.95, Amazing Spider-Man #16 8.0 $749.95, Amazing Spider-Man #50 7.5 $525.00, Amazing Spider-Man #129 9.6 $3449.95, 7.5 $725.00, 5.0 $425.00, Amazing Spider-Man #300 9.8 $1075.00, 9.6

JAMIE NEWBOLD

SOUTHERN CALIFORNIA COMICS

Welcome to our 2017 market article submission. We would have been Texas-sized toast with nothing to write about for this article had it not been for the surprising number of Golden Age collections we purchased this year. The largest GA collection we purchased consisted of mostly DCs and was the most significant collection we've ever been offered. The collection included Batman #1 on, Superman

#1 on, Action and Detective from the 1930s on and more. It was our most expensive purchase to date, but worth the effort as we sold a considerable number of books within the first 30 days. We debuted the collection at the shop to a mob of anxious locals, but quite a few buyers excitedly called in and emailed us to purchase and have us ship to them.

Shipping becomes its own negotiated factor but it is often unnecessarily expensive. Roughly ten years ago we invested in collectibles insurance to protect store inventory and cover lost or damaged items for outbound packages. We went 12-plus years without incident (with the exception of items we received). This year we experienced an interesting battle with the USPS over their insurance claim process when a book we shipped to CGC for one of our customers was damaged.

We routinely submit comics to CGC on behalf of our customers or for our own inventory. In July 2016, a long-time customer of ours had decided to submit an issue of X-23 #1 to CGC to get graded. She had purchased the comic new in 2010, but the comic had since increased substantially in value. When we prepare to submit a comic on behalf of a customer, we council them through the process and give them a preliminary grade so that they have an idea of what to expect back from CGC. Sometimes it's worth the investment for them and other times it's not. In this case, we had estimated the grade to be a 9.6 with a fair market value of $300.

We securely packed the comic up and sent it to Florida through USPS with insurance. When the comic arrived at CGC, we received an email notification that the comic had sustained damage evident by a color-breaking crease over one inch in size located parallel to the top edge of the front cover. This defect was not present when we sent the comic off, and the damage was significant enough to render the comic essentially worthless. CGC offered us two options: they could charge us to press the comic and then grade it, or they could send it back to us as is without grading it so that we could file a claim with the USPS since the package was insured. We spoke with the customer to see what she wanted to do and explained to her that pressing the comic wouldn't be worth the extra cost since pressing won't eliminate the color-breaking crease. The customer opted to file a claim, and the comic was returned.

The insurance claim was an online process; we submitted photos of the damage and a screen shot of the GPAnalysis breakdown displaying the value of X-23 #1 after CGC completed its grading process (what we expected the comic to be worth after grading).

The claim was immediately denied because the proof of value was insufficient according to the USPS claim guidelines. The second appeal was submitted by the customer and was denied again for the same reason. The denial letter outlined that a completion of payment for the insured amount must be submitted in order for them to pay the $300 insured amount. We had one last chance to get the claim approved with a third and final appeal. Before we submitted any more documents or appeals, we gave the USPS a call to see what information we could use to try to win the case.

I spoke with a supervisor for the USPS domestic claims department and explained the claim was denied due to contention over the item's value. She explained the process of appeal, and why the claim was twice denied. I asked her how someone goes about guaranteeing a collectible will be covered for the full insured value if it is lost or damaged. I offered this example to the supervisor: someone purchases a comic in 1950 for 10 cents, which has since accrued value in the comic market, and they decide to send it to the third-party grader for authentication. An original purchase receipt does not exist for this item, but we have determined the item to be worth $1,000. If this item gets lost or damaged during shipping, how are we to prove the item's value? When posed with this question, the supervisor said that she didn't know; she was as perplexed as I was. Either it was of no consequence to her and I only held onto half of her attention, or she genuinely had no knowledge of the workings of the system she supervised. In any case, if the post office requires the proof of value, why then do they not validate the value prior to selling the insurance? I offered her one final question: why should I bother buying insurance at all? She still had no answer.

For years we operated with the thought that USPS insurance was beyond reproach. Through this ordeal we've learned that collectibles are a grey area. I was curious to see if anyone else had insurance horror stories so I took the time to search for websites and even spoke with my customers to see what other people had gone through. There were many frustrated people with stories to tell, although few pertained to comic book insurance claims. There were not enough examples to quell my concerns that insured packages of comic collectibles would be covered without argument. Three people (me, my store manager Sam, and my employee Rob) spent days digging for answers pertaining to shipping insurance. What we learned was disheartening as we found compelling reasons not to trust postal insurance.

The post office will argue with claimants over the values of collectibles. Claimants get three chances to pursue a claim and there are no appeals after the third try. We won our claim on the third try, but one of my customers (an attorney) filed a claim that was denied all three times. He went a step further and wrote a letter to his congressman. The letter found its way through the government system and at some point he received confirmation that his letter was being forwarded to the Postmaster General for further investigation. Shortly after that, he received a check in the mail covering the amount for his claim. That was it; all over. There wasn't even an accompanying letter of explanation with the check.

Every search I did for alternative insurance covering shipping ended with uncertainty. Fed Ex and UPS cover damages or losses to a limited degree. Neither are interested in fussing with expensive collectibles. At least the post office has registered/insured mail holding every handler in their system accountable for the package, and that shipping tier insures up to $50,000.

So, maybe your package won't get lost. Shippers better pack like their life depends on it. Damage is one thing a shipper can control, the package can be built with as much packaging material and reinforcement as a shipper would like; or not. We all want to save a buck and packaging material can be expensive. I'd feel bad if I packed with a weak hand and the recipient was angered by my lack of effort. The loss of a package carries equal consternation.

USPS tracks packages, but you have to pay for that extra service for basic mail-outs. Fed Ex and UPS track packages every step, yet packages do go missing. Just because a package flows through their system doesn't guarantee it's where their tracking system says it is. For example: packages sent through UPS from Diamond. The package tracks to a certain point then momentarily disappears. The system can't work efficiently enough against the high volume of packages. It takes time to play catch-up. On rare occasions the package was generated at Diamond with a tracking number, but never arrived. We call those packages "ghost" boxes. Neither Diamond nor UPS ever finds proof of their existence; only a tracking number that led nowhere. Thus, insurance against loss is a must since the shipping systems are not 100% safe.

The strongest alternative to risking a shipping entity's insurance coverage suggests buying a policy with a private insurer. That's one way to protect mailed packages from theft, flood, fire and the other fears, especially at store locations. Our collectible comics are fragile and imperiled by roaming thieves. Most traditional insurance companies avoid offering policies for collectibles. If they do cover them the costs are high, often too high to make sense for many collectors. That's especially true if the collector's goal is geared specifically toward insuring shipping.

Within the world of insurance there exist insurance entities that offer insurance for specific collectibles. There are companies that insure classic cars and boats, there are companies that concentrate on jewelry policies and there are companies to insure comic books. Their goals are to write policies for people that maintain and/or ship valuable comic books. At last count with Google-search, there at least four companies vying to write policies for comic book owners and shippers.

Several of us searched the web for stories reviewing policy claims with these companies. We found few examples of claims going public. The claims that were posted on the internet included examples of domestic and international shipping insurance issues. I found several specific stories where claimants complained that their policies were cancelled right after successfully filing claims for either lost or damaged packages. These policy holders posted that they were led to believe their shipments were inarguably covered against loss or damage; fully covered. The truth makes it uncomfortable for me to buy a policy with them.

In 2006 I held a policy with one of those companies. I have no interest in stating the name of the company here. Our store was covered against flood, fire, theft and the like. Unfortunately we suffered a flood in 2007 and suffered about $12,000 in damages to boxes of modern comic books and some shelving. The policy carrier argued with us about value, set unrealistic terms to maintain the water-damaged comic books for a lengthy period of time and stalled on making payment. We fought back but could only argue them into paying about 85% of the value.

I dwelled on canceling the policy. I reasoned that I would need them to at least protect my outgoing shipments. I decided to reread my policy about coverage during the claim negotiation and skipped over shipping coverage. I went back and reviewed that page and was flabbergasted to learn that shipping protection was not 100% guaranteed. Nor was I likely to get full coverage if I didn't offer independent proof of the value of shipped comic books. All the fine print amounted to "why am I with these guys?"

I canceled my policy.

My exhaustive search for any reputable insurer that would handle shipped comic book coverage ended as this article ends; empty-handed. Comic book insurer policies have hoops to jump through to guarantee coverage of shipped comics. That's some fine print/required reading before anyone commits to a policy.

I'm tired of paying in to the USPS Insurance Slush Fund. I don't want to go on a letter-writing campaign to our government for a logical change at the USPS level. I'm wary of buying an expensive policy with a national insurer. There's no other alternative except to avoid shipping. That's not going to happen.

Calculating my own experiences covering 17 years of shipping, I've dealt with less than six episodes of shipping malfeasance. Out of those examples I've only dealt with one missing package issue; an eBay buyer in Japan claimed it never arrived. I had no way to counter his claim because protection really stops at the U.S. border. He got his way and I covered the cost. I think we are all caught up in a classic "Catch-22" scenario: I need to insure the package to protect myself, but if I insure it and something happens I may not be protected. Ugh!

2016 was the year of DC Rebirth. Similarly, Marvel Now became Now Marvel. Outside of the most extreme variants neither company's changes have registered successful as sales figures go. The initial surge with #1s reduced down to pre-2015 sales numbers. DC's $2.99 twice-monthly titles read well and I found them fun. Some of my customers, however, aren't willing to pay more than $2.99 a month for one title, so the $5.98 (minus store discount) simply provided fence-sitters with jumping-off points. I like much of the comics DC is putting out, so this isn't a grievance directed at them as much as an observation that affects my business the wrong direction. Then there is 2016's DC Comics' heavily-awaited story of the year, Dark Knight: Master Race; late, over-priced and pointless to what was happening in the DC Universe. We lost money on over-orders of variants and fewer than expected read the short-run title.

Marvel is a different story. I find their stuff often cumbersome to read. This is a first for me because Marvel comics have been my target reads since the mid-1960s. Their variant and restart madness has confused my customers lost in translating a Marvel Now #1 with a Now Marvel #1. It all appears designed to sell in short-term gains without the predictability of long-running titles. Rampant speculation is still the order of the day. Look at Invincible Iron Man: one permutation of the title's #1 hit the stands with a release date of October 2015 with a whopping 279,000 copies. November 2015 the sales for that title dropped to just under 60,000. In December the recorded sales figure is just under 50,000. That's Iron Man, a core character!

Is it the art? My customers don't like all of Marvel's art, so that distaste affects their purchases. Is it the story? I'm afraid it might be. Is it the fence-sitters waiting for jumping-off points? Nowadays that seems to be the norm. Too many titles seemed irrelevant to the requests of Marvel readers and to the Marvel Universe in general. Forgettable titles added prominence to characters no reader was asking for. There's complicating a universe with a huge array of second- and third-tier characters, and then there's over-complication. How about Civil War II? My employees found it boring and redundant. The constant shipping delays were maddening to our customers. The other tie-ins moved on without the Civil War II mini-series. We already knew how it was going to end before the last issue of Civil War II shipped. The drop-off in sales for everything Civil War II was a business-killer.

We center our sales on back issues, buffering sales against the unpredicted declination of new comic book sales. Back-issue sales are strong for us through the store, web site and on the road. We had our most profitable Comic-Con International in 2015, bolstering our opinion that if geared-up right a dealer should continue to do well at that show. Our store plunged into hundreds of collections over the past year, many of them exactly what we wanted, on different levels. On some levels the sales of those collections have supplanted the sales of new comics. The back-issue sales are more lucrative than our new comics. This is my theory: the back-issue people want to read the stories, invest in a key or flip the books quickly for profit. If you believe they like the stories then you can understand why our customers don't like today's comic book stories. Some stories are convoluted, some stories work their way through a title of negligible popularity. If the book is failing then the company drops the title. My readers know this and are hesitant to get started on something that may end abruptly or rarely even be published (Karnak, Hawkeye). The stories appear tedious, over-wrought and they go on so long they seem to be going nowhere.

It's easy enough for me to make comparisons. I still read new comics; 60-80 titles monthly, and I've read most of the DCs and Marvels of the Silver and Bronze Ages. I guess that makes me a legacy reader. Perhaps that also means Marvel and DC (mostly Marvel) do not regard me as a viable target for their current comics. I say perhaps because I feel Marvel doesn't get how many of us were happy with tales as they were scripted even as recently as 15 years ago. DC made a point of addressing legacy readers with Rebirth, asking us to enjoy the attempt to reach out to older readers that may have quit on them during New 52. I am more comfortable with their titles, but I didn't necessarily want DC to try and tie them into their TV universe. That's not seducing enough readers to significantly increase my sales.

Overall, our interpretation of the back issue market seems a lot like last year; another year where we replaced variant cover sales with greater emphasis on old comics. We're not making claims that we're "killing it" with variant sales while playing down the vast quantity of unsold comics we could never profit from. Clichés noted, here's why the trend at our store is consistently reversed from other stores (select one or more; use pen):

- We targeted specific comic book collections to appeal to our customers.
- Most stores thrive on a diversity of gaming, toys, modern comics and other ephemera; not old back-issues.
- Lack of unnecessary clutter burdening the customers.
- A healthy respect for the windfall in business comic book conventions can generate.
- We have a chip reader.
- The consistent acquisition of highly-prized individual back issues, selling at competitive prices.
- We work through our lunch hour.
- We label our grade-worthy comics with grades; the price gun sticker on a $2,000 book without a grade is ludicrous.
- Everything is organized. Not only can we find things in our store, so can the customers.
- Nobody reads these things anyway.

Our web site is the repository for our significant back issue sales. The sold listings on our site post the prices we got, not the prices we listed the comic at. Over time we've posted enough sales to prove that we get prices for comics that are higher than GPA's recorded sales prices.

We use Facebook, Twitter and Instagram to promote new collections, which attracts the locals.

CGC vs. CBCS: either is fine with us, we are not conflicted. Our customers seem less conflicted than even a year ago.

This book will become available during the week of Comic-Con International 2017. At the rate we are going we will have more, new collections to showcase, so come visit us at booth #1115!

Fighting American is a popular Atom Age title despite running only 7 issues. (#2 shown)

TERRY O'NEILL

TERRY'S COMICS/CALCOMICCON/NATIONWIDE COMICS

This report focuses on conventions and mail order aspects of comic collecting. Sales from 2015 to 2016 have been very strong.

Golden Age (1938-1945): The Golden Age market is doing quite well. Fawcett and Dell titles have been moving again. They have great stories and are very affordable. People looking to expand their collecting habits are starting to look at these rare gems of comic history as a great and somewhat affordable (compared to availability) area to collect. Many people are starting to look at the more obscure titles from the Golden Age as it gives them a challenge to complete runs or sections of runs. Certain titles published by Ace, Fox, MLJ, Centaur and Chesler are low in Guide, but try finding them. One of our long time customers has just completed an entire run of Looney Tunes, not an easy task. Some sales of note: Silver Streak #6 GD- $1,350, Superman #1 CGC VG+ Resto $35,000, #2 CGC GD $3,360, Fight Comics #31 CGC VG $1,600, Circus the Comic Riot #1 VG- $1,020, Looney Tunes #1 CGC GD $2,778, #2 PGX VF $1830, Mickey Mouse Magazine V1#1 FN- $5270, and Crime Does Not Pay #33 CGC VG/FN $850.

Atom Age (1946-1955): With lower print runs and poor quality paper, as well as so many publishers, this era is still a largely un-explored collecting frontier. The following genres were selling well: War, Humor and Teen Humor titles like Battle, Blondie, Looney Tunes and Kilroys. A title to mention would be Space Western as it is a unique cross-over between Western and Sci-Fi. Fighting American, while only running seven issues, was being requested often. Other short runs are being sought after, like Black Knight, Yellow Claw, Dizzy Dames, Hillbillies and G.I. Jane. This era is a great place to start a new run for your collection just for the challenge. Some sales of note: Casper the Friendly Ghost #1 VG- $1,150, Journey into Mystery #1 CGC GD $2,200, Willie Comics #16 CGC FN $250, Annie Oakley #1 CGC VG/FN $475, Marines in Action #3 CGC VF $200, Tell it to the Marines #2 CGC VF- (double cover) $350, and Thing #12 VG/FN $500.

Silver Age (1956-1970): Silver Age prices are currently stable and interest is as strong as ever. High grade DC keys may have the most potential. That said, Fantastic Four #48 and #52 are hard to keep in stock. Two of the most affordable early Silver Age Marvels are Daredevil #1 and Sgt. Fury #1, if you don't currently own a copy, better get one soon as the prices are headed up. As always, Silver

Surfer #1 and 4 sell very well, usually above Guide prices. Also Strange Tales #110 and #135 are quite often sought after. Some sales of note: Amazing Fantasy #15 NC $2500,

Blue Beetle Charlton 1964 V1#1 CGC NM+ $2400, Daredevil #2 CGC NM $3,600, Showcase #4 GD/VG $12,000, #6 FN/VF $2,600, #22 VG $2,200, Strange Tales #133 NM/MT $2,800, Tales of Suspense #57 NM $5000, Green Lantern #1 VF- $2,850, Sgt. Fury #13 CGC NM $1750, Teen Titans #1 CGC NM $2400, Thunder Agents #1 CGC NM $650, and Dynamo #1 CGC NM/MT $495

Bronze Age (1971-1985): Tomb of Dracula #10 and Werewolf By Night #32 are two of the most asked for issues. A close third is House of Secrets #92, still affordable and with the beautiful Bernie Wrightson cover. Hero for Hire and Power Man saw a lot of interest due to the Luke Cage Netflix series. Titles like Marvel Feature, Defenders #1, and Iron Fist #14 have been selling well with the speculation about a show being made. The Legion of Monsters is also seeing interest in with Ghost Rider (Marvel Spotlight #5 and Ghost Rider #1) and Moon Knight out there. It's only a matter of time before the rest of the Marvel Monsters make their appearances in TV or movies. Some sales of note: Incredible Hulk #181 CGC VF $2,000, Giant-Size X-Men #1 CGC NM- $1800, House of Secrets #92 CGC VF $820, and All Star #58 CGC NM+ $600,

Magazines: Sales of magazines have been limited this past year. We bring only one or two boxes of high grade or key magazines to shows. All other sales are from the catalog. There are lots of hidden gems in those black and white magazines. Some of the best artists of the era made their debuts in Warren and Marvel magazines. Some sales of note: Savage Sword of Conan #20 CGC NM/MT $150, #28 CGC NM/MT $150, Vampirella #112 CGC VF/NM $200, Savage Tales #1 VF $135, and Creepy #63 NM- $95.

Modern Age & Independents( 1986-Now): Preacher was in demand for some time. All Marvel Super Heroes Secret Wars were excellent sellers at many conventions. The early 1980s re-peaked my interest in comic books because of the great stories and artwork in PC, Eclipse, First and other independent companies, producing high quality, more adult storylines. Keep a watch on Fantasy Quarterly: Elfquest, while from the '70s, it is truly independent and has a lot of potential. Some sales of note: G.I. Joe #26 PGX NM/MT $150, NYX #3 CGC NM/MT $900, Omega Men #3 PGX NM/MT $160, Savage She-Hulk #1 PGX NM/MT $190, Amazing Spider-Man #361 CBCS NM+ $100, Batman: Harley Quinn nn PGX NM/MT $400, and Watchmen #1 PGX NM/MT $200.

Graded books: We offer all our third party graded comics in our eBay store. Sales are constant throughout the year. Most of the comics we grade are keys or very high grade expensive books. We try to only submit comics that are worth at least $75 as the time and effort to get them graded adds considerable costs to the product. We buy many comics already graded for what we normally pay for the un-graded versions, so don't add the cost to yourself unless you are sure they have more value than the cost of grading them. Selling graded comics has produced a steady income stream throughout the year, especially when there are few or no comic conventions going on.

Internet Sales: We sell comics from our website by phone or e-mail request as we do too many conventions to have an accurate listing. We still get a lot of requests for scans but we cannot accommodate all the requests and get anything else done. We will send scans for items over $100 and always offer a 30-day unconditional return on all sales. After we have comics for a few years with no interest, we often will send them to the auction houses for sale as they have clients we don't. That said, remember: Whenever you consign comics to auctions with no reserve, you are rolling the dice that two or more people are looking at that auction during the particular window of time your item is offered. Most of our entire inventory is at www.terryscomics.com.

In summary, there was no shortage of demand for the high grade comic books that give the owner a better return than most other forms of investment. I did not start selling comics as a dealer but just as a guy that wanted money to buy more comics to read, so don't forget the original purpose of the hobby.

MICHAEL PAVLIC PURPLE GORILLA COMICS

Holy Moley am I glad 2016 is now in the rear view mirror. My little corner of the world has been dealing with the worst recession in 30 years, tens of thousands of people lost their (generally well paying) jobs. Countless businesses have closed. The loyalty of my customers is much more of a factor in my continued existence than any cost cutting measures I've taken. There are now signs that the economy is slowly starting to revive and the worst is over. I hope so, as I don't think there are too many jobs available for 50 year old comic book sellers out there!!

Now, I know you aren't reading my report to find out the state of Alberta's economy. Any business that lasts long enough will experience hardships, moments of terror and existential crisis. There ain't no guarantees in business or in life.

So let's focus on the positive shall we? Even in a recession, key books from any era still sell and sell quickly at Guide price at least. Anything Deadpool sells, as demand still outstrips supply by a wide margin. I've mentioned this in a few reports now, but Deadpool: Circle Chase #1 is still a $100 book here, and X-Force #2 $45. Harley Quinn is just as popular and supplies are even more scarce. Carnage is now the most popular comic character not associated with movies or TV and I still get $150 for an Amazing Spider-Man #361 (1st print). Anything with this guy in it starts at $10. Anything.

For the Silver and Bronze Age comics, any Amazing Spider-Man moves briskly, at any grade, for at least 1.25x Guide. Fantastic Four will sell almost as quickly, but much closer to Guide. Of course Doctor Strange moves fast, but since it was a weaker selling title back in the day, it's much harder to replace than the old Web-Head. X-Men (up to about #143) also have traction. I now consider anything by Neal Adams as “key”, can’t keep anything in. Even Jerry Lewis. Getting that way with Kirby books too, both Marvel and DC, especially the Fourth World issues. Captain America, Thor, early Defenders, all Marvel horror from the 1970s, Flash, Green Lantern, Superman, Wonder Woman all sell reasonably well. Silver Age Batman, once an easy sell, now languish on my walls, unloved, except for keys and anything by Adams. I am puzzled as to why this is happening.

For the Copper Age, in general, Marvel outsells every other publisher combined by a huge margin. Amazing Spider-Man, Avengers, Captain America, Punisher, Transformers and Iron Man lead the way, with Hulk and Wolverine not too far behind. McFarlane Hulk never lasts. Not much is selling DC wise. Wonder Woman does reasonably well as does Flash, but Batman especially has fallen off the map (again, except keys). Just like Uncanny X-Men, the biggest selling titles of the 1980s and 1990s have lost a lot of popularity, at Guide price. I had a Black Friday sale where I priced many of my back issues at $2 each and the biggest sellers were, you guessed it, X-Men and Batman. So there is a demand, but the price point might be too high, especially for the over-printed 1990s books. For the independent titles, the consistent sellers were Aliens, Predator, Dark Horse Star Wars and Spawn. Anything horror related, be they EC reprints, Twisted Tales and the other PC titles by Bruce Jones, movie adaptations or tie-ins, Clive Barker, The Crow, Mr. Monster Super-Duper Specials (and any other pre-code reprint comics) all sell quickly at at least $10 and are hard to replace. Romance comics do reasonably well too, especially if the cover is unintentionally hilarious (and trust me, that’s a big number!). Toy tie-ins like Masters of the Universe and video game comics (especially the old Valiants) are always in demand.

I move plenty of comics that are more “off the beaten path”, things like Savage Sword of Conan, Undergrounds (especially Crumb, Corben and Freak Bros.), Westerns (Dell photo covers) and kids comics. These folks are readers, as opposed to collectors. They don’t really care what their collection is worth, they just enjoy the hobby. Lower grade copies can sell just as fast, if not faster than high grades.

It’s important to me and my business that I get younger readers into comics. I go out of my way to stock old, kid friendly comics and I keep the price low ($2-$4) to let the parents know that these comics are meant to be read and enjoyed and to not worry about the “value”. I’ve sold long boxes work in a few short months. We, as an industry, must work hard to attract a new generation of comic readers/collectors, otherwise, as the years move on and those of us who’ve been comic collecting or selling for decades shed our mortal coils and join the Uni-Mind, who’s going to replace us? Who’s gonna buy your comics? I don’t know what the percentage of us that will be hitting or passing retirement age in 25 years, but I’ll bet it isn’t insignificant.

Everyone who reads these columns and uses this price guide should know by now that the supply of comics, especially key ones, are now stable. There will not be a sudden drop in the supply of Incredible Hulk #181 because thousands were destroyed in a mysterious fire. There will probably not be a “warehouse find” of cases of it either. No, the amount of Incredible Hulk #181 that exist today, will exist 25 years from now. What can change is the demand for Incredible Hulk #181. Will there be the same demand for it 25 years from now? We all hope so, after all, it’s gone up steadily now for 40 years. The best way to ensure this is to have a new generation of collectors who desperately want to pay any price for that Hulk book. The older generations of collectors who wanted a copy will have gotten their one by then. I wanna be selling comics to people 25 years from now, therefore, I sell kids comics today.

Despite the economy hardships we Albertans have faced and my lingering concerns about the future of comic collecting, I am still thrilled after all these years that I’m able to make a living doing what I LOVE. I’d like to thank a few people who always have my back: Dave at Amazing Fantasy in Red Deer, Ben, Martin and Trevor at Phoenix Comics, Sgt. Erock, Steph and Dom. I’d like to especially thank my loyal customers, for with out them, I’m just a guy who has 45,000 comics jammed in his one bedroom apartment. And finally, I’d like to blame Doyle, ‘cos it’s still all his fault!

BILL PONSETI FANTASTIC WORLDS COMICS

Greetings Comic Lovers.

2016 has been a very interesting year for me and the hobby as a whole. I pretty much liquidated my entire Golden and Silver Age collection from 2014-16 and found ready buyers for just about everything. The back issue market could not be stronger. Just sit through a Sunday Heritage internet auction and watch everything sell at or above Guide, or even at or above GPA. Even the raw lower grade lots sell for more than a dealer would pay, as his/her margin would be non-existent.

After a 20 year absence, and probably after taking leave of my senses, I decided to return to owning a comic book shop. I sold my shops in New Orleans back in 1996, and now have another brick and mortar store in Scottsdale, AZ. Missing 20 years of new comic continuity has me at a disadvantage, but I’m doing my best to catch up as best as I can.

What I have been happy to observe is that there are MANY more youngsters coming in and buying comics than there were in 1996. And they aren’t just buying new comics, but back issues as well. Both boys and girls from 10-16 make up a large percentage of our customer base.

We sell Silver and Bronze Age keys as quickly as we can get them in, but our replacement cost on this has gotten higher and higher, and there is beginning to be price resistance in the hobby to the new normal.

The DC Rebirth was a big success for us and still sells well as new collectors want to have all the issues they missed when they first came out. Civil War II started off with a bang then kind of fizzled out.

My initial hope was that there would be some collections surfacing and that they would come into the store. My hopes were exceeded. In the first few months we had several very nice Silver Age collections come in and one collection of original owner Golden Age with many rare books in it. That set lasted about 24 hours.

I think the motion picture industry continues to drive new collectors into the hobby as well as bringing old collectors that had left the hobby back in.

The future looks very bright for our hobby for both the new and back issue segments. We attended several west coast conventions this year and noted that business was very brisk with the dealers in attendance. I expect more of the same in 2017.

The original art market continues to spiral upward, and trying to figure it out is an enigma wrapped in a riddle. There are too few folks that control the pricing, and that makes it hard for new entrants into this wonderful area of collecting. But if you set your budget realistically, there is lots of amazing material out there to be had.

My next market report will have more detailed information as we will have been open over a year by then.

So, until next time. Warmest regards from sunny Scottsdale.

JEFF RADER OFFBEAT ARCHIVES

We do not have anything current this year to report in the way of sales, but hopefully you find something else that piques your interest. Other than poking around looking for books to fill friends' want lists, along with filling gaps in my own collection, I have gone back to my first loves in comic-dom; reading, and research (thanks for that, Jerry Bails!) It has been fruitful and added to the volumes of new data that I already have piled around me in notebooks. Hopefully next year I will have completed a volume full of much of the esoteric, unknown, unlisted, obscure tidbits like I usually put in my reports. The gents at Overstreet will also be getting files as I work my way through it all to add to the Guide. Research has always been my primary focus, and even when listing books to sell, I often run across unnoticed things worthy of mention; unlisted artists, character appearances, cameos, esoteric covers and stories, good girl art, drugs, and other things that would either have Fredric Wertham spinning in his grave and/or send a book right on to somebody's must-have list. Often when doing a page count I am pretty much incapable of not stopping to read anything that I have never read before. I have so much accumulated that it will probably take me years to get everything down but that's not a complaint. The fun is in reading comics to find the unmined items. If you are tired of chasing books that are temporarily affected by movie and TV bubbles, have watched your main want list books climb out of your price range, or just want books in your collection that will make it stand out from the rest, then keep reading.

Something that is still overlooked by much of the comic book collecting community is rarity. I am not talking about high grade books in census but rather books that can only be owned by a few in any grade. Many other collecting arenas are very rarity-driven. In coins the 1913 Liberty nickel is just one of the many coveted rarities that have collectors foaming at the mouth. Stamps? Mention the Inverted Jenny to any philatelist and watch their eyes pop. Just the name Honus Wagner will get any baseball card collector in a frenzy, yet in comics it is primarily high-dollar books that get all of the attention, rarity or scarcity aside. Even a younger set of collectors, those who thrive on Pokémon cards, have a holy grail. Ask any of them about the 1993 Black Lotus and you might just set off a stampede. "Rare in Grade" seems to be about the closest that many take notice of. Yeah, I do know that Incredible Hulk #1, and Fantastic Four #12, are real beasts to get in high grade, but if you are willing to settle for a nice looking lesser grade copy it can be done pretty much instantaneously. Yet even if/when low grade examples of the non-comic mentions I made above came to market they would set off epic bidding wars and make headlines world-wide. Not so in comics. Given enough funds one could go out and buy a complete set of Marvels, even in high grade, in a short time. I regularly see currently-hot books that I could nab as many copies a day as I wished, while there are others that I can (and have) spend years looking for no matter how much I would be willing to spend on them. No matter how much money a collector has, if they are looking for the coveted Amazing Man #26, then they can expect to wait forever for when, IF, a copy shows up, then be prepared to dig deep in the pockets because this book will fly regardless of condition. You Centaur fiends know what I'm talking about.

Another lesser-known rarity is Adventure Comics #26 (what is it with these #26s?) This book was one of the final books on the list of DC completionist, Ian Levine, when he was wrapping up his ages-long quest for everything DC. It proved extremely elusive even with much of the community scouring the world for a copy. And he is not the only one that was/is seeking a copy of this one. It is also one of the final pre-hero books and has an ad for Action Comics #1 with an early appearance of what was to come when Superman changed everything. Those are only two examples that will be mentioned with reverence once more comic collectors start focusing on rarity. Copies of these books, and so many others, are firmly entrenched in collections of those that know that they will never find another if they let go of theirs. The hunt for hens' teeth also makes for a fun time, as long as you are in no hurry.

While those two are already relatively known, and already go for multiples of Guide, in any grade, I have lists of countless examples of books just as near-impossible, and some moreso, to find that are within the budget of any collector. Years ago I saw the ad on the back cover of Key Comics #5 that showed a copy of Masterpieces Illustrated #1.

It stuck in my head forever. I had been told, and do believe now, that no public copies ever made it to the newsstand. But that insatiable need to keep looking never let up. I regularly kept up the hunt, just in case, and nearly made a mess in my chair when I saw a copy for sale online. It was not a copy of the actual book that some kid nabbed off of the stands but the ashcan that Lloyd Jacquet put together, with all new artwork, in an attempt to nab a share of the Classics Comics market after he left Gilberton. It never came to fruition but it made for a heck of a great book, with gorgeous artwork, some of which did see print in other titles. There's one that only one lucky collector can own, but there are so many others that can be had by a few if you dig deep enough.

Another that flew under the radar for decades was Super Duper Comics #3 (the only issue published and, though published in Canada, also distributed in the U.S.) It was pretty much an overlooked "Who cares?" book in the Guide, and ignored by collectors for decades. This book was the 1st appearance of Mr. Monster, and his only Golden Age appearance. It also has a Nelvana story that Canadians will trample anyone else at auction to get ahold of! When Michael T. Gilbert breathed new life into Mr. Monster decades later this book still laid dormant. I had been on the hunt for a copy for decades with no luck. Fortunately a fellow collector passed his copy on to me. After enjoying that for a few years I had to let it go. It was not a high grade copy, but presented nicely. That book that, in that grade, was listed for around $35 and went into a market that had then woken up as to its significance, and its rarity. It went for over $800, and soon after that sale a friend let his similar copy go for over $900! I doubt I will ever be lucky enough to have another but the hunt is what can make things so fun. You do not need to be Scrooge McDuck to enjoy our hobby. On that note; want a nice key book for a bargain? Go nab a Four Color #178 – the 1st appearance of Uncle Scrooge (and compare that to Uncle Scrooge #1 (FC #386 that came out 5 years later).

Since most key appearances, semi-keys, wannabe-keys, z-list characters, and the like have been "outed" and speculated on, with prices rising, and falling, faster than the tide it may seem as if there may not be much left to dig up. One fun affordable area that still has not been hit too hard with the speculation bit yet are prototypes. Well, other than Superman #123 that used to be a fairly well kept secret. Now that Supergirl has soared to new heights that book has found a new fan base and she's flown to heights unattainable for many. Add to that the fact that this book comes from an era in which DCs are not easy to find, especially in grade. While many books listed as being prototypes are really a stretch of the imagination some are actually pretty good scores. If you are a Hulk maniac check out Journey Into Mystery #62, 66, and 70, with Xemnu. They have already gotten some attention but are still relatively affordable and pretty cool in seeing how they might have led to the creation of The Hulk. Also check out the reverse Spider-Man prototype in #73 in which a spider gets irradiated and gets the powers of a human, while retaining the power to shoot webs. Fun stuff that will not break your bank. There are countless prototypes out there all the way from the dawn of the Golden Age and are a great niche to focus on. You can probably cross the Dr. Occult appearances off that list unless you are already well into early DCs as they are near impossible, and do not trade hands too often, but Dr. Occult is an interesting way to look at how Siegel and Shuster ran some parallels that led up to the introduction of Superman in Action Comics #1. They are already pricey, and many Very Rare, but having even a low grade example of a pre-Superman belongs on every collector's must-have bucket list.

For those that enjoy the hunt looking for rarities there is still so much to be looked for out there. Go out and try to find a copy of Kokonut Komiks from 1949. It is not yet in the Guide, but listed in The Photo-Journal Guide to Comic Books with a Scarcity Index rating of 9, meaning that, in his long travels, Ernie Gerber then figured that up to 10 copies existed. I think that the internet has shaken a few more out of the trees but it is still RARE. I have been on the prowl for over 30 years and only managed to lay my hands on two copies. The cool thing about this comic is that, despite its rarity, it can also be seen as a Foreign/non-U.S. comic as it was published in Hawaii before they became a state. Another one I have long been tracking is Fox's Zoot Comics #2. This one is listed as being an 8 on the Scarcity Index and while they do occasionally pop up it is far from often. I have nabbed some over the years and my quirk about reading paid off as I found a then-unnoticed superhero story featuring the 1st (only?) appearance of The Jaguar. They are out there but I doubt that we will be flooded with too many new copies anytime in the future. While on the subject of rarity, "Scarce/Rare/Very Rare in Overstreet", and Gerber's Scarcity Index, it is due time that hundreds of books gets reassessed and that is part of what I have been spending much of my time on. There are some that are generally thought of as near impossible to find that I almost trip over regularly. Avon's The Funnies Annual, from 1959, is a perfect example. A friend and I used to laugh about his growing pile of them that was more than 25 copies deep. Conversely, there are books listed low on the Scarcity Index that I have yet to find in my searching. Hopefully soon I will have all in order and get a revised, updated list of my observations out there.

While there is much speculation going on, books rising out of nowhere to wildly-priced heights, then plummeting back to where they were, or close, to fade back into obscurity, I am banking on Rarity being the final frontier of comic collecting. Yep, we will all always drool over those sweet Marvel keys, Action Comics #1, Detective Comics #27, and all the rest that make the mainstream news, but there are already different groups of collectors that appreciate just how near-impossible, and even impossible, it is to add certain books to their collections. Variant collectors know exactly what I am talking about, so do the rabid seekers of Canadian Whites, and those that seek out foreign copies of their favorite comic. Since I am already rambling between subjects; how many know about the variants, and different printings, that exist of Superman #1, Batman #1, Marvel Comics #1, and others back in the day? Not that there are but a few collectors that could ever consider completing a collection of those but it is still fun to look into. I am sure that there are more there that will show up in time when collectors compare like issues and find discrepancies. Another relatively new group of collectors that has come to know how much the thrill of the hunt is are the Modern collectors that seek out later printings of certain books. I am not much of a Modern guy but even that is a bit intriguing to me.

Thanks to all of the comic related media being done, our once-geeky, “shh, don’t tell anybody!”, hobby has gone mainstream and brought in thousands of new collectors. I am amazed at some of the emails I have gotten asking about comics and, believe it or not, we actually have gotten more female readers and collectors than I ever could have imagined. Hopefully many of this new influx of new collectors stick around and take a look into the many areas of collecting that might just set the hook in them.

We happen to have one of the few hobbies left in which there are goldmines of overlooked and neglected areas that are ripe for research. The only thing about that is that you have to actually want to open a book up and read it to see what is hidden inside. In doing that I have found reams of unlisted, overlooked goodies such as unlisted Ditko, and Matt Baker (among others) stories, mind-blowing Good Girl Art in places that you would never expect to find it, character appearances that have eluded notice for decades, atomic bomb stories and panels, hidden (and not so hidden) innuendoes, and so much more that I’ll be expanding on as fast as I can. Discoveries in earlier books also tend to make a lasting impact as opposed to the newer up and down bit. Take a gander at Cindy #37 from Marvel in 1949. NO, I really mean it, go take a look at that cover!

That book sat unnoticed by all but a few for over 60 years. Once word got out that it was a 5-star GGA cover, done in gorgeous greytone to boot, it went wild. If you do manage to find a copy that somebody is willing to let go of you can be assured that you will be paying multiples of Guide. The same thing happened with the great sweater girl Betty GGA cover on Archie Comics #50 a few years back. Even after a few years it is still highly sought after and another that refuses to be found for Guide. Neither of those will ever be had for a bargain again. These are among the type of books still out there that, when discovered, and brought to light, you can pretty much name your price.

Take a look at Sabrina the Teen-age Witch appearances in Archie’s Madhouse. It was not so long ago that those books were unexplored territory, lumped in with the rest of the non-Sabrina books, and considered slag. Even now issue #32 is still listed with a “?” signifying that it is unknown if Sabrina appears in that issue. Well, yep, Sabrina does appear in that issue so expect that one to jump up to be on a par with the rest when it becomes common knowledge. Dig deep because there are who-knows-how-many Cindy #37s just waiting to be pulled out of obscurity. Much of where I find the unheralded stuff is in the eras that predate organized fandom and all of the early fandom guys and gals started indexing all they could find. If you do find something noteworthy, then drop all of your preconceived notions about high grades. You may just never find another.

I am not so much into the movie/TV bump stuff so I will leave that to those that have it down to an art. But, one example that was interesting was Tales to Astonish #13, with the 1st innocuous appearance of Groot. For ages this book has been just one of the many Marvel pre-hero books that were collected primarily by those that loved the Kirby and Ditko work that makes these books such great reading. Now? Due to the Guardians of the Galaxy movie this book went out of the range of many pre-hero collectors and into the realm of “Hot” books. The same thing happened to Marvel Preview #7 which used to be a cult classic among old Marvel magazine lovers for the great Larkin cover, and Satana story. Now? Satana has been relegated to a minor cover mention and the book is sought after by everybody that wants that 1st appearance of Rocky/Rocket Raccoon. I’ll just wait for the heat to die down before nabbing a copy myself.

I am also a bit confused by the crazy jump on Marvel Super-Heroes #18, 1st appearance of Guardians of the Galaxy. I have always been a fan of that book, and it has its merits, but am a bit curious as to if I am the only one that has noticed that the line-up in the original Guardians seems to be just a bit more than a little off that what showed up by the time it became a newly-hot property. (I also wonder how long movie-bump books like Marvel Preview #4 - 1st Star-Lord, and #7 can be valued more than #2 which contains the first telling of the origin of one of the most well-established, popular, characters ever, The Punisher.) Go figger. I understand that ours is a media-driven hobby in which prices will always be affected by movies, television, etc. but only those with the most finely-tuned foresight that get in to buy first, and sell at the right moment, are the ones making the big bucks. Any seekers after that usually end up paying an (often temporary) inflated price. With the advent of the internet our once-mail-order hobby has gotten to where prices can change drastically seemingly daily and what is considered Hot can go frigid at any minute. I love it just as much as any other old-school dealer seeing some old book that we once had wasting space in our old quarter boxes all of a sudden become “hot”, but that can not last forever. For every one of the newly-outed books that may retain their value there will be countless more that sink as soon as the fad passes, or a movie flops, or fades into obscurity. If you are buying comics in hope of financing that mansion in the sky then this is the wrong hobby in which to do it. There are far safer methods of investing money if your first love is not in the comics themselves.

While the fads come and go there will always be our old standbys to keep us going. I also firmly believe that in this hobby we will soon start to recognize that rarities will become more and more sought after. There is something special about holding a book that only a handful can own. Someday I think that true comic rarities will be among some of those grabbing the attention of the public, just as a 1933 Double Eagle does.

Some overlooked, underappreciated, undervalued books that I have put on my watch list, some due to collectors sending me their updated want lists, others just from watching the marketplace, are:

Moon Knight seems to be a stable character with a decent following. I think that he has that staying power that the fads, and C-list characters, do not. I have been getting quite a few requests for his early solo stories in the Hulk magazine. Hulk #13 even has the first work by Bill Sienkiewicz on Moon Knight. We all know what stunning work he did on the Moon Knight series and his art was much of why that series became such a success. Remember what happened when Frank Miller took on Daredevil with #158? Earlier this year they could be had for a song but I have watched the prices steadily rise a bit as more catch on. While you're at it, nab a copy of Rampaging Hulk magazine #9. With a classic Avengers painted cover like that, plus a great Thor vs. Hulk battle, you can not go wrong. Just do it before that one gets too much attention.

There is gold to be found in those Curtis/Marvel magazines. Some collectors seem to ignore them due to the fact that they are not actual comic books but some great stuff is buried in them. Savage Tales is a great one, and #1 also has the oft-overlooked 1st appearance of The Man-Thing. Deadly Hands of Kung Fu is bulging at the seams with appearances from everybody from Bruce Lee and Iron Fist, to Captain America, and lots more. Marvel Preview/Bizarre Adventures is a killer run even if only for the great reading they tucked in there. Dracula Lives! is a must for any collector of Marvel monsters and Tomb of Dracula. If you're a Mad or Cracked magazine nut, then don't neglect Crazy just because it was not one of the top two. This mag is packed with great hilarious covers, artwork by just about anybody you could imagine, plus parodies of pretty much every pop culture phenomenon from the '70s through the '80s. Go nab some and you'll be hooked. The Planet of the Apes magazine run contains stories that never appeared in the comic book run so unless you grab those...your collection is not complete, Chim Chim. Marvel Comics Super Special already has some high-profile, high-demand, issues but there are still some affordable goodies left in there as well. If some of the stories that appeared in these magazines had been in regular comic books they would now cost you multiples of what you can get them for in the mags sitting as neglected bargains.

DC and Marvel treasury editions are still bargains. Due to their cumbersome size they have never really caught on with the mainstream. Their size also makes them hell to find in high grade as well. As prices of ultra-key books soar into the 7-figure range, the Famous First Editions are the absolute best way to read these classic books without having to spend a fortune. The first five issues even had a glossy inner cover that makes them even cooler to have. DC's Limited Collectors' Edition, including the Famous First Editions, ran for 59 issues and, while full of some of the best reprint stories imaginable, they also slipped in some previously unpublished material in issues as well. Marvel did the same with Marvel Treasury Edition, and a few other treasury titles. All of Marvel's then-most-popular characters ended up in there somewhere and some of the most significant Marvel tales, and origins, are in there as well. Don't scoff at them because they are not exactly the current trend, you might just miss out on some great buys. But best of luck trying to find the magazines, and to a much harder extent, the treasuries, in Near Mint. These books were just not cared for in the way that comic books were early on. While I am rambling about over-sized comics, go and nab a copy of Wham-O Giant Comics while you are at it. This crazy gigantic comic from 1967 measures out at 21" tall by 14" wide! As if that was not reason enough to snag one it also has artwork by Wallace Wood, Lou Fine, and countless others.

Titles such as Marvel Collectors' Item Classics/Marvel's Greatest Comics, Marvel Comics Presents, Marvel Tales, and other reprint titles are perfect ways for the beginner, or nostalgic old-timer, to read the best of the best Marvel stories without having to spend much more than they would going out to a nice dinner. Me? I'll take the comics over food any day! Many of these reprints were also published very near the time of the actual stories and as close as you can get in time to reading some of the otherwise unaffordable issues.

Whitman variant collectors have been fastidious in seeking out all of the possible Whitman/Gold Key and Whitman/DC poly-bag variants out there but I have recently had a couple inquiries about the rest of the Whitman/Gold Key books that have been considered reprints and/or junk for years. I have no idea just how many Gold Key comics exist with the Whitman logo, going back for ages, but they are numerous. Not too many are really paying much attention yet but the Whitman copies' print runs were a fraction of the Gold Key issues so maybe interest will start kicking in sometime soon. As for now, they can be picked up all over the place for pennies on the dollar in lots. Who knows? Maybe they will remain cheap books, which makes for great, cheap reading, or maybe they will catch the interest of some collectors that love research, and variants, and end up a nice commodity. (The Star Trek collectors, however, are already on top of this one. Nice job, Trekkers!)

Archie comics have finally blown up and attained wild prices, with no sign of slowing down. There are far more seekers of early issues than copies exist so the prices will likely be keeping on the rise for ages. There is a way of living vicariously on a budget though. Archie-type comics flooded the stands just as soon as other publishers saw what a hit MLJ had with the teens. Many Archie-swipe knockoffs, and teenage titles are similar, yet are very affordable, many being downright cheap, and others not so much. Check out Jonesy, A Date With Judy, Buzzy, Millie the Model, Cookie, Wilbur, Bunny, Tippy Teen, and a plethora of others over the ages. Many of these runs are relatively uncharted territory so if you do grab, and read, some you might just stumble across that next Archie Comics #50.

While not bargains, I have a friend shooting for a run of Sensation Comics #107-109, and Sensation Mystery #110-#116. That is definitely not an easy, nor cheap, chore but if you do not want to have to chase long runs that would take forever, and $$$$$$, then short runs can be a lot of fun. Congo Bill is another that is a mean challenge but you will have something to show off to the rest when you pull that one off. For you Marvel Maniacs give Venus a go. It only ran 19 issues but that short run somehow managed to bounce through just about every genre imaginable at the time. I'm not forgetting you EC Ghoulunatics. Give Moon Girl a look. She danced through titles, and title changes, just as well as she did genres. She came out the gate in Happy Houligans #1 and Moon Girl and the Prince #1 (both on the stands at the same time), continued in Moon Girl for 5 issues, became Moon Girl Fights Crime in #7 and #8, then jumped over to A Moon, A Girl...Romance in issue #9 for one last hoorah and then disappeared to leave the last three issues of the series to go on without her. Yikes! If you are really up for a challenge that few dare even ponder go for the the 4-issue run of DC's It's Gametime. Yeah, I know, 4 issues sounds like a breeze, huh? Well go give it a shot and when you pull that one off I will be saluting you! If you manage that with copies that managed to escape the pencil, pen, or crayon of some happy kid then I'll be on a flight to see them ASAP. These titles are among what makes our hobby so rewarding.

I have got to wrap this at some point or I will just end up typing beyond the deadline, and into next year. But, before I finally pull the plug on this thing, there are another couple things to mention. Keep an eye on the activity on Canadian Whites. These books have finally come of age and are no longer a niche genre. Whereas it once was primarily proud Canucks, and a couple of us a bit further south, that loved them they have been kicked right into the mainstream. The Canadian Crew has been hard at work researching, compiling, and making discoveries galore (you guys know who you are, Walt, Tony, Scott, Ivan, Mike, Kevin, and all the rest, and I tip my trapper hat to all of you!) They have some indispensable info already out there but the best is on its way. Great work, guys!

Foreign comics (non-U.S., and non-Canadian) have also really jumped into the spotlight thanks to the insanely researched work by Tim Bildhauser and the crew at Foreign Comic Collector. They have really opened up the comic collecting community literally worldwide. It is fun seeing how your favorite comic looked when it was published in Italy, Turkey, Brazil, almost everywhere. Some of the original work in these foreign books is fascinating as well. You do know that Mexico beat Marvel to the punch by years in publishing Conan comics, don't you? This area has some of the rarest comics that exist, many being unique, and countless other presumed to have been lost to time. But do not stop looking. There is still gold to be found!

If you have made it this far, thank you! At the risk of RE-repetition, buy what you love, and read what you buy. If your comics ever end up monetarily just being stacks of pretty colored paper at least you have something that you have enjoyed collecting that you can always read.

GREG REECE & ALEX REECE REECE'S RARE COMICS

GREG REECE - 2016 was another banner year for vintage comic books. We were able to pick up more Golden Age than any other year we've been in business and it sold briskly. We now have 4,000+ CGC/CBCS certified books on the website and another 4400+ raws. By the time you read this that number will have grown as having Austin join Alex has allowed us to catch up on getting inventory uploaded to the site (reececomics.com) A noticeable trend that developed in 2016 was absolute astronomical prices for key villain appearances, especially Joker covers. Books like Detective Comics #69, Detective Comics #71 just exploded. I believe as collectors are priced out of the super keys (Action Comics #1, Batman #1, Detective Comics #27, Superman #1, etc), they are moving onto the next best thing. There will be plenty of reports about what else was hot so I will move on to my investment picks for 2017, easily the most popular part of my report each year.

Fantastic Four* #1: It's hard to say exactly when this blue chip will start moving but it's when, not if. The deplorable stand-alone movies and Marvel seemingly undermining the current storyline are factors that could lead to this venerable franchise landing back in the Marvel Universe. If that happens you will be saying "I would have/should have/could have." Don't make that mistake. If you don't have a FF #1 in your collection, now is the time.

Action Comics* #242: This book has had a cultish following for what seems forever. I mean that purple cover, who can resist that? If DC could ever make a great Superman movie, and Brainiac was featured, it would result in a stratospheric spike. With just 75 copies grading 5.0 or better (at the time of this writing) and still affordable (relative to other Silver Age keys), there is a lot more upside than downside on this book.

Daredevil #1: Yes, this book was on my list last year, and yes it appreciated. But I think there is still more room to run. A very iconic image (I fondly remember buying my 1st #1 in 1975 for $20. It was in the FN+ range). Netflix finished their second season and just knocked it out of the park. The only amendment I'd make is to now focus on 7.0+ copies as the low grades appreciated at the same rate as better copies, but are much, much more plentiful. So for those reasons I don't think the lower grade copies will perform as well.

Brave And The Bold #28: This book took a breather in 2016 falling about 10% in most grades. With the Justice League movie right around the corner I'd anticipate renewed interest in Brave and The Bold #28.

Showcase #22: After falling for 2-3 years after the not-well-received Green Lantern movie, this book is ready for a comeback. Copies were plentiful a couple of years ago and we just don't see this anymore. Reminds me very much of Incredible Hulk #1 from a few years back. The supply was dry for about a year, and then prices went insane.

Tales of Suspense #39: This book has been flat for 3 years. I don't see it continuing. History has taught us to buy when books are out of favor. This is a blue chip classic.

Marvel Super-Heroes #18: The Guardians of the Galaxy sequel is on the way and with fans just devouring the 1st movie, it seems #2 is already a guaranteed blockbuster. Fans who only own 1 Guardians book will own this one. Being a square bound I'd concentrate on 9.0 (these can be had for $700 right now. Ridiculously cheap), and higher grades.

Showcase #37: One of my more speculative picks, this is all about whether a Metal Men movie ever gets made. With just 25 copies grading higher than 8.0, if it happens, the sky is the limit. If not, you still own a great looking book!

House of Secrets #92: This book is not cheap but I think it has room to grow. "I gotta' get one of those one day". We hear at virtually every con. I wouldn't wait for this Wrightson signature work to fall anytime soon.

Show Reports

Wizard, New Orleans: We love doing this show for all of the reasons stated in previous years. It is scheduled perfectly, allowing us, and many others, a break from the cold. It is also a time to showcase and buy new material as most dealers haven't set up at a major show since the October NY show.

MegaCon, Orlando: Have to give the show organizers (Fan Expo) a pass since it was their first year running the show. But that said, load in was a nightmare. We couldn't have been stationed further from our booth for load in. And the now seemingly permanent change to Memorial day weekend is a disappointment. Sales were noticeably slower than in previous years. This show is now on our watch list.

C2E2, Chicago: Chicago is blessed to have 2 quality shows a year to choose from an astounding display of vintage comic books. And to the fans credit, they support both shows whole heartedly. If you haven't been, add it your show list.

Wizard, Chicago: Again, a show you must attend if you are a vintage collector. We were stationed again right beside the CGC booth and the amount of material being on site graded is incredible. It is easily the show we spend the most $$ at. There is literally not enough time to go through all of the booths.

Baltimore Comic Con: One of the last large scale shows owned by an independent operator. I hope Marc doesn't sell it anytime soon as the vibe of the show has been consistent from day 1. Comics, comics and more comics. Again, you could dig for 3 straight days and not get through all of the material for sale.

New York Comic Con: The show with the most pressure from a dealer standpoint (costs are @$10,000 to set up booth rental/hotel/food etc for the team) delivered yet again. Outside of San Diego (where we continue to languish on the waiting list), there is simply no show with the number of deep pocketed, hungry for the best material, customers.

My wish for everyone is world peace, health to your families and much happiness. Thanks for your support of our business over the years and I hope to see many of you on the trade show circuit in 2017.

ALEX REECE - REECE'S RARE COMICS

Hello all! It is hard to believe that another year is closing, and thus another market report is upon us. 2016 was another great year for Reece's Rare Comics. Sales have continued to grow year over year, and to that end we hired Austin (Greg's other son, my younger brother) in June in order to keep up with the growth of our company. His first official show was Wizard World Philadelphia, and he did about five more after that. Stop by the booth sometime in 2016 and introduce yourself if you have not met him yet!

Speaking of shows, we did 14 in 2016. A big hand goes out to ReedPOP for putting on awesome Chicago and New York shows again, and Wizard World deserves recognition for their Chicago show that they have built; all three of these were monster successes for our team. There were several other shows that were great, but did not quite make the top tier status from a sales perspective. Marc Nathan's Baltimore show was very good again. Wizard World Philly, while having a dearth of dealers, was a great show for the dealers that did set up. Heroes was a great comic book show, with almost every booth occupied by actual comic book dealers (a refreshing sight, to be sure). We also did Wonder Con and Emerald City, and got to bring our full show stock to the West Coast for the first time in 4 years. Then there were the more regional shows. Motor City was decent from a sales perspective, while Wizard World Portland was flat out dismal. MegaCon suffered because of the move to Memorial Day Weekend, partially due to the fact that a number of buyers had holiday plans. Furthermore, the buyers from up North who used to fly down to escape the cold weather for a weekend were much more reluctant to come down when the temperatures were in the upper 90s for the entirety of the four day affair. Hopefully MegaCon takes a page from Wizard World's New Orleans show and moves it back to a non-holiday weekend in the colder months.

As far as what I noticed about sales at these shows, it will likely be in line with what many dealers are saying. High grade and key books sold extremely well. There was one particular show last year where we came in with four Daredevil #1s, CGC graded from 5.0-9.0, and we left the show having sold all of them. The same thing happened multiple times with Amazing Spider-Man #129s, Hero for Hire #1s, and many other key issues. All in all, the wall books sold exceedingly well, with the next biggest seller being high grade raws. Unfortunately, the trend of slow sales has continued on more run of the mill raw issues. Even when priced significantly under Guide, they are notably sluggish turns.

For investing, a popular question I am asked all the time is, "What do you see moving up in the near future?" I still think Gold and Silver keys are the best place to put your money from an investment standpoint. For instance, from 2015 to 2016, the value of an Amazing Fantasy #15 increased 40% in CGC 1.5, 37% in CGC 5.0, and in higher grades the jump is even more pronounced. A CGC 9.2 that sold for $192,000 in 2009 sold for $392,000 this past year. Obviously with a single sale in seven years, this data point is much harder to quantify, but the point is this: the value of the book is moving up all across the board, in any given grade. A Bronze Age book doing this similarly is Incredible Hulk #181, a book which continually defies gravity, even when many thought it had peaked a few years ago. There are innumerable examples of these types of books, but I will leave you with this: high grade, first appearances of major characters such as Spider-Man and Wolverine will hold their value and increase even as others fall away. The demand for first appearances of these characters extends beyond the comic book collecting community, and as such there is increased demand over other books.

With that said, however, let's delve into something a little more fun, namely, what is a book I see rising significantly in 2017? My pick is Amazing Spider-Man #300. This book sports perhaps the most iconic Copper Age cover (seriously, how many times has this cover been swiped?) and the first appearance of an already extremely popular villain who is ripe for an appearance in a MCU Movie or TV show. Though Venom was portrayed in a previous Spider-Man movie, the execution of his portrayal was so poor that although the book initially surged in price, it quickly fell back down to pre-movie levels. I think once Venom gets announced in the new Marvel Universe, it is only a matter of time before this book sees a dramatic increase, as the character will be entering a well done, established universe, which is very different than the standalone series he was in before. The book has been inching up over the past five years, but I believe it is poised to make another jump in the near future.

Overall I believe the market is healthy. It is still easier to sell books than it is to buy them, which is a very good sign. We will be attending fourteen trade shows this year, so make sure and stop by and say hello. You can find our full schedule on our website (www.reececomics.com), and as always, feel free to reach out to Greg, myself, or Austin if you have any questions about buying, selling, or anything in between. I hope your 2016 was great, and here's to a great 2017!

STEPHEN & SHARON RITTER WORLDWIDE COMICS

2016 was a solid year for comic sales, but not a banner year. For those not familiar with us and to better understand our view point in this report, WorldWide Comics is primarily an internet site selling vintage comics where we cater to both high and low end collectors, offering comics from the Golden Age to the Copper Age (but little with current comic lines). We currently have over 10,000 3rd Party (CGC and CBCS) graded comics for sale on our website and over 30,000 non-3rd party graded comics. We also set up at most major comic conventions around the country and participate (buying with some selling) in all major auction houses around the country. So you can see that this market report focuses on the vintage comics and is not limited to one part of the country.

Now, on to 2016, sales were good most of the year but not exceptional as the previous two years had been. The internet part of our business turned nine years old in 2016 and up until now, sales in each year have exceeded the previous, however, 2016 was equivalent to 2015 but not better. Although our monthly internet sales were consistent, this year we lacked the large surges we generally see several times a year. Convention selling was also down for us as we set up at fewer cons now (the comic con's focus on multi-media celebrities and such has resulted in a dramatic reduction in comic buyers attending convention shows today). Overall, though, we saw a strong comic market on both the buying and selling side.

Hollywood Impact: The greatest impact to the comic book market has been the huge influx of movies and TV shows produced from comics. Ten years ago we in this business were contemplating who we were going to be selling comics to in 20 years? We all felt we were facing a dying industry as our current customer base was aging and (hate to say it) dying off. There were very few young collectors surfacing as the Millennium Generation grew up with video instead of comics so they had little if any knowledge of comics or comic characters. Then came the success of the first few Spider-Man and X-Men movies. Marvel kept improving the special effects needed in a comic superhero movie, but more importantly they drastically improved the plots to capture those movie goers that never had an interest in superheroes. With the Iron Man, Avengers and even Superman movies, the foundation has now been poured for the future of this hobby. Younger collectors are entering the market so there is a better chance there will be comic collectors around for the next few decades.

Hot Market Trends: A fairly new trend we have been witnessing for the past few years is the sudden rise of a particular comic due to a new movie or TV show using that plot or character introduced. Even before a public release of this information, we would suddenly sell out of every copy on our site in one day. This began most notably in April of 2012 when we sold out of every Iron Man #55 we had on our site to collectors in Europe. It became clear why when a month later the Avengers movie came out in the states (it first debuted in Europe) and Thanos showed up at the very end of the movie to be the main villain behind everything. Since then, collectors have been trying to stay tuned to every bit of news on ideas brewing in Hollywood. They are now even speculating more by buying up first appearances on the chance that a character may appear in a future Hollywood release. Some notable examples we saw recently include:

Captain America #168 - 1st Baron Helmut Zemo

Daredevil #4 – 1st Purple Man (Zebediah Killgrave – Netflix TV Series).

Epic Illustrated #3 – 1st Vanth Dreadstar

Eternals #2 (1st Celestials – Part of the Marvel Infinity Gem movie line)

Forever People #1 – 1st Full Darkseid Appearance

Marvel Premiere #19 & #21 – 1st Colleen Wing & Misty Knight (Netflix)

Marvel Two-In-One Annual #7 – 1st Champion (Infinity Gem Owner)

New Gods #7 – Mister Miracle Origin

Power Man #24 & 25 – 1st Black Goliath

Tales of Suspense #94 – 1st MODOK

Thor #132 – 1st Ego

Wonder Woman #6 – 1st Cheetah

World's Finest Comics #252 – New Poison Ivy Origin

The key with these types of comics is to either buy them before the climb in interest and therefore value, or to wait until after the sudden boost occurs (which generally lasts between 6 to 12 months). The chart below shows the typical rise in value of such an issue. After the sudden flash, you can see the cooling period, but the good thing is that every time, the comic will settle at a value higher than before the release. Downtrends seem to especially happen at the eventual release of the movie or TV series that caused the upward spiral. Only exception to that appears to have been the Guardians of the Galaxy movie, those comics spurred on by that movie (Marvel Super-Heroes #18, Strange Tales #180, Avengers #259, Fantastic Four #65) seemed to sustain its peak values for almost a year after the movie came out. This may have been due to its surprising success at the box office and the coming of a second movie.

Comic Keys: We have a collector friend that made a comment to us about 10 years ago that is turning out to make him appear to be a genius. He said that everyone should be investing in true keys and only the keys. That would be the best investment you could make into comics. And if you look at the market in the past 10 years, you would think he predicted the future. Of course, you don't want to be buying keys when they get hot only to see them cool after your purchase, but in the long run, keys do seem to keep their value and tend to continuously increase over time. Keys that seem to keep exploding in 2016 (not in any particular order):

Adventure Comics #247 – (Waiting for a Legion of Super-Heroes movie or TV series from DC)

All Star Comics #8 – (Resulting from Wonder Woman's new movie debut)

Amazing Fantasy #15 – (1st Spidey is still the #1 Silver Age comic)

Batman #59 – (1st Deadshot, still hot after Suicide Squad movie)

Batman #121 – (1st Mr. Freeze, not a main villain, but still tough to find)

Brave and the Bold #25 – (Suicide Squad movie has debuted, but true scarcity of this issue keeps it hot)

Captain America Comics #1 – (Cap movies are strong)

House of Secrets #92 – (1st Swamp Thing has exploded in the past 2 years)

Incredible Hulk #181 – (1st Wolverine had crashed in higher grades, but now trending up again)

Sensation Comics #1 – (Resulting from Wonder Woman's new movie debut)

Showcase #4 – (Flash TV show started buzz, but true scarcity makes it the fastest climber)

Werewolf by Night #32 – (1st Moon Knight, confusing how popular this book continues to be)

Keys that seem to be cooling or have been cold in 2016:

Action Comics #252 – (Supergirl TV series made this explode in 2015, but we now see a slowdown)

Avengers #4 – (Has slowed since first Captain America movie came out)

Fantastic Four #1 – (Movie problems seem to have caused this, though now is a great time to invest in it)

Incredible Hulk #1 – (Not really cooling, but first time we see it no longer climbing in value)

Strange Tales #110 – (Release of the Doctor Strange movie downtrend)

Publisher & Era Market Report: For vintage comics, Silver Age is still the best selling material around, Marvel titles still sell better than DC, but all other publishers are a distant third. Bronze Age comics are something we stock heavily on our site as there appear to be more Bronze Age collectors today than Silver Age, likely due to the cheaper costs and more familiarity with the issues from that era due to the ages of most collectors. Charltons have surprisingly been very good sellers at conventions and on our site. Dell/Gold Key seems to remain slow but with many exceptions. The warehouse copies available in the market are still plentiful for most Dells and Gold Keys making the supply greater than the demand for many titles. This is especially the case with Harvey comics, the earlier 1950s issues sell very well due to lack of quantities, but the Harvey warehouse collection has been deluging the marketplace for over 8 years now, making them too plentiful. However, we are told that that warehouse should be emptied before 2017 ends.

We see the widest fluctuation in sales surprisingly in Golden Age comics. Because this era is collected by so few compared to the total number of comic collectors out there, sales on them are up and down. Timelys, which still sell well, have slowed considerably in past years. In the past, they used to sell as fast as we could get them, not so any more. DC titles sell steadily in all grades as their characters are still mostly all being published today. Higher Guide prices than other companies make it a bit more difficult to get full Guide sometimes though. The same brilliant friend who said to buy keys 10 years ago, said then to stay away from characters who are not published today. This advice has taken a hit lately as some of the hottest Golden Age titles out there come from Fox, Nedor, Ace and Centaur. Superhero titles like Exciting, Fantastic, Four Favorites, Mystery Men, Speed, Startling, Super-Mystery and Wonder Comics have been selling for multiples of Guide in all grades. Atomic Age (1950s) comics are often some of the rarest to find in grade and can sell for well above Guide in higher grades. Superhero and horror genre seem to be the best sellers from this era.

We are looking forward to 2017 and expect the comic market to continue on with the same strong results we have seen in the past five years. However, we need to cultivate a new generation of comic collectors to assure our hobby survives for decades more. Good hunting!!

MATT SCHIFFMAN COLLECTOR

Platinum Age: This era continues to be a curiosity for most in our hobby, and almost seems to be more vibrant for those collecting rare books. Copies are starting to be featured by those traditional rare books collectors in the UK, Germany and here in the US. There seems to be very low interest for them on eBay and sales results are often well below traditional Guide levels.

Big Little Books: Another segment of collectibles that seem to be falling to the wayside for traditional comic book collectors. Even though they feature familiar characters to our hobby, very few of them are prized or valued in the marketplace when featured in traditional comic book auctions. Disney characters have fallen in value and few increases can be found. Green Hornet in high grade has shown to have a vibrant market, but few others do well.

Golden Age: 2016 saw a large price leap in all grades and it was nice to see newfound support for books in the lower to mid-grades. I had been very hard on non-Timely books in that GD to FN+ range in comparison to Guide prices, but they have finally begun to rise as well. We've all seen the record setting prices in the headlines of the Wall Street Journal and New York Times for high grade Gold, but we've known this all along. It really are those mid-grade DC books that have increased in value and that are welcome news for our hobby. Second tier publishers are doing quite well, with Fox titles increasing the most.

Atomic Age: It certainly is no surprise that Good Girl books continue to lead the way and Phantom Lady issues set more records this year. A couple of great collections featuring Fox Good Girl came to the market and those high estimates were rewarded. Atlas War books have also jumped in value across the board as issues in VF and above are very hard to find.

Silver Age: I can only imagine that all the market reports in this issue will sound like a broken record – for those of us that remember what that sounds like. Higher prices, minor keys being elevated to major keys with corresponding prices, and movie appearance issues begin sought after. The underlying factor to really study is the prices on grades from GD to VF-. Even with blazing hot keys bringing record prices, those same books in these lower grades are still not being pulled upward to corresponding levels. Yes, they do move up in price, but the spreads are wider than ever. Just because a Fantastic Four #52 stuns with a huge price, that same issue in VG increases in value, but nowhere near the same spread. Collectors certainly snap up those issues, but keep an eye on that underlying support. Chasing lower grade keys is a risky business.

Bronze Age: With fewer newer keys being elevated this past year, the focus has been turning back to those traditional key books. A pullback definitively occurred around the start of 2016, but then prices pushed upward again in the Spring and moved to record levels in late summer. Hero For Hire #1 continues to have strong support as that cover is very difficult to find in 9.6 or higher. Amazing Adventures #11 shares that same cover condition issue, and also Marvel Feature #4. Ghost Rider #1 and Marvel Spotlight #5 moved higher on rumors that something better might be coming from the movie studios. Fantastic Four #90 - #140 showed new interest, as well as Amazing Spider-Man #103 - #140. Batman and Detective from 1969 to 1972 moved to new highs in 9.4 and better. DC War from 1969 to 1974 in 9.4 or better is probably one of the hottest markets right now, but not gaining much notoriety. Age, even when we see price spreads and how the market is looking at them right now. There are very few keys that can support standard price spreads in the lower grades – Hulk #181, Amazing Spider-Man #129, Star Wars #135¢ variant and X-Men #94.

Modern Age: Still, this is a very fun era to find new keys, hidden appearances, resurrected characters, and new found love for old classics. Condition is everything. EVERYTHING. Leading the way – early appearances from The Crow, Grendel, Valiant keys, and those key Movie and TV characters buried in Action, Adventure, Marvel Team-Up, Brave and the Bold, etc. Collectors still find huge rewards in those small, tiny, obscure, and almost non-distributed titles and last issues in a run. You have to just love those creators that took their books to some out of the loop printer that had no idea what format in which to print a modern comic and they often made it too tall or too wide. Carnage ensued from those books being put upright in boxes and then having weight stacked on top of them. Countless 9.8 books from the bottom edge to ½ inch from the top edge - and then you get a VG crushed top. Built in attrition.

DYLAN SCHWARTZ COLLECTOR

It is well known within the market that when television shows, movies and video games about a certain character and / or story-line are made, the market demand increases for products licensed for that character. The same is true with comics that are subject to speculation for a specific character in a movie, as to whether or not the movie will be produced. When a movie or television show comes to fruition and then it is revealed that there is no show or movie, the value for comics showcasing that character drops like a penny off the Empire State Building, declining faster and faster, except the value doesn't go all the way down to zero. This decline does not necessarily negatively impact the market. These books that were yesterday's hot books are not completely worthless however. They are just worth much less than they were during the hype. They were worth money before the hype, so they will be after. For example, Fantastic Four #45, which is the first appearance of the Inhumans, saw a significant drop after it was announced that the Inhumans movie was being pulled off the schedule for Marvel's upcoming movies. This book went from hot, to not. These past hot books are then bought by collectors after the price drop which helps fuel the market once again. Collectors and investors fuel the market. Collectors and their interest in this market help keep it strong. Through all the conventions where I have exhibited, I have been a witness to many dealers taking part in large deals with other dealers at somewhat of a discount for hot or key books. This is more evidence that the market is ever changing and fresh-to-market comics are readily being discovered. The demand is also increasing because of the new movies and television shows. This media creates more interest in the hobby, whether the hype is real or artificial.

It is apparent to me that Golden Age has made a large jump in value compared to last year. New books are being discovered. Interest is rising. The comic market is getting better and better. Similar to other hobbies, the oldest and scarcest comics seem to gain the most value over time. With Action Comics #1, the most valuable comic book in the world to this day, with a record sale of $3.2 million in 2014. My claim is without a doubt correct. That the oldest and scarcest books gain the most value compared to other books. Collectors and dealers buying comics from one another is also extremely important to the marketplace because they are a source of recorded sales. These records are crucial because they help eliminate some of the guesswork involved in pricing. When there is not enough sales data to comprehend the market, because there are few to no examples for comparison, a blank emerges and only time will tell. When there is only one of a comic available in a certain grade available, the owner sets the price and sets a new market and a new value for that book. Whether through witness of a sale to another customer, or an online auction or sale, the market will be strong for a long time and a comic book will only be worth what someone is willing to pay.

ALIKA SEKI MAUI COMICS & COLLECTIBLES

Aloha from Maui! We're half way through our second year and what a year it has been! We are still working through DC's Rebirth and the aftermath of Marvel's Civil War II. The strongest showings, though, for new comics continue to be Saga and The Walking Dead on the Image imprint.

This year has brought Maui Comics many collections, mostly small and in the Copper to Modern range. One collection stands out among them – the Uehara Store collection. This collection came to us a few boxes at a time by James and Jean who were hired by the Uehara family to clean out and sell a home for the former store owners. Uehara Store was a small convenience store that sold comics on their magazine rack in the '70s and '80s. Mr. Uehara would select his favorite titles and store them in a box with no bags. These boxes were kept outside on a lanai, and by some miracle over the decades did not get wet at all. Highlights of this collection and their sale prices include: Giant-Size X-Men #1 in Very Fine condition (sold for $700), X-Men #94 in Fine/Very Fine condition (sold for $350), House of Secrets #92 in Very Fine minus condition (sold for $400). Of course the collection was littered with other keys in similar condition from the era (some of which are still available in our store) such as: Iron Fist #14, DC Comics Presents #26, Marvel Feature #1 (sold for $150), Detective Comics #400, Star Wars #1 (sold for $100), Marvel Premiere #47, and more. The Uehara Store collection embodies everything we here at Maui Comics love about collecting. It was carefully selected over time, off-the-rack, by a local business owner who had a great appreciation of the medium.

Maui Comics and Collectibles also worked to bring the first ever comic convention to the island – Maui Comic Con (www.mauicomiccon.com)! Maui Comic Con was founded by Ken Gardner and myself, Alike Seki. The very first Maui Comic Con was free to the public with special guests Steve Leialoha, Trina Robbins, and the creative team of Darkwing Duck; Aaron Sparrow (writer), James Silvani (artist) and Tad Stones (creator). We were honored to be a part of such a big community event that brought out local vendors like Miyako Sushi (owner Mike specializes in collectibles of all kinds), Requests Music (owner Joe used to own one of Maui's earlier comic stores in the '90s), House of Blus, the Rave Corner and Howard Rockman's Rare Comics! Some of you may remember Howard as owner of Over The Rainbow Comics in ABQ, and contemporary of my late mentor, Bruce Ellsworth. We also had many local and Hawaiian artists and creators who were able to bring their projects to the public. The cosplay contest was managed by local Maui girl and cosplay sensation, Night Darling. And of course the NERDWatch podcast handled all the panels and stage show during the two-day event.

Over these past two years our store has grown and I want to thank everyone who has had a part in that, including the podcast that records here every week – the NERDWatch with host Greg "G-Money" Turner, Professor Barry Wurst, Gannon, Jason "Phormat" David, Todd Bernardy, Swan "the comic henchman" Kaho'okele, Bruce Hennesey, Charles "Big C" Yale-Tang and the rotating crew of nerds! And as always I have to give thanks to the guys who helped build this store into the community institution it is becoming. Thanks to Kaleo Kaina, Travis Shultz, Swan Kaho'okele, Ryan Balberdi and Nick Hopkins! And last and most of all I would like to thank Bruce Ellsworth, my late mentor, without whom none of this would be possible. Here's to many more years and many more collections!

HAKE'S AMERICANA

2016 continued the momentum of last year with the comic book and art markets showing strong results, as collectors and investors add to their collectible investment portfolios. High grade key books continue to fetch record prices, and the demand for mid-grade key books keeps increasing, showing record prices for these issues as well. Certified books have become the standard for many collectors. The strong demand for high grade Gold, Silver and Bronze age key books shows no slowing down at this point, again commanding record prices at auction. Most buyers are committed to paying whatever it takes to own the coveted 9.6 to 9.8 (or higher in rare instances) graded books and are confident in the grades assigned by CGC and CBCS.

Golden Age superhero titles continue to be sought after and even uncertified copies command big prices for even some of the more obscure titles. Once again even lower grade books bring premium prices due to scarcity.

Silver Age Marvel titles are at the top of most buyer's lists. It's been a speculators dream ever since comic sales have been driven by the movie franchises and TV series that are being routinely optioned. Buyers are clamoring to find the next break-out title or character and those are the ones that become red hot. Even the demand and sales of uncertified books is steady. Silver and Bronze first appearances of Groot, Hellcat, Darkseid, TMNT, Moon Knight, Rocket Raccoon, Power Man and Iron Fist will continue to bring in premium prices over the next few years as TV series continue on.

The modern books are no longer being overlooked as first appearances of Deadpool, Cable, Jessica Jones, Harley Quinn, Spider-Gwen and The Walking Dead continue to climb in value. Variant covers have skyrocketed to record sales also as more limited printings and cover art variations propel brand new books off the rack to epic high prices.

Comic art prices continue to rise with each unique page or specialty piece that comes to market. Covers and pages that are coming to market from collectors who have had them stored away for years, are making headlines as they also command record prices at auction. Each year we continue to lose some of the classic artists of the past and their art becomes more sought after and sadly we've also lost a few modern artists as well. Look for modern art to keep rising steadily as some artists start to convert over to digital only formatting. Even color guides and preliminary artwork are becoming desired collectibles. Covers and key appearance pages are always the most coveted but art value continues to be driven by the creative team of the piece.

Hake's Americana Comic Sales: All Star Comics #4 (9.4) $21,275, Incredible Hulk #1 (6.0) $20,873, Journey Into Mystery #83 (3.0) $2,893. Amazing Spider-Man #1 (4.5) $6,325, Fantastic Four #1 (5.0) $7,500, Metal Men #1 (9.4) $3,163.

Art Sales: Master Comics #21 Cover Recreation by Murphy Anderson $3,813, "Conan The Champion" Paperback Book Cover Painting by Ken Kelly $5,750, Fantasia-Night On Bald Mountain Concept Art $11,638.

Merchandise Sales: 1966 Batman Sunglasses Unused Display $3,163, 1941 Captain America Sentinels Of Liberty Club Postcard $4,902, Mego Aquaman 1979 Purple Card $6,591, Kenner Superpowers Hall Of Justice Proof $2,680, 1941 Sensation Comics Promotional Postcard $6,958.

COAST TO COAST COMICS

Copper/Modern: There are a host of comics in this area that continue to jump in value. I can't cover them all here but would like to list a half dozen or so that seem to be out performing the rest of the pack. Batman Adventures #12, first appearance Harley Quinn, and New Mutants #98, the first appearance of Deadpool, just as last year continue to lead the pack and have maintained strong prices realized with only minor drops in value. Many times issues like these peak only to tumble hard in value, but these two are both excellent long term investments in my opinion. Coast To Coast Comics has sold at least a dozen copies of New Mutants #98 this year priced at between $400-$600. With all copies being “raw” these are perfect examples of the strength of this issue in particular. Although graded copies of this issue have somewhat stabilized at around $650, this is only down slightly from last year’s average around $800 for purchases last year. I expect both raw and slabbed copies to re-coup this dip in value and rise again with the future Deadpool movies to come in the future. In 2017 “graded”-copies should surpass their old mark of $800 or so and go as high as $1000 dollars a copy for CGC or CBCS graded 9.8 copies.

Following a much more aggressive trend Batman Adventures #12 has also doubled in value since 2014. Two years ago “graded” 9.8 copies were selling in the $800 range, in 2016 these same books are bringing in a whopping $1700 on average! One reason for this is the #12’s scarcity, as it is a lot harder to find in high grade than many other keys of this era. Harley Quinn’s first appearance in this comic makes this comic book a must have for Batman and Harley fans alike.

Although not with the strength of the 2015 market, other titles continued to rise in popularity due to the influence of Hollywood like The Infiltrator, The Walking Dead, Uncanny X-Men, Deadpool, Batman The New 52, Saga, Danger Girl, NYX, Edge Of Spider-Verse and many, many, many more! Within these titles variants continue to dominate the highest price points, many into the thousands of dollars range. The sky is the limit in this area of the market. Have fun, however also make certain to do your research before dropping huge dollars on books in this genre because as I previously mentioned “the skies are the limit,” just don’t forget that in many cases, the basement on values isn’t far below.

Bronze Age/Silver Age/Golden Age: Silver Age once again continued to be one of the most dominant areas in comics for the year 2016. Major key issues, 1st appearances, origin issues, any and all comics with significance continue to be eagerly snapped up with no end in sight. DC keys continue to appreciate in price and value this year just like they did last year. We don’t see this ending anytime soon! Marvel Keys like Amazing Spider-Man #1, X-Men #1, Fantastic Four #1, Journey Into Mystery #83, Tales Of Suspense #39, Amazing Fantasy #15 and so on continued to sell extremely fast especially in lower grades and of course when priced correctly. In 2015 we saw FF #1 almost double in value, and in 2016 it continued to go up in value but at a more steadied percentage of roughly 20%.

This year’s breakout comic in terms of price jump has to be Amazing Spider-Man #1. This year it has done what FF #1 did the year before meaning almost doubling in value, again most notably in the lower to mid-grade copies. I would like to mention one comic that has become a “sleeper” on the “most wanted” list among collectors, House Of Secrets #92. This awesome key 1st appearance of Swamp Thing is illustrated by none other than the Master Of Macabre himself, Mr. Bernie Wrightson! In the year 2016 we followed this comic closely and viewed with great interest the price of high grade copies increases up to and well over $200 a point! In NM 9.4 there was an increase to over $500 per point, this of course will level out however with the print run of this Silver/Bronze mega key being reported as low as 20,000 copies who knows how high prices will be in the next few years?

Just about every major Silver Age key across the board experienced strong 20% price increases with little or no resistance from customers in the market place. Just like 2015 there is an almost inability to completely quench the collecting public’s appetite for these investment comics and childhood treasures. Again as in 2015 there is an obvious sense of urgency for many in the hobby to obtain their childhood dream titles, in particular meaning key #1s and first appearances. I spoke with collectors and dealers alike that all agreed there is a heavy imbalance in availability of these gems which continues to drive prices that many feel will reach an amount that is putting these must-have keys out of the financial grasp of many collectors. In particular, low grade copies in the 1.0, 1.5, 1.8 & 2.0 range had a tremendous surge in pricing, the demand which by far exceeded the available supply for more affordable copies was in fact the culprit.

The Golden Age market, just like the Silver Age market, continues to be very strong with all titles selling strongly again when priced right. We noticed that even some of the more obscure and esoteric titles made a comeback this year, and with a strong comic market economy, the theme was once again (as in 2015) “price it right and it will sell quickly”! Unlike 2015, the influence of the Hollywood movie set was not nearly as strong. Of course we can’t say there wasn’t any comic market influence from Hollywood, for example Doctor Strange #169, 1st appearance and origin re-told, saw a big jump in value as did Doctor Strange #1 from 1974.

This year 2016 just like 2015, Coast To Coast Comics, like most dealers across the country was unable to meet 100% of the demand from our customer base. 2017 promises to be an amazing year for everyone involved in this great hobby of ours! Dealers will continue be in hot pursuit of comics and original art to meet the ever-growing demand of their collector customer base. Coast To Coast Comics would like to thank you personally for reading our market input. We also would like to wish all of you in the comic galaxy a healthy and prosperous 2017 in this amazing hobby that we all enjoy, love and even in many cases obsess over! Please look for our auctions on eBay, we are proudly celebrating our 18th year selling on this great venue!

BIG B COMICS - BARRIE

Hello Overstreet readers! Throughout much of this year, whenever someone has asked me how I am doing, my most common response has been “living the dream!” Today I want to share with all of you just what that has meant for me and my humble comic store, Big B Comics Barrie.

2016 has been a year of challenges, change, and overwhelming positivity for me and my business in Barrie, Ontario, Canada. If you read my report last year, you’ll know I set out to grow the back issue comic market in my area by offering a wide range of affordable, mid range material that appeals to buyers young and old. Results have been extremely positive. I built it and they came! It gives me great confidence in the market knowing that there are buyers all over Ontario longing for a reliable and trustworthy source to find new treasures for their collections. Whether they are hard core collectors trying to complete their runs or casual dealers looking to flip for a quick buck, I have met all kinds of new people this year who love comics just as much as I do. It’s awesome.

Since I’ll be closer to the back of this section you’ll probably already have read this a few dozen times, but I will say it again. The market continues to be dominated by keys, keys, and more keys. Comics have gone so mainstream, and collecting “stuff” in general has become so normal, that we have seen a gigantic influx of casual collectors in the market. The one thing that unites nearly all casual collectors is their overwhelming preference to get just one or two really cool back issues for their collection. They don’t care about making runs. They want something to put in a frame on their wall. Combine this with the trend amongst even more serious collectors to focus solely on keys, and we get a market that has really become hyper-focused.

The offshoot of this trend among buyers is a whole new subset of nouveau dealers: the flippers, the crack-press-resubmit crowd, the “I maybe have twenty books in my inventory” kinds of guys. These are the guys who usually work full time jobs but buy and sell a little on the side to finance their own collecting or generate some extra cash. When the market is so hyper-focused on a handful of books that everyone wants, it becomes pretty easy to make a few bucks here and there. You don’t have to carry a lot of inventory so your risk is minimal, and you learn pretty fast that buying and selling comics can be pretty fun! I love that these guys exist in the market. One, they are some of my best customers. I’m never too concerned about squeezing every last penny out of a sale so they can make some money off of me and therefore they keep coming back. Two, it points to a very active and healthy market where there is plenty of opportunity. I’ve always said that the more buying and selling that there is going on the better.

Now, there is a downside to all this of course and I feel I must talk about it a bit. First up, if you are a buyer of old comic books and you are about to pull the trigger on a significant purchase, it is incumbent on you to educate yourself a bit to protect yourself. One thing we unfortunately get with a lot of new blood in the market is a little bit of a Wild West approach to grading and pricing. Do simple things like open a book and count the pages. I know lots of “dealers” who don’t. Sometimes they come up to me trying to sell me a book that is incomplete and they didn’t even know it. These are books that were sitting on their walls for sale priced as though they were complete! I can’t imagine how many are sitting in people’s collections and they don’t even know it. Let’s please not get to a point where we don’t care anymore that a comic is missing a coupon, has a loose centerfold, is missing an ad page, has easy to spot restoration, or any number of other flaws that you’ll never see if you never take the comic out of the bag. These things matter; they should matter to every buyer, and they should especially matter to every dealer.

If you want to educate yourself, there are oodles of handy resources online to learn about comics. Comics.org is an extensive resource that can help you with page counts and story contents so you know if your comic is complete (in addition to just being an overall excellent site). The same folks who produce this price guide publish a very handy grading guide that will help you learn about the different defects that go with every grade. I could go on. Point is, if you don’t want to get burned, buy from dealers you know you can trust or take the time to learn for yourself. Or just buy slabs I guess, though that’s not nearly as fun. But even then learn to buy the book, not the label. Not all graded comics are created equal.

The other point of caution for me regarding this ever changing market is the fear that the bottom could fall out at any minute. I know, I’ve just been saying how healthy and positive the market is, so why the doom and gloom? Well, call me cautiously optimistic but also realistic. In any market that could be described as over-heated, it is prudent to know your risks. We have part-time dealers operating on razor thin (sometimes I have to think non-existent) margins, movie-hype books that we all know eventually crash yet we still bid them up, and chasing for the highest grade syndrome that has historically been proven to be a bad bet more often than not.

In addition, collecting comics has become about more than just buying comics. Now we pay to slab them, press them, clean them, restore them, unrestore them, slab them again, and who knows what else. A lot of money is being spent and I fear not all of it for the good. Added costs bring added risk and oftentimes with no intrinsic value being added. In short, lots of people are positioned to lose significant sums of money if there is a modest market correction. What happens then would be interesting.

So, what do you do if you are just someone who loves comics and loves collecting? Buy what you enjoy. Buy things that will make you happy. Buy with an eye towards value but don't expect to get rich overnight. Most Golden and Silver Age comics have historically proven to be very sound long term investments. I don't see that changing anytime soon. But don't re-mortgage your house or cash out your retirement savings to buy comics. Never assume risk that you cannot afford to take.

Let's talk about some of the specific activity I've seen in my little corner of the market for 2016. First up, what I bought. I was fortunate enough to come in to a good number of large collections this year and dozens more smaller 'walk-in' collections. That would be the stuff that I see at my store on a weekly basis and typically consists of moderns or the occasional small batch of Silver/Bronze. Every once in a while someone brings in some Golden Age. For the bigger buys, I started with a near complete Silver Age Marvel run in February 2016. This was deep runs from #1 up of all the major hero titles, all in mid-grade. This positioned me nicely for a good part of the year for all of my bin divers and collectors filling in their runs. Getting nearly all the keys didn't hurt either. The collection was complete but for Hulk #1, FF #1, ASM #1, and AF #15. The four best ones I know, but a great collection nonetheless.

In the spring I purchased the entire inventory of a local part-time dealer, roughly 20,000 items. It was primarily comics but also Treasuries, bound editions, digests, magazines, and all sorts of other oddities. The collection ran the whole gamut from Golden Age to Undergrounds to Marvel licensing samples from 1992. Half of these items I liquidated immediately at $54/long box. I don't have the space, time or patience to try to squeeze out $1 each on junk from the '80s and '90s. The rest primarily filled my $2 and $5 bins at the store, where they sold briskly. I also did really well with the Treasury Editions. There were many high grade examples that fetched a significant premium and sold immediately.

Throughout the summer I bought an original owner collection of DCs from about 1967-1972, totaling about 800 comics. These were all bought fresh off the stands locally and then stored perfectly and undisturbed for 40 years. The collection was notable for the high gloss and stunning page quality. Sales have been brisk on issue of Batman and Detective especially, but also Lois Lane, Brave and the Bold, Wonder Woman, and Adventure. I don't care what the titles are, when you have DCs at VF/NM and up, collectors snatch them up fast. They are so much rarer than the Marvels from the same time period.

In the fall I purchased another original owner collection consisting of Marvels from about 1965-1980. These weren't stored quite as nicely so the average grade was lower, but good titles were well represented. It's telling though that many of the books were already my 3rd or 4th copies in inventory.

On to the sales! Here are some noteworthy sales in my store for the year. In all cases, prices are Canadian dollars and were for face to face, local transactions. I do very little in online sales, choosing to focus on the local market.

This is just a small snapshot of course, and not really indicative of my market. My bread and butter sales still come from $20-$100 comics. I also sell $5 and $2 comics by the boatload. Value priced books at $5 have been some of my best movers. That's where we put all sorts of books that may Guide at $10-15 but realistically in this market sell for well below that. I've been writing about this for years in the pages of this book. The majority of mid-grade run books don't realize Guide prices, but people are happy to snatch them up at a cheap price. I have found $5 to be pretty much the perfect price point for that.

Still on the subject of sales, I'd like to talk about what has been happening in the world of new comics this year. The big story of the year has to be the DC Rebirth line-wide relaunch in the spring. This was a monumental success and the perfect example of how to do a relaunch right. Kudos to DC. Every issue was 100% returnable, meaning I was able to order way more than I thought I could ever sell and find the ceiling on DC's dime. I still sold out of many first wave titles, largely I think because word spread pretty fast that I was the only store around that still had copies in stock and at cover price no less. I had people driving in from Toronto every week, a city an hour away with probably 30 comic stores, because they just couldn't find the stuff. Crazy.

As an added bonus, the stories and art have been well received and sales continue to be strong 6 months in. Double shipping issues has caused my customers to be more cautious with what they pick up, so the second and third wave of titles have been fairly disappointing sales-wise. But then again, I never expected a whole lot from Cyborg or Blue Beetle anyways.

Across the aisle at Marvel, we continue to get more of the same old, same old and sales are showing it. People are confused by the characters and teams, consecutive numbering seems to be a thing of the past, and there are just way too many interchangeable titles. Constant relaunched and rebranding force collectors to break the habit, taking a lot of the fun out of collecting. For the first time in a long time, I have been ordering 0 copies of some brand new Marvel titles. No one seems to have noticed that I don't have Slapstick #1 on the stands. I wish I had ordered 0 on Solo #1 because that's what I have sold. I don't know who is making the decisions to greenlight these series, but I just shake my head at the whole thing.

Our top 10 sellers for the year in new comics tell the story nicely:

- 1) DC Universe: Rebirth #1
- 2) Batman #1
- 3) Batman #2
- 4) Batman: Rebirth #1
- 5) Civil War II: Choosing Sides #5 Perez var (gimmick Justin Trudeau cover)
- 6) Batman #3
- 7) Batman #4
- 8) Batman #5
- 9) Civil War II #1
- 10) Justice League: Rebirth #1

Graphic novels make up the bulk of our sales for other publishers, with Image by far being our biggest seller. We find we get some initial traction with new non super-hero series as single comics, but most people eventually just switch over to the trades. My staff have plenty of go-to recommendations for new readers coming in, and the large majority of them are Image. These are my top 20 best sellers for the year in Graphic Novels:

Walking Dead Vol. 25 TPB No Turning Back

Saga TPB Vol. 6

Paper Girls Vol. 1 TPB

Walking Dead Vol. 26 TPB Call to Arms

Civil War TPB

Color Your Own Deadpool TPB

Preacher TPB Vol. 2

I want to thank everyone that has been involved with Big B Comics Barrie this year and helped make 2016 the year of living the dream. Extra special thanks go out to my staff, without whom I wouldn't even be writing this report. Alicann Pilon, Jeremy Moore, and Marshall Geddes – you guys are the best.

A final shout out has to go to Bob Overstreet, Mark Huesman, my fellow advisors, and all the lovely people responsible for the creation of this book you hold in your hands. The Overstreet Price Guide is the foundation on which so much of our hobby is built. I use it nearly every day and will for as long as I draw breath. Until next year!

LAUREN SISSELMAN COMICS JOURNALIST

2016 was a great year for signature series collectors. Actors, hard to get creators, and everyone in between was jumping onto the signature series bandwagon. Tough sigs such as Frank Miller became an easy ticket, Doug Moench saw a rise in sig series books, and even the cast and creative team of Back to the Future was popular.

I work with a dealer who specializes in Signature Series books. He facilitates getting signatures for clients, and travels extensively throughout the world to do so. I go with him for many of these quests, and have done some on my own as well. The common trend is for Moderns and some Silver Age to get signed, with very few Golden Age books in the mix. Photo covers of comics are always well received, as well are variants and blank covers.

Easily the two most popular Sig Series books this past year were Harley Quinn #1 and Batman: Rebirth #1. Gabrielle Dell’Otto covers were also a big hit this year, with graders seeing them come across their desk often. On the Indy comics side, Henchgirl from Scout Comics, and 4 Kids Walk Into A Bank were wildly popular. On the Marvel side, Punisher and Daredevil were surprise hits, but many fans can thank the Netflix show for the surge in popularity. Black Panther #1 was also a very popular SS book this year, if not thanks to the latest Captain America movie. Power Rangers from BOOM! has also seen a resurgence in popularity, as #0 copies are one of most seen Sig Series books. Even Archie had a rise in SS popularity thanks to the multitude of variants and convention exclusives they release.

Price wise, the Signature Series can vary. For the most part, a signature added to most books will bring the book some value. Other times it can be detrimental. In the Fall of 2015, Frank Miller signed books were going for $600+, but Fall of 2016 prices dropped to $100+ per book, due to the saturation of his signature in the market. Stan Lee’s signature, while possibly the most common signature out there, still commands high dollar amounts. An Amazing Fantasy #15 in CGC 4.5 with his sig went for $24,950, while a copy without his signature typically goes for under $20,000. A CBCS 0.1 coverless Batman #1 signed by Jerry Robinson recently sold for $6K, which is average for a similar copy of that book without a signature. Many Modern books in the 9.4-9.6 range fall between $50-$100, but 9.8s still command the most money.

Another trend in the signature series side of collecting is creators charging money to people who may be getting their books graded by either CGC or CBCS. Most of the time writers and artists have a donation bucket for the CBLDF, which is a fantastic cause. But more and more are charging $10 if not more for their own personal gain. While this certainly hasn’t stopped people from getting books signed and graded, it’s still disheartening to see this practice being done. Celebrities such as Gal Gadot or Chris Evans almost always charge for an autograph regardless of the item. There’s no escaping that unless you personally know them. But even some of their prices are a little shock inducing, which should make you stop and ask if they really are receiving all of that money, or if someone behind the scenes is. When it comes to paying for a signature, regardless of who’s signing, always be sure you’re comfortable and OK with paying that price.

Over the next year, signature series will undoubtedly grow in popularity. If you’re thinking of jumping into this side of the hobby, seek out a reputable dealer or facilitator to help you get started. It’s a rapidly growing hobby, and as with any side of collecting, ever changing too. Happy collecting!

TONY STARKS COMICS INA FLASH

Another year... and the back issue market continues along similar paths that it has followed the past several years. More blockbuster movies, more Netflix superhero series, more TV superhero series. For the most part, more interest in those characters first and key appearances.

Look at Superboy #68 - the first appearance of Bizarro. A great character - a childhood favorite of mine - one that has been good for a lot of sight gags and humor. My favorite gag is Bizarro rubbing two Boy Scouts together to make start a fire. It has always been a sought after issue. When a “Bizarro” Supergirl appeared in February in the popular Supergirl TV series, the book jumped another 25%. People only had to talk about the possibility of She-Hulk entering the Marvel cinematic universe (a great idea I think - make her an Avenger) to make Savage She-Hulk #1 take off.

Daredevil Season 2 finally did the character of the Punisher justice. So Amazing Spider-Man #129 has popped. And keeps going up. Jessica Jones (Alias) was great and the villain Killgrave the Purple Man stole the movie. His first appearance in Daredevil #4 went from minor villain first appearance to must-have on a lot of collectors’ lists. Patsy Walker (Jessica’s sister) has spiked demand for Avengers #144 (Patsy Walker as Hellcat) What to say about Luke Cage?? Hero for Hire #1 was already a sought after book. With lots of new fans looking for a copy, those new fans discovered just how hard the book is to find in high grade. And prices have moved up accordingly.

While movies and TV seem to drive first issues and first appearances, year after year we sell lots of average condition run issues of Silver and Bronze Age books. After years of being depressed, the market on this type of material stabilized a couple of years ago. Probably because the huge oversupply of such books has subsided. Half a dozen years ago, collectors were glutting the market by selling these run books trying to raise money for high grade keys. Many have given up - the really big books in high grade are simply too expensive for the vast majority of collectors. They would have to sell their house and kids - not their comics - to purchase a NM Avengers #1 ($100,000+). So many have decided to keep their collections (and house and kids) and buy a VG Avengers #1 ($2,000) instead. Plus, with all the movies and TV shows, one never knows when some minor character’s first appearance in a “run” of issues becomes the next must have book.

Just a few examples of sales of average books: Avengers #61, 62, 63 & 64 FN @ $10.00 ea., Avengers Annual #2 VF $35.00, Batman #183 VG $27.00, Bullwinkle #4 NM $10.00 (Ronald Reagan cover), Daredevil #7 VG+ $125.00, Fantastic Four #36 VG $36.00, Justice League #9 FN $100.00, Mystery In Space #80 FN/VF $30.00, Phantom

Signature Series books signed by Stan Lee still command high dollar amounts. (Thor #133 shown)

Stranger #13 VF $14.00, Power Man #19 NM $12.00, Thor #127 VG $16.00, Tomb of Dracula #13 FN $20.00, Wonder Woman #181 VF/NM $42.00, #184, 186 VF @ $22.00 ea., and #200 VF/NM $80.00. Taken over a year, sales like this add up.

But it's not all inexpensive stuff here at Comics Ina Flash! We have some high end and better sales as well, often times professionally graded: Aquaman #35 CBCS 6.0 $325.00, Blackhawk #133 CBCS 3.0 $450.00 (1958 1st Lady Blackhawk, now part of popular Birds of Prey team), Captain America #100 CGC 5.0 $150.00, #109 CGC 9.6 $525.00, 9.2 $200.00, Defenders #1 CGC 9.4 $350.00, Dr. Strange #1 CGC 9.6 $348.00, Giant-Size Iron Man #1 PGX 9.8 (double cover) $358.00, Incredible Hulk #102 VF $150.00, #181 PGX 7.5 $1400.00, New Mutants #1 CGC 9.8 $100.00, Star Wars #1 CBCS 9.8 $860.00, Superman #233 CGC 9.0 $223.00, Tales to Astonish #57 FN/VF $135.00, Tales of Suspense #50 CGC 7.0 $300.00 and Thor #193 NM- $140.00.

A few books that a lot of collectors are seeking that might not be ones "everyone" knows: Blue Beetle #1 (1967) - first appearance of The Question, Blackhawk #133 - first Lady Blackhawk (Birds of Prey) and House of Secrets #61 - 1st Eclipso.

EC comics seem to be on a lot more collectors' want lists than they were a few years ago. Any issue that we get in quickly sells. Golden Age as well continues to show renewed interest. Several collectors have remarked to us that Golden Age comics are now more affordable than a lot of Silver Age issues that they want.

Overall, the market's health seems to continue to improve. It is still very driven by movies and TV, but you see solid interest and sales in other genres as well.

WEST STEPHAN CBCS

2016 certainly has been a busy year for CBCS. We just hired 2 more graders and quite a few other employees that work here behind the scenes. There is no slow down on submissions! We've seen many Golden Age and Silver Age original owner collections this year, as well as some collections that were bought second hand in the '70s & '80s that are just now coming back into the market. One such collection was bought in the late '70s - early '80s comprised of only 2 dozen issues, but boy did he pick some winners! Some of those include: Detective Comics #27, Batman #1-4, #6, Captain America Comics #1, Police Comics #1, Action Comics #3, Flash Comics #1, World's Best Comics #1 (Larson Copy!), Fantastic Four #1, X-Men #1 (CBCS 9.4!). Another original owner Golden Age collection that was submitted had a Marvel Comics #1 (CBCS 7.5 White Pages), many pre-hero Detective Comics and early Fox books. In fact, books from that collection keep arriving as the submitter gets books from the collection in hand-fulls every few months. There's no telling what is left to be found or how many books are still in that collection. What's amazing though is that every single book from that collection has perfect White Pages! Most of the books so far that have been submitted are from 1938-1941 with a few as late as 1946. Another old time collector that has submitted some amazing books recently submitted a Young Men #27 (CBCS 8.5 White Pages!). Now there's a book you rarely see in high grade and never see with White Pages! It's the best copy I've seen in my 32 years of collecting!

We have also noticed a large increase in "Classic Covers" submissions. Books like Phantom Lady #17, Suspense Comics #3, Marvel Mystery Comics #40, #44 & #46 and other classic covers are always in huge demand, and thus, are always the first books to be submitted when a collection containing them is bought. World War II covers are also very coveted and show no signs of slowing down. In fact, Overstreet may have to start breaking out more WWII covers as they always sell for more than the issues surrounding them that do not have a war cover. Most of the time, the market is more cover driven than anything else at this point. It's the cover that sells the comic, unfortunately the interior stories seem to be of secondary importance at this point.

Speaking of "Classic Covers", we uncovered an error that was made a while back. A 9.4 White copy of Terrific Comics #5 was submitted to CBCS as the Crowley Copy. The Edgar Church/Mile High copy has been lost for decades, no one knew where the book had vanished to back in the '70s. It was on the original list of Mile Highs as a NM+ and could have been bought for only $8.00, that was the catalog list price! No wonder no one knew where the book was, in 1977 the book had minimal value. Well, the owner thought that this book might be that lost Edgar Church/Mile High Copy. The previous owner of the book (a very renowned expert on Edgar Church/Mile Highs) also felt that the book was from the Mile High collection. The current owner was told the only way we could be certain if the book was a Mile High would be to crack the book open and inspect the book internally. We had to smell the book (yes, smell the book, as Mile Highs give off a distinct scent that no other comic does) and we had to access the "Whiteness" of the pages and interior cover. Also we needed to look at the cover in hand and not through plastic to see if the book had the "raised" colors and ink reflectivity that Mile Highs typically exhibit. This copy passed every test! After looking at the book for quite a while and contacting other Mile High experts who also agreed with us, the unanimous consensus was that this was that "lost" Mile High! We at CBCS have discovered dozens of books that have been submitted as non-pedigrees were actually from different pedigrees, including the World's Best Comics #1 Larson Copy that was mentioned earlier, a copy of All Select Comics #8 that we discovered was that Big Apple Copy and the Suspense Comics #3 that was submitted to CBCS the previous year that was actually the Pennsylvania Copy!

As we look forward to 2017, I do not expect many changes. The comic book hobby will continue to thrive, movies and TV shows will keep the public interested in comic characters, CBCS will continue its growth, and in July, we will all be clamoring to see the newest Overstreet Comic Book Price Guide! Thank you Mr. Bob Overstreet, J.C. Vaughn, Mark Huesman and all the others who make this guide a success year after year!

AL STOLTZ BASEMENT COMICS

What is selling at shows and online? I ask this question of every dealer I know and as usual and for the 100th time as usual it's Keys, rare comics, High grade of some issues of comics or select series. I know, I know that I have said this over and over in my reports for many years and sure enough it is the most common answer I get from other sellers. What about the other 90% or so of remaining items? Well, it looks like half off or more or breaking comics that are slow sellers into price point bins works the best when trying to thin these items out of inventory. We were selling last few years of comics bagged and in order for $2.00 each at a few shows but that model has seemed to have slowed a good bit. We moved to thinning out our warehouse of unwanted older issues like Good to Very Good and at times Fine or better of overstocked stuff from Bronze Age to later Silver Age comics into $3.00 each or "Four comics for $10.00" model. Shows that had large buyers looking to fill up collections like Charlotte Comic Con or New York Comic Con saw the maximum sell through of these priced issues. It was gratifying to see guys happily buy Gold Key Korak or Tarzan issues along with beat up WDC&S issues or even lower grade Tales of Suspense or Avengers. While $3.00 or even $2.50 each is at times below listed value, I feel this is now the true selling value for many of these titles. We now just adjust our buy price for this material as we know its ultimate destination is bagged and blown out in bargain boxes. Nothing wrong with that and I feel in the end I see that maybe somebody is actually reading these again and not just looking for the Hot books of the week that need to be slabbed and sold for short term money. WE NEED READERS AND COLLECTORS !!! If we end up with a room full of investors, the love for the hobby and for the art form will just be dead.

We published a Fanzine with a print run of 500 copies this year. Fantastic cover by Mark Wheatley and articles about the hobby and fandom and collecting by many including my youngest son Alex ( 28 yrs old ) who seemed to have the crowd favorite story printed in this issue. My hope and attempt was to try and collect stories about comics, convention experiences or items that the people collect and had an interest in and pass them on like the original comic lovers of days long gone by. We will attempt to get a few issues out a year and any serious collectors or dealers that want to contribute 600-700 words are more than welcome to send it along to us and join in this experiment. The history of comic dealers and early pioneers of comic fandom needs to be preserved and hopefully read by those chasing this medium in the future.

Conventions during the year were mostly positive and paid off for the investment into them. I do have to say that after recovering from a badly broken leg the year before and now aged 54, doing these shows is really getting tough! Charlotte and New York Comic Con were perhaps our best shows for the year but Chicago Comic Con, Awesome Con, Mega Con and Baltimore were not too bad and were well worth the effort to set up and display. As suspected we sold lots of Key issues including Hulk #181, Giant-Size X-Men #1, Batman Adventures #12, Amazing Spider-Man #129 and Marvel and DC key 1st appearances along the way. Almost all of them third party graded and ready to be added to a comic portfolio of sorts from investor buyers. Art and odd ball items we tend to carry were eagerly bought up and given new homes. We like to carry a wide variety of price point and collectible items at our booths at major shows these days. Like we stated early in this report, the bargain of "four comics for ten dollars" approach seemed to be very well received at NYCC and readers who usually never find Bugs Bunny or low grade Our Army At War seemed delighted. If this model holds we will try it again next season. I like to keep it interesting and the customers seem to be looking for a wide range of things that can be collected or even used as decorative items in an office or home.

eBay has seemed to be in its death spiral for a year and a half now and selling anything on there is more work than one can tolerate. A platform that I felt single handedly saved back issues sales a bunch of years ago has greatly slowed. Is it because the buyers who loved it 18 years ago are out of the hobby or have filled their lists? Or as many have felt, eBay has restructured who gets more traffic and chances to sell, more of a Big Box sellers versus small individual sellers. Loads of theories abound on chat boards on and off eBay these days and eBay itself offers little sympathy when we call and ask them to allow us to sell something. We have been selling on eBay for over 18 years now and while we do manage to sell a good bit of product, you can easily see that the glory days are fading and it's time to do something else.

Something else for us will be VintagebasementComics.com. As of this writing in December we were waiting for our Beta Version to play with and once we get our hands on it we will work to fill it up with tens of thousands of items that we have held back in our warehouse and better material that will only be available on our webpage. At that time, eBay will begin its role later as just our liquidation system. The comic industry has changed drastically since I started being in it in 1975, and where and how to sell and even what to charge constantly is bouncing all over the place. Hopefully we can promote the website enough to make it a great place for collectors to buy with confidence and enjoy seeing the strange and rare items that we like to post. Along with the website we are working towards our third year of doing pressing comics for ourselves and customers. Basement Comics pressing has been steadily growing and has at this point taken over most of my time at the office. We have cleaned and pressed everything from every Marvel Key to plenty of rare and wonderful Golden Age Comics including a few Mile High copies. What started out as just a means to better my own material has blossomed and now we make a decent living out of offering this service.

I guess this will be a short entry from me this year for the Overstreet Guide but I would like to just say that this hobby has provided me with a living for a very long time and we will hit our official 25th year as Basement Comics this coming August. Unofficially I have been walking the aisles of comic shows and flea markets much longer. The hobby changes and so do we as age and time catches up to us. Is it our duty to try and guide young and new buyers to genres of comics that are falling in value and desirability? No, I think that buyers will find what interests them and comics like Tarzan and Westerns and even goofy Golden Age titles will find a buyer somewhere. A different market where things sell but sell for less than they used to a decade ago is here and settled in and that is fine. You buy cheaper and sell cheaper and spread the fun of comics at local and large shows. Somebody always seems to enjoy them for different reasons only they can define. Just keep them reading them...

DOUG SULIPA

DOUG SULIPA'S COMIC WORLD

I became obsessed with comics at a young age, due to my love of the 1966 Batman TV series, Superman TV reruns, Sci-Fi shows, cartoons of the era, TV and the movies. As a child my father took me to second hand bookstores, where I could buy used comics for a nickel, but they also traded 2-for-1, a lesson I fast learned. 2017 is the 50th Anniversary of the year 1967, when I started my Two for One Comic Trading Enterprise out of the basement of my parents house in Winnipeg as a young 11 year old kid. I mainly started it to grow my small collection. It did not take long before I started getting a lot of duplicates. For kids in the neighbourhood with nothing to trade, I would also accept cash for comics for 5 to 10 cents each, so it was literally a "Nickel & Dime" business. The pricey 10¢ comics I sold back then were ironically anything with a 10¢ cover price, which my young mind considered old and rare. With my allowance and nickels and dimes, my mini-enterprise grew my collection to about 5000 comics by 1971, when I started my ads in RBCC and my Back Issue catalogues. I owe eternal thanks for my parents Olly and Walter Sulipa for allowing me to continue my obsession, and for all their help and assistance through the decades. They even supported my decision to drop out of University after only 2 of the 4 years that were required to finish.

Naturally in the early 1970s, the comic business seemed ludicrous and laughable to almost anyone I met, but I was always undeterred and only looked forward, because I had already met and dealt with thousands of people worldwide who respected what I did. Fast forward 50 years to the present, I now realize I have sold about 5-10 million comics over the last half century, and still have a hefty current inventory of 1.3 million comics. My wife Cathy Sulipa has been my true inspiration since we met in 1988, and it is amazing all the things we have done together in the last 29 years. I could not have done it without her enormous help, understanding and faith in me. Thanks also to my good buddy Paul Clairmont of PNJ Comics, our visits, friendship, talks and brainstorming sessions have made us both better people.

In the Modern Age, comics, graphic novels, Sci-fi, cartoons/Anime, gaming and all the related fields are now at the cusp and cutting edge of Pop Culture. We now have blockbuster movies that routinely make $250 million to $1 Billion. We also have dozens of conventions that take over entire cities with crowds of 50,000 to 100,000 or more, filled with movie, TV, comic, other stars, celebrities and companies. The San Diego Comic-Con had 167,000 people attend in 2015. Although some print media is down, our Industry is THRIVING in all other media, and comics are now established as worldwide elite collectibles, yet are still accessible to everyone – Ya Gotta Love It !!!

2016 was another blockbuster year for us, similar to 2015. The meteoric rise in sales has leveled off, but sales are still going strong. After several years of blazing hot comics related to all the movie and television shows, the marketplace frenzy is now somewhat diluted, including all the re-boots, Horror, Sci-fi, toy/action figure, cartoon, Anime and other movie and television shows, thus buyers have become more selective.

Dozens of people contacted me to thank me for the massive list of items to look for, the list I created for fans, investors and dealers alike, as published in Overstreet #46 on pages 178-198. If you missed it, be sure to go back and check it out. Buyers have re-directed some of the attention to the "All-Time Best Lists" and are now buying up many of the overlooked and undervalued Key and minor Key issues of the Silver, Bronze and Copper Ages. Many items have seen 25%-500% price increases over the last four years. A few lists to look up include: IGN's Top 100 Comic Book Villains Of All-Time, Top 100 Comic Book Heroes Of All-Time, Top 50 Avengers, Top 100 Animated Series, and Comics Buyer's Guide's 100 Sexiest Women in Comics List, Top 10 1970s Marvels by the Comics Bulletin; various Newsarama Top 10 Lists (Top Super-Teams, Top Archenemies, etc) and more. If you have a hero of interest, find out who their archenemy is and buy the Key issues, including the first appearance (from Golden, Silver, Bronze, Copper and Modern Ages - where applicable), their origin, death and other related issues. Controversial storylines such as: the unwilling pregnancy of Carol Danvers aka Ms. Marvel in Avengers #200; Amazing Adventures #31 (the first dramatic interracial kiss in American color comic books history); Marvel Team-Up #64 (Misty Knight and Iron Fist become the comics first inter-racial super-hero couple.)

Demand for first appearances of all the major villains (especially the arch enemies) for all the major heroes of Marvel and DC is often higher than demand for the first appearance of the hero, often due to price of the heroes first appearance.

The hunt continues for hundreds of under-valued minor and hidden Key issues of the future: early female characters, early Black, Native/Indian, Chinese and Asian, Mexican, Puerto Rican, Muslim, Half-Breed, interracial, Alien, Gay and more. Collecting more affordable vintage reprints of major key issues is now an established trend, as more and more buyers look for CGC high graded copies (Marvel Milestone, Famous First Edition, Millennium editions, Limited Collector's Edition Treasures, Promo giveaway reprints, Marvel Tales #98,99,106,137,158, Marvel Super Action #18, Sgt. Fury #167 etc) and many of these are now selling at 200-400% Guide. DC purchased the Charlton heroes in the mid 1980s and most of them entered the DC universe through Crisis in 1985 through to 1990 or so. Those DC key issues are now up in demand, and the demand is also up for all the Charlton original key issues, especially Captain Atom #83. Most fans overlook non-superhero comics and non Marvel and DC comics, but smart buyers are now looking at all the other genres too. Just a few comics that are up in demand, and now command decent CGC prices include: Back to the Future (Harvey), Beetlejuice (Harvey), Earthworm Jim (Marvel), Gargoyles (Marvel), Ghost in the Shell, Labyrinth (David Bowie – Marvel), Masters of the Universe (Marvel and DC), Scooby-Doo (all publishers), Thundercats (Marvel), Transformers (Marvel), and Voltron. We sold True Comics #48 (4/46; the true story of Desmond Doss, the basis for the recent Hacksaw Ridge movie in Good+ for $75.

Last issues in the series (especially series with 25 or more issues, ending from 1980 through to 2000) are perhaps among the most over-looked and under-valued Key issues. Most issue #1s from 1975 to date had the higher print runs. Most series get cancelled due to low sales, thus most last issues had low print runs. Many last issues from the 1980-2000 era have Guide values of $3.00 to $10.00, yet are routinely in such short supply, that many bring $10, $20 to $50 each and more (300% to 1000% current Guide prices.) Just a few hot “last issues” include: Archie Publ. (most last issues), Brave and the Bold #200, Charlton (most last issues), Conan #275, Dark Horse Presents #157, Deadpool #69, Elvira's House Of Mystery #11, Gargoyles #11, Ghost Rider V1 #81(1983), Ghost Rider V2 #93(1998), G.I. Joe #155, Groo #120, Harvey Publ. (most last issues), Howard the Duck #33, Jonah Hex #92, Marvel Comics Presents #175, Marvel's “New Universe” title last issues, Master of Kung Fu #125, Masters Of The Universe #12-13, Moon Knight #38, New Titans #130, Planet of the Apes magazine #29, Rom #75, Savage Sword #235, Spider-Man The Manga #31 (Direct only with Diamond pre-orders of only 2776 copies printed), Punisher #104, Ronin #6, Sgt. Rock #422, Sick #134, Spider-Woman #50, Star Wars #107, Suicide Squad #66, Superman #423, Unknown Soldier

#268, Valiant Publ. (most last issues), Warren Publ. (most last issues), Wonder Woman #329, World's Finest #323, X-Men The Manga #26 (Direct only with Diamond pre-orders of only 2616 copies printed.)

Fans have also gone back to trying to complete many of the comic crossover event issues, such as: Amalgam Comics, Batman vs. Hulk, Blackest Night, Civil War, Crisis on Infinite Earths, Darkseid Saga, Death of Superman, Flashpoint, Great Darkness Saga, Identity Crisis, Infinity Gauntlet-War, Kree/Skrull War, Maximum Carnage, Mutant Massacre, Secret Wars, Superman vs. Muhammad Ali, Superman vs. Spider-Man, and Thanos Saga.

The super-hero comics of Marvel and DC are by far the most collected of all comics, seizing the majority of the attention and dollars spent on back issues, but there is so very much more for the true comics lover to discover. Circa 1985, I recall setting up a table at the Minneapolis Comic Con with 100 comics worth over $250,000 (Detective #27, Marvel Mystery #2-10, Red Raven #1, Superman #1, Whiz #2 and more) and it got a lot of media attention at the time, and I eventually sold them all over a few years. At about that point, I made the decision to further my earlier 1978 plan to try to stock at least one copy each of everything printed in comics and many related items too in the affordable price range of $100 or less, but always with a decent selection of $100 to $1000 items. Big ticket items over $1000 still get most of the attention, yet remain unaffordable to 99% of comic collectors, I thus dropped them from being my main focus. So for over 40 years I bought comic collections with all genres of comics by alternative publishers, Archie, Atlas, Atlas Seaboard, Canadian Comics, Charlton, Classics, Cracked, Dell, Digests, Eerie pub, Fanzines, Fawcett, Gold Key, Harvey, IW, King, Mad, Magazines, Millar, Personality, Petersen, Sick, Skywald, Stanley, Super Pub, Tower, Treasures, Underground, Warren, Whitman and all the other publishers.

There is an amazing overlooked appetite, and tens of thousands of people who love and collect all the other genres of comics including: Action/adventure, Adult, Archie and related, Cartoons, Children, Crime, Fantasy, Funny Animals, History, Horror, Hot-Rod, Hot-Rod and Car Cartoon mags, Humor, Jungle, Licensed Characters, Love/Romance,

Manga, Martial Arts, Movie, Mythology, Mystery, Newspaper Comic Strip, Parody/Spoof, Pirates, Pop Music Stars, Radio, Rock, Sci-Fi, Soap Opera, Sports, Sword and Sorcery, Teen, TV, Underground, War, Western, and more. Because I have a huge selection of all these other genres, I have had many years where non-Superhero comics easily outsold Superhero comics. It is mainly the Superhero, and Marvel/DC collectors who are obsessed with getting high grade copies and actually prefer to pay what it takes to get them. I have sold millions of back issues to these collectors, and have loved doing it, and

yes indeed the Guide is correct in the wide price spreads for GD to FN and VF through NM-.

The majority of the thousands of Oddball comic buyers (non-Superhero comics) are just happy to find what they need at all, so condition has never been a big issue, with most only having to decide between middle grade decent presentable copies, or lower grade more affordable reading copies. I have been very successful in helping fill in gaps in collections for thousands of often very grateful collectors around the World. Oddball comic collectors are usually the most overlooked and forgotten ones by most other sellers. I don't think the Guide is correct in the too wide Price Spreads for GD to FN and VF through NM- for Oddball comics. Take Dell Comics for example. 95% of our buyers want GD to FN copies and we sell them at 110-150% Guide depending on difficulty of restocking and demand, but VF through NM- copies are in low demand and can often only be sold if discounted below Guide. Many Oddball comics are so undervalued in the Guide, that all dealers worldwide are always sold out (or do not bother to stock them), and there are only occasional appearances on eBay. For example, attempting to put complete sets in GD through FN of most 1950 through 1970 titles by Archie, Charlton, and Harvey titles can actually be very tough, even though they have low Guide values in the $3 to $10 each price range. I have been looking for COMPLETE copies of Katy Keene Fashion Book #17 and #19 for a client for five years. I found them 3 times, but all 3 copies had pages missing, so I would be happy to pay $75 for a complete copy in GD ($19 Guide value.) Many fans are looking to buy Millie The Model #18-93 the Dan DeCarlo issues. If you can find them at all, these routinely sell for 200%-600% Guide in low grade. Over half of the 300+ IW and Super comics have absurdly low Guide values in the $12-$20 range for NM-.

For comics that are 55-65 years old, only the most common low grade copies are available in the Marketplace, making gathering a complete set a near impossible task. For most pre-1970 Oddball comics, Grade to Price spreads need to be narrowed, raising the prices on the lower graded copies, so that the VF through NM- copies are more desirable, and scarcer undervalued tough-to-find comics come out of the collections for sale. Yes, there are some more common titles that are slower sellers, but as is the tradition, those can go in Bargain Bins or go into Clearance Sale, as dealers have always done.

Once again the big money maker for us this year was high grade Key issue comics graded by CGC. The demand is huge and seems never-ending, so we keep sending in hundreds more, and they keep selling. As with the last few years, most are TV and movie related, but other items have begun to pick up in demand. Below is a sample of some of the more notable CGC Sales we made in 2016:

MAGGIE THOMPSON COLLECTOR

My buddy Brent Frankenhoff (who works with me on buying, selling, and collecting) and I have concluded that the pricing bar was on the rise for both buyers and sellers of back issues in 2016. There's plenty of collector traffic out there for comics that are reasonably priced, but both groups have adjusted their price points higher in the past year. Where a collector used to be able to fill holes for 50¢ each for most comics published in the past 20 to 30 years, that's changed. Many of those issues cost 75¢ or $1 now, whereas many of the $2-$3 comics have moved up to the $5-$6 range. Hot keys from the same period – Walking Dead #1, for example – still command crazy price bumps. Both key and non-key issues are continuing to sell, as new collectors come into the market looking for popular media characters in their original appearances.

This is also the case with Gold, Silver, and Bronze Age items. Where it was once possible to buy many non-key examples of mid-to-lower-grade comics for $2-$5, that $5 now seems to be the starting point for Gold and Silver in Good-Very Good. Mid-grade Bronze Age comics can be found for $2-$3, but such deals are more readily made when buying in quantity. (Conventions can provide bargains for buyers looking for a quantity of Good items in general genres, rather than for specific issues to fill holes.)

As the collecting base ages, more and more collectors who bought their first comics in the late 1980s and early 1990s have more disposable income and are looking to fill the holes in those runs. (Yes, just the way earlier generations of collectors sought to fill holes in their runs from the late 1960s through the early 1980s. Mind you, there are enough 1980s and 1990s comics that prices aren't stellar for small-press-run non-keys, but there is still money to be made. Moreover, prices may go up, as collectors are willing to part with more of their disposable income to acquire a last missing item in a given run.

As the general public gets more savvy about what older comics are worth, prices that buyers have to offer to acquire Gold, Silver, and Bronze Age comics are also on the rise. Many owners now want higher and higher prices for those comics, because they can do their homework and see what those issues bring online in auctions. On the other hand, a buyer's patience can pay off, as a seller sees that what seemed to be a seller's market may not be quite as lucrative as he or she originally thought.

While Captain America: Civil War and Doctor Strange didn't produce massive price spikes for their connected comics, there was a price bump for almost anything Harley Quinn related, especially her first comic-book appearance in Batman Adventures #12. Whereas so far, at least, her fellow Suicide Squad members did not see similar increases in their key appearances, that may change.

MICHAEL TIERNEY COLLECTOR'S EDITION & THE COMIC BOOK STORE

DC Comics might have finally learned the lesson that a satisfied customer buys more than a frustrated one. The Rebirth reboot where DC went back to their roots was a huge success, but because of poor promotional efforts, it initially had the look of a mega bomb.

DC Comics made their own catalog, which had few illustrations and contained only the titles and the names of the creators -- plus the first partial shipment didn't arrive until two weeks before the final ordering deadline. DC also skipped providing a teaser during Free Comic Book Day the month before. The reaction? No interest at all from fans. Not even the crickets were chirping.

DC's fiasco called Convergence the year before had enjoyed an avalanche of anticipation when compared to Rebirth, and Convergence was an abject sales disaster. So it's no wonder that retailers across the country ordered light, despite an offer of returnability several months later. I know that my wariness of bombs was the same as if I'd heard multiple air raid sirens.

Then the books came out to good reviews, but there were none available for reorder. DC apparently had less faith in their books than I. But expecting retailers to carry all of the burden for their gamble wasn't the worst of it.

The sellout DC Rebirth #1 that launched the event immediately went back to a second printing, and retailers had but a single hour in which to order copies. I was reading through my email at the exact moment when the solicitation arrived and immediately placed what I felt were healthy orders for both of my locations. While I was at the very front of the line -- DC decided not to ship even a single copy to either store. I was told that other accounts had placed orders in the 1,000s and all copies went to them on an allocation system that only -- special emphasis here on the ONLY -- DC uses.

The exact same thing happened the first time DC did a month of holographic covers. I had placed realistic initial orders, but received only a tiny fraction because of DC's allocation system. Didn't get enough to even satisfy my reserve accounts for customers who bought the titles on a regular basis. The result? When DC repeated the event the next year, it was a fiasco. I once again ordered realistically am still stuck today with piles of unsold copies. Frustrated customers don't buy more. They buy less.

DC quickly did a third printing of DC Rebirth #1 and this time gave everybody plenty of time to order. The result? Once again certain accounts ordered copies in the 1,000s and once again DC's allocation system kicked in. One of my stores received only 3 copies.

It certainly makes it hard to support an event when you can't get the materials to work with. A tilted playing field makes things exponentially more difficult.

Fortunately, after a stumbling and bumbling launch worthy of a follies highlight reel, DC managed to maintain their bi-weekly scheduling and kept the quality of the content up. Despite the stunted initial launch, sales grew with each subsequent issue along an incline that headed steadily upwards for several months before plateauing. The result was that even when sales began to drop across most of the line, for several months DC outsold Marvel Comics with a consistency that I've never seen before in my 36 years as a comics specialty retailer.

This was a case of higher issue numbers on a series selling better than the early issues, as DC quickly rolled up the issue count meter thanks to their bi-weekly schedule. A return to the original three-digit numbering on Detective

Comics and Action Comics was particularly well received, selling much better than they did as part of the New 52, and holding their sales levels even after the rest of the line began to drop.

Lower print runs for the earliest issues of Rebirth quickly led to increased values.

DC improved their shipping reliability, but they weren't perfect. Dark Knight III: Master Race often had long gaps between issues. But that series was outside normal continuity, unlike Marvel's major crossover event for 2016.

Marvel had major problems getting Civil War II to market, which fit their pattern of stellar starts which fizzle at the finish.

The fact that the effectiveness of major crossover events have run their course was clearly illustrated in 2016 by the way that DC solidly outsold Marvel during Civil War II's limp into a finale. Sales did hold steady throughout the core series' sporadic run, but all of the spin-offs sold in paltry numbers and the crossovers caused no bump in sales. The books that suffered the most were the relaunched.

The same as they did with Secret Wars in 2015, Marvel did not delay titles intended to follow the events in Civil War II and shipped them out of sequence. Confusion once again killed enthusiasm, continuing Marvel's pattern of doing reboots where the sales levels soon drop lower than that of the previous series.

As they do every year -- what new titles sell best new on store shelves influences what sells out of the back issue bins, with added fuel from the fires of desire kindled by movies and television.

Our top dollar book of the year was the 1st appearance of Thor in Journey Into Mystery #83 in good for $1300. The movie X-Men: Apocalypse certainly influenced the sale of

The DC Rebirth return of Action Comics and Detective Comics to their original numbering was well received.

Strange Tales (v1) #128 featuring Quicksilver and Scarlet Witch in VF+ for $195. The first movie appearance of the Black Panther in the Captain America: Civil War movie caused a run on his back issues. The Black Panther's first appearance in Fantastic Four #52 sold 2 copies in VG+ for $175 each, and another in FN- for $225. Other key Fantastic Four sales featured the origin and 1st appearance of the Inhumans in issue #45 for $250 in VG+, and the origin and 1st appearances of Galactus and the Silver Surfer in #48 for $175 in FN-. The very first series of Doctor Strange, which picked up the numbering from Strange Tales, was hot. Issues #170 through #181 all sold in ranges from VG+ to FN+ for prices between $16 and $19 each.

Sgt. Fury #13, featuring an appearance by Captain America and Bucky, sold in FN- for $110. Tales to Astonish (v1) #49, featuring the 1st appearance of Giant Man, sold for $80 in VG-. The villain connecting many of the Marvel movies is Thanos, whose first appearance in Iron Man (v1) #55 sold in Fair condition for $55. The 1st appearance of Deadpool in New Mutants #98 sold in VF+ for $140. Anticipation of Legion's upcoming TV appearance sold multiple copies of New Mutants #26 in VF+ for $18 each. Marvel's Star Wars from the '70s were especially hot at values between $10 and $26. We also sold typically large numbers of mid-range Amazing Spider-Man and X-Men comics.

While the Suicide Squad movie outperformed Batman V. Superman in theaters, all of these characters' comics were hot. A variant of the first series of Suicide Squad #1 sold in VF/NM for $125, while 3 different copies of the New 52 Suicide Squad sold in VG/NM for prices ranging from $75 upward to $125. A double-covered copy of Superman (v1) #61 in FN, with the outer cover signed by Shuster, sold for $542. Batman (v1) #17 sold in VG+ for $600, while the more modern Batman Adventures #12, with the first appearance of Harley Quinn, sold in VG+ for $187. The New 52 Batman #1 sold in VG- for $75. Sold a large number of Silver Age Batman, with the top sellers being issue #145 with a Joker cover and story in FN for $85, and issue #232 featuring Neal Adams' debut of Ra's al Ghul for $54 in VG+. Aquaman (v1) #1 sold in VG+ for $300. Justice League of America (v1) #1 sold in Fair condition for $230. The origin of the JLA in issue #9 sold in VG+ for $120. The Golden Age All Star Comics #33, with a Solomon Grundy appearance, sold in GD- for $100.

The television show DC's Legends of Tomorrow influenced the sales of Atom #1 in VG+ for $216, the 3rd appearance of the Atom in Showcase #36 in VG+ for $95, and Hawkman (v1) #1 with the origin and 1st appearance of Zatanna in VG for $150. The 2nd appearance of Supergirl in Action Comics #253 sold in GD- for $45.

The popularity of the TV series The Walking Dead has kept back issue sales of the comic series brisk. The problem is that everyone is buying and no one is selling, making older inventory scarce. Our top dollar sale was the 1st appearance of Jesus in #92 in NM for $65. I've seen this pattern before, where collectors hoard their copies in expectation of an eternal upward rise in value. What happens is once demand slows everyone starts selling at once and the values crash. But right now, while the show is still airing, demand is strong.

Of course, not all back issues sales were media influenced. We sold many comics to readers simply looking to recapture the good fun that they once enjoyed. Marge's Little Lulu & Tubby at Summer Camp #1 sold in VF- for $175. We sold a bunch of mid-range Marge's Little Lulu in prices ranging from $12 to $34 each. The first appearance of Bozo the Clown in Four Color #285 sold in VG for $90. The scarce Conan the Barbarian (v1) #3 sold in VF+ for $95. The 2nd appearance of Judy of the Jungle in Exciting Comics #56 sold for $100 in VG. Marvel's Golden Age Human Torch #32, which includes appearances by Sun Girl and Namora, sold in VG for $300. Metal Men (v1) #1 sold in VG+ for $90. Ozzie & Harriet #1 sold in FN for $140. Printing enhancements were done on this photo cover, with bright blue dots added to their eyes that made the actors look slightly freakish. Looking at this cover closely, you could almost hear the musical rift from the shower scene in the movie Psycho.

We sold a run of the Golden Age era Picture News, with #1 going in FN+ for $140, and issues #2, #3, #6, and #7 all going for $100 each in FN+. This interesting series featured a number of illustrated news stories ranging from the future Queen of England working as an auto mechanic during WWII to Joe Lewis' battle for boxing supremacy and a youthful Frank Sinatra's public exploits. Planet Comics #42 sold in VG+ for $125. Reptilicus #2 sold in FN+ for $40. X-Mas Comics #7, a very early example of cover enhancements with a green felt stocking printed on the cover, sold in VG- for $140.

TED VANLIEW SUPERWORLD COMICS

Comic books still seem to be regarded as the coolest collectible these days. Remember when we were an underground secret society? And it was our badge of shame. Ha Ha. Now we've taken over popular culture. Who could have known?

There's something about comic books that stir a true enduring passion in the hearts of bibliophiles and folks with the collector gene, more so than most other collectibles. We're even getting flocks of women of all ages involved in the hobby, be it Cosplay, Collecting, or Creating. I remember when I couldn't think of a single female at my school who had any known interest in comics or fantasy, or would admit to it, at least. Now, it seems to be de rigueur to be at least aware of the field, which is great!

The success and high profile of the comic related movies continues to help raise the profile of the hobby, and helps make the mainstream aware of our little slice of the world.

It seems to me that the current market can be divided into 5 main segments:

- 1) The high end, big ticket, scarce, and hard to find high grade goodies, which appeal to the investors, most of whom are pretty knowledgeable about the comic market, but also many who are looking for a fun and very profitable place to park their disposable income. The returns on the high end stuff have been pretty sensational for quite a few years now, even resisting the enormous economic downturn that began in '08.

2) The Collector/Investor stratus, who I would consider "mid-level." They like to find either semi-affordable key books or high grade copies of good titles. They might not be able to reach for an Incredible Hulk #1 in 8.0 or Captain America Comics #6 in 8.5 or the like, but will snag an Avengers #3 in 8.5, Fantastic Four #52 9.0, or Batman #23 in 8.0, to pick a few random examples.

3) The Collectors, who want to have nice quality books, but will settle for the ones that don't get into the stratosphere pricewise. For example, maybe Flash #123 VG/FN, or Amazing Spider-Man #20 in VF, Weird Tales of the Future #2 in Good+, or something like that.

4) The Collector/Readers, who just want to get cool vintage books at a good price or a great deal. They'll build runs, which seems to be a bit of a lost art in the investor quarters, and will buy lower to mid-grade copies, which can often be had at really favorable prices. For example, they might build a run of a long running title in Good to Fine condition, depending on what they find.

5) Folks who just want cheap books to read or collect. These collectors will be seen at a show digging through dollar boxes, or maybe deep discount boxes, or maybe collect modern era books (1980s to present) that are very inexpensive.

It seems that there are more cover chasers than ever, especially in the vintage market. Now that we can see what almost any book looks like on the internet with great sites like Grand Comics Database, we can see which covers are outstanding.

I've noticed that especially with Golden Age books, if you look at two consecutive issues, one will be in much higher demand because of how striking the cover is. Take, for example, Journey into Unknown Worlds from Atlas, issue #12 & 13. Issue #12 sells ok, but #13 sells instantly for a higher price since it has a striking Bill Everett cover. Not that there's anything wrong with that!

Platinum Age: Platinum Age books are a bit of a mine-field, as most are genuinely scarce to rare, but some are high demand, but many tend to get overlooked because they pre-date Superheroes, Horror, and Science Fiction in comics.

For example, New Fun Comics are very rare, the first DC title, and are very sought after. Ditto for early Chesler/Centaur comics. On the other hand, a lot of the humor strip titles have fallen on harder times, such as Tip Top, King Comics, and so forth. We have seen a bit of a resurgence in interest in these if they turn up in decent shape, probably because they're so hard to find, and are famous titles.

Golden Age: There is a core of super popular items in the Golden Age, along with reams of books that are good, but not as well known or loved.

The mainstream and secondary Timely and DC titles can always be counted on to sell well, along with various rarities with great covers. Better/Nedors are good, along with Centaurs, Fox, some Ace, some early Quality, and some other publishers who are a bit lesser known. On the other hand, Fawcetts, with some exceptions, get no respect. Neither do Quality titles after a certain early period. Both publishers' books often had better art within the books than Timely or Nedor, but the covers are bland by comparison. Prize Pubs, Speed, Harvey, MLJ all are in high demand, while Dells and Classics are pretty croaked off. Again, there are some exceptions. Some Walt Disney Comics and Stories, Famous Funnies, and Four Colors are good, but the majority are slow in the market.

One of the fun aspects of searching out Golden Age comics is that there are SO many rarities or lesser known books that are amazingly cool, such as Flying Jenny #2, which sports a great Matt Baker cover and an unusual color scheme. There are hundreds more like that. My advice is to dig, dig, dig, and lots of these books are relative bargains. Front Page Comic Book, which is a one shot from 1944, has the first (unacknowledged) horror cover, to the best of my knowledge. So, while the first acknowledged horror comic, Eerie #1 from 1947, is a very (deservedly) pricey book, you can find a copy of FPCB for a fraction of the price.

Many collectors are looking for either classic covers, covers by certain noteworthy artists, or just lesser known great covers. Schomburg, LB Cole, Kirby, Simon, Lou Fine, Eisner, and Everett are a few of the consistently great artists of the Golden Age. There are many, many great covers by these artists, such as Terrific #5 by Schomburg, which we were fortunate to find a nice copy of. That reminds me of another trend that is enduringly popular: Bondage covers, especially with women in distress. I think this appeals to both our prurient interest and subconscious desire to rescue a damsel. Daredevil Comics #11 is one of my favorites in this category. Artist Charlie Biro adds a touch of humor to the situation, as you see a woman in the foreground whose feet are being tickled by a feather held by a repulsive deformed hunchbacked monster. The expression on her face is perfectly drawn to show the combination of tickle and pain in her facial expression. It's almost an afterthought that DD is approaching from the back of the dungeon to rescue her.

WW2 covers can also be counted on to be of primary interest to collectors. Some are better in concept and rendering than others, but the good ones can be dazzling and very exciting. It's widely accepted that they depict attitudes that were prevalent during the last 'good' war, and depicted scenarios from the first war that we were involved in while comics existed.

Atomic Age: Often, we tend to categorize this era (late '40s to mid '50s) as part of the Golden Age still, but I will say a few words about it. There are a lot of especially tough to find books in this time period, probably because print runs were down, and the pogrom against comic books occurred during this time. Marvel/Atlas nearly went under because of declining readership, and many other publishers didn't make it.

The more extreme Horror or far out and stylish Science Fiction titles lead the way. Titles like Gilmore's Weird Mysteries, many Atlas titles, Weird Tales of the Future, and many Avon titles are always sought after. Avon One Shots have all but evaporated, especially in solid grades. ECs, which were the leading lights of the era, are more plentiful, probably since there was such a focused fan base, and Publisher William Gaines was terrific at figuring out what the youngsters would like. They also paid better than the others, and attracted the top talent. They've also been reprinted many times. Consequently, they're a bit slower to sell, since they're more available.

DC Superhero titles from this period are pursued avidly, and finding them in superior grades is really tough! Atlas' short lived Superhero revival issues are also very popular, as they only lasted a few months, and are in short supply.

Silver Age: Well, still the core of the collecting/investing industry. The Baby Boomers came of age during this era, so we are very attached to these books and stories and characters. While there were many talented and productive writers and artists who were in peak form during this period, I believe it was the singular genius of Jack 'King' Kirby that is most responsible for the explosive interest in this period. So many of the characters who emerged, and the stories, and even the style of the storytelling, were the product of Kirby's fevered imagination. And, never has there been a more prolific artist in comics. If you look at the movies that have become a multi-billion dollar industry, the majority of the characters were created by this one man, and fleshed out with the help of Stan Lee.

The Marvels continue to be the flagship titles of the era, while the DC titles seem to wax and wane in popularity. The other publishers of the era, while collectible, recede into the background somewhat.

DC came first though, as they are credited with resurrecting the superhero genre in 1956 with the advent of the Flash in Showcase #4, then others, culminating in the excitement generated by the first major Silver Age superhero team, the Justice League in 1960. So, many earlier SA DCs are very collectible. Marvel didn't even get back into the superhero game until late in 1961.

In DC World, issues from the 1950s through 1961 or so, are pretty scarce, and very tough to locate in higher grade.

In Marvel World, issues from Fantastic Four #1 in 10/61 up into 1964 are a lot scarcer than the ones after that, esp. in higher grades.

For example, Batman #121 is almost impossible to find in anything above VG+, while Batman issues in the #180s are not so hard to find in VF or better, and Hulk #2 is a toughie, while Hulk #102 is not so tough.

Whenever we get any Marvel in genuinely high grade from the Pre-Hero issues throughout the 1960's, they are quick to sell, but anything from 1964 and earlier in high grade, guys are climbing over each other to get to.

With DC, it's a bit hit or miss, although they're much scarcer than the Marvels. Any good key book in high grade is a goner in record time, as are the earlier era books.

Bronze Age: Bronze era books (1970 to 1980ish) are a growth segment, and are still plentiful, since print runs were increased, and many more titles hit the market. Collectors and speculators were sometimes saving multiple copies and storing the books to keep them in top shape. Of course, there's a steady supply of well read mid to lower grade copies as well.

Most major titles continued their runs in the 1970s, and zillions of new titles were launched, either in their own titles or in anthology titles, such as Marvel Spotlight, DC Comics Presents, and many, many other Marvel "So and So" and DC "So and So" titles.

Some of the books that are always going to sell quickly when we get them in almost any grade are: Hulk #181, Amazing Spider-Man #129, Marvel Spotlight #5, Marvel Premiere #15, Hero For Hire #1, Iron Man #55, Iron Fist #14, G-S X-Men #1, Werewolf by Night #32, Green Lantern #76, 85, 87, Batman #222, 227, 232, 251, Detective #400, 411, and almost any issue by Neal Adams from the era.

The early 1970s is when Marvel and DC began launching more Black and female primary characters, and with demographic changes in the country and the comic industry over the years, these are increasing in popularity.

The early appearances of any character who's appearing in a movie or TV show will take off like a rocket, as the speculation impulse ramps up into gear. Some of them will settle down after a while, but some remain firecracker hot!

It seems the line of demarcation for any scarcity is sometime in 1974 or so. Books published after that seem to be extremely plentiful, and we're constantly offered collections that begin in that era.

However, there is increasing demand for many books from the later '70s and into the early '80s, which is great. It's nice to see appreciation for many of these books that have lain dormant for years.

Modern/Copper Age: Well, for most of the time we've been in business, we pretty much ignored books from the '80s onward, except for reading material. But, to our surprise, there's growth in this era as well, especially in books related to movies and TV shows. That's not the whole story though, as even books that aren't necessarily all that expensive are in increasing demand. Who'da thunk it?

There are a small amount of scarce books, since this was the time of the indie explosion. These indies had lower print runs in early issues, as the creators didn't know if they'd find an audience yet. Books like Teenage Mutant Ninja Turtles #1, 2, 3 (1st Print – important), Cerebus #1, Albedo #2 (first Usagi Yojimbo), and a few others are in very short supply.

Others have taken on unanticipated value, led by Batman Adventures #12 (1st Harley Quinn) and Walking Dead #1, which can get into the hundreds, or even thousands, of dollars in highest grades. New Mutants #87 (1st Cable), #98 (1st Deadpool), Marvel Superheroes Winter Special #8 (1st Squirrel Girl), NYX #3, X-23 #1 (both X-23, Wolverine's daughter), Amazing Spider-Man #300 (enduringly popular), X-Men #266 (1st Gambit), and many others, too numerous to mention.

There's plenty we haven't touched on, but don't want to be long winded, and will fill you all in next time out. Happy Collecting, Ted VL.

HARLEY YEE HARLEY YEE RARE COMICS

The 2016 market had one of the best years in the industry. With the announcements of a big slate of DC movies, the DC Silver and Bronze Age markets were energized to heights not seen in many years. This has also brought more attention to the DC Golden Age markets for titles such as All Star, Sensation and Wonder Woman. With the always popular Marvel Silver and Bronze Age, this combination is moving the market to new heights.

In the Golden Age market, new players that before had maybe tended to only collect Marvel or DC have started to hone in on this market going into the Timely, Atlas, Good Girl, Horror, early Fox and MLJs. This trend should continue with the CGC and CBCS forums allowing collectors to post their new gems and getting others excited to post their own new gems.

The 2017 market should continue these trends. The increasingly important foreign market should see to that with an almost unlimited growth potential at this time.

VINCENT ZURZOLO - METROPOLIS COLLECTIBLES AND COMICCONNECT.COM

It's that time of year again. Simply amazing. Where did the time go? I have vivid recollections of writing my first market report. I think it was 23 years ago. I was so excited I didn't know what to write about first. The market has grown beyond my wildest dreams. Not only in terms of dollar figures but in terms of the acceptance of comic books as a respected art form. I believe there is still plenty of growth ahead of us.

Thinking back about how much has changed in the comic market and for Metropolis and ComicConnect over that period of time is profound. The last 23 years have seen some major changes. The comic implosion, the advent of the Internet, cell phones, eBay, the Vincent's Collectibles (my original company) and Metropolis Collectibles merger, the beginning of CGC, the start of ComicConnect, the beginning of the Marvel Movie Explosion, the first million-dollar comic sale and the half dozen or so other seven-figure sales we've made since then. One can easily see how the vintage comic collecting and investing market has evolved.

The past year has been very strong. Big keys are selling very well. Private sales and auctions are both doing incredibly well. Convention sales have picked up. Gallery sales are strong. If I had to point to one thing I've noticed getting stronger it would be the rare and esoteric vintage comic market. I am referring to titles like Amazing Man, Bouncer, Champ, Crime Mysteries, Exciting, Fantastic, Feature, Funny Pages, Future, Ghost, Lucky, Prize,

Startling, True to Life Romances, Wonder, Wonderworld, and Zip. As the prices of keys like Action #1, Detective #27 as well as Superman #1, Batman #1, Marvel #1 and Captain America #1 continue to soar, more affordable "secondary keys" are looking very appealing. All Star #3, More Fun #52, Sub-Mariner #1, and Human Torch #2 (1) are all starting to tick up. If you are thinking about buying a key Golden Age comic, buy it now before the price goes up. Golden Age sales of note include

Captain America Comics #1 CGC 8.0 $288,000, Detective #31 CGC 4.0 $90,000, Superman #1 CGC 1.5 $85,000, and Batman #1 2.5 $64,000.

Sales of Hulk #1 CGC 9.2 $375,000

(record), Amazing Fantasy #15 9.0 $237,000, Journey into Mystery #83 CGC 9.4 $210,000 and Fantastic Four #1 CGC 8.5 $65,000 show that the Silver Age market is still robust with tremendous interest.

Bronze Age keys like Hulk #181, Giant-Size X-Men #1, House of Secrets #92, and Green Lantern #76 are still being scooped up as fast as we can get them in. Copper Age and Modern Age comics are as well. The market is humming.

I expect this trend to continue throughout 2017. The new crop of superhero movies and TV shows will help propel characters' first appearances to higher levels as well.

My best advice is to put your want list together and focus on it. Don't get distracted. Focus and have fun!

FRANK CWIKLIK - METROPOLIS COLLECTIBLES

You know, I hate using the term "think outside the box," as it's become such a cliché. Unfortunately, I have no other way to describe how comic dealers and collectors must think in this brave new world of vintage comic collecting and selling — you gotta think outside the box.

First, let's define "the box": the old methods, the tried and true, convention deals and phone call sales and occasional big sales online or to clients you may have met through a guy who knows a guy who knows a guy. Trucking boxes of stuff across state lines to swap meets and little sci-fi cons. This has been the nature of the business for nearly four decades, and, no getting around it, it worked for a very long time, and still works today to some extent.

But the rapidly changing face of the average con-goer, the radical shift in how the internet is used by everyday buyers and casual collectors alike, and the increasing demand for the high-octane auction model in nearly every facet of the comic business has necessitated a sea change in how we view our business, and the future of the business in general. Some of this means, sadly, letting go of old ways of doing things, some of this means exciting new fields and opportunities, and all of it is thanks to the continued, seemingly unstoppable growth of this business.

Conventions: On the plus side, even more people crowded into convention halls this year than the year before, with the most notable being the upsurge at the London SuperCon (so much so, in fact, that they've expanded to a 3-day show this year – well done, guys!), and the rather startling fact that the New York ComicCon is now the biggest comic convention in the world, both in terms of attendance and floor space. We did notice a drop in floor traffic at the gold standard, the San Diego ComicCon, but that's likely to do with their adoption of the tap in tap out door policy, which put the kibosh on badge swapping and door cheats. Both Chicago cons seemed to enjoy about the same attendance, which is nothing to sniff at, as both shows do very, very well.

But – and this is a big but – once again, the actual sales on the floor were erratic, hard-fought, and sometimes flat-out dismal. Most show dealers have cheap box stock to fall back on, and many of our colleagues I spoke to admitted that most of their sales were in less expensive inventory and blow-out books. Without those books crowding the tables, I don't know how much money actually would have changed hands at these shows, and even the bigger-ticket sales from our booth and others were often pre-arranged deals, books brought by request, or pieces that were going to sell easily either at the show or after it. I really believe the days when a whale would come in and drop money on a Batman #1 or Captain America Comics #46 out of the clear blue sky are kinda done.

Another but! That doesn't mean the business is drying up at all – there are two factors at play here. One, the conventions are no longer marketed to deep-pocket buyers, hardcore collectors, or vintage enthusiasts. They're the new shopping malls, with crowds of teens and college-age kids, families out for a day of excitement, older folks reminiscing – in short, not a lot of deep pockets. These folks are delighted with a chance to meet Norman Reedus, take a selfie with the Batmobile, and meet cosplayers; in short, not exactly our clientele. The other factor at play is one that should actually make anyone in this business light up a cigar and smile: we've graduated. A couple of years ago, a Batman #1 was a gateway key, relatively inexpensive and easy to find. Now, it's a new grail book, out of reach of most of the folks who crawl the expo halls taking photos of guys dressed as Wolverine.

We've boldly redesigned our booth at the two big shows to reflect this, and have created a kind of museum of comics, with gleaming display cases and a wide-open exhibition-style area. This has worked wonders, generating much attention, and attracting those potential clients to our area with its professionalism, dynamic look, and open spaces. It was a gamble, but we've racked up some impressive numbers at the past few bigger shows as a result. As we're not really show dealers, and therefore don't really have the resources to prep hundreds of boxes of cheap moderns and cut-price Bronze comics, we rely on those dozen or so serious sales to get our numbers up. In addition, cons have become like PR machines for us, or trend-setters. We've actually met several clients over the past few years who came to the booth with stars in their eyes looking at the sparkly museum layout, unable to buy, but then calling us after time passed and money came in, ready to start their journey into Golden Age classics or high-grade Silver keys.

The Web and Social Media: Saying "I don't go online" in 2016 is like someone saying "I don't have a telephone" in the 1980s. The web dominates every aspect of our lives, for better or worse. The most encouraging aspect of social media and the internet in recent years has been the ability of every collector, seasoned or novice, to have the entire knowledge of the comic-collecting market and the history of the medium at their fingertips in seconds. New buyers come into this hobby armed with knowledge and confidence, which sounds intimidating for a dealer, but is a real blessing. Folks know exactly what they want, are smart and precise about their purchases, and need far less handholding and hard-sells than they used to. I am personally delighted by this, as it makes it far easier for us to know what to buy, what to market, and what our client base wants and needs, rather than guessing at trends or throwing out the same half-dozen keys and hoping they'll sell. Conversely, it's a little harder to convince collectors of the real worth of their comics. Too often, I have folks coming to our offices with stacks of mid-grade Bronze filler thinking they've struck it rich because they saw an eBay listing for a 9.8 Spider-Man key for thousands of dollars, and then assume their off-grade off-keys are worth at least half that much. It's tough talking people down from that, and we sometimes have to temper the expectations of consignors who might have out-sized predictions for their comics, but the upside is that folks are doing their research and, as a result, rarer and more unusual comics that might have been neglected are now selling very well to buyers who are wisely boning up on census notes and other factoids and cannily plotting out their buying habits. There's a store that was open for decades here in NYC that had the motto "An educated consumer is our best customer", and we've been finding that to be true!

However, the scattershot approach that most social media affords, and the brutally short attention span of most people in the Twitter age, offers a challenge for our business.

We have still to work out how to reach our very specific customer base – not the folks who are already buying, but the new collectors, the next generation of vintage buyers, rather than spamming Facebook accounts with covers and trivia.

Brandon Peck, our Sales Executive, has been doing heroic work trying to navigate our social media account, which he's been updating with info on new collections and gallery openings. I don't pretend to know how this will factor in for our sales in future, as the nature of life on the web changes almost daily, but it's a very important tool and we've been wracking our brains trying to work out exactly how to make it fit with our insanely specific subset of a very specialized business. In addition, we've been hard at work for over a year on a complete and exhaustive overhaul of both our websites, and even our inventory software, to allow for greater flexibility for us and greater search options and customization for our buyers. I think if even half the blue-sky ideas we've been developing come to fruition, all our buyers and sellers will be blown away by the new sites and will be delighted by the change. I know it's been some time in coming, but it will be very much worth the wait, I can guarantee it.

Galleries: Our move to our Herald Square location has been one of the best things we've done for the business in years, allowing us double the space for our ever-growing stock and ever-expanding staff, and also allowing us to create every comic nerd's dream, a beautiful gallery dedicated solely to the comic art form. Our initial experiments with the gallery were all roaring successes, with exhibitions of work from Frank Frazetta, the Brothers Hildebrandt, the art of Star Wars, and others, with visits from illustrious artists and legends such as Neal Adams, Frank Miller, Mike Kaluta, Joe Giella, John Cassaday, and even R2-D2! (Seriously, we have photos, it was awesome.) We couldn't be happier with the caliber of artists we've had the honor of working with, and have been delighted to share both their work, and the permanent Metropolis art collection, with the comic collecting community as a whole. The only downside was the immense difficulty in scheduling regular shows for the gallery, as juggling artists' schedules, the availability of art, conventions, etc, made for gaps in our calendar that couldn't be helped, but were nevertheless frustrating.

Luckily, this year will see the installation of a new, permanent gallery of comic art for sale, with a standing exhibit of our top 100 or so pages and covers on display year round, open to the general public, when our special Event Exhibits are not scheduled. Having a permanent gallery available to the public should encourage repeat attendance and generate a new clientele for both comic art and vintage comics, as well as allow New Yorkers and tourists alike the chance to see classic comic art pages they may have otherwise never have been able to see in person. I, personally, am truly excited for this next step in our ongoing evolution and think it will be an enormous boon not just for us but for the industry as a whole, and I invite you all, when in NYC, to stop by the Metropolis Gallery at 36 West 37th St, 6th Floor, to experience the art of comics for yourself. The gallery is open to the public Tuesday through Friday from 10:30 AM to 5 PM, and special exhibits will be listed on the metropolismetropolisnyc.com website.

This is the kind of – sorry – “outside the box” thinking that truly excites us. So much of the growth of the comic business has been as a result of these bold new ideas, that weren't even on anyone's radar as recently as 10 years ago (social media, curating con booths as museums, gallery spaces), or that were niche sectors of the market rather than driving forces (the auction model, internet sales, online price guides and research tools). It's the crazy ideas, the risky ventures, keeping an eye on tomorrow, that will propel this business further. 2016 was the strongest year we've yet had, and you'll note I haven't gone into dry recitations of sales and trivia – that's because so much of what made our year great was the people, the enthusiasm, the passion, the drive of not just our team but the collecting community as a whole. If the million-dollar comic book sales were our coming out party, this is our mature period, our chance to shine, to lead, to move forward. I foresee very big things for the vintage comic market, regardless of how well hero movies or conventions may do. All of the growth will now result from us, and our efforts, and our ability to grow our business beyond the convention halls and swap meets, and into a wider, better, stronger world. The sky is the limit, and it's my hope that our efforts will grow the market not just for us, but for all the fine folks who toil away in this demanding but rewarding business, and all the old hands and newcomers falling in love with this uniquely American art form.

ROB REYNOLDS - COMICCONNECT.COM

We've never had to work this hard before. I'm not complaining. It's a sobering fact but it's also the reason why ComicConnect is so successful, Guinness World Record successful. Brokering the world's most-valuable comic books and comic book art should be hard work, and I work harder than anyone. Funny books are a very serious business, and it's a difficult chore turning over stone after stone (after stone) until you finally get the call or email you've been waiting for and your next auction is set. I've handled thousands of client phone calls, and I've sent over a million emails since the last market report was published. With four multi-million dollar auctions on the schedule every year, the hours are long and the grind is daily. I love it so damn much.

While the good old days weren't always good, you were at least able to pay thirty-five cents on the dollar on a deal and everyone walked away satisfied. Now, more than ever, convention dealers and comic shop owners alike lament that “everybody's a dealer.” Comic sellers are asking retail while buyers are asking for huge discounts. Nearly every seller's phone call comes with the caveat that they want to make as much as they possibly can from the sale of their comics. The best part is, I want the same thing too, and ComicConnect was created to bring everyone together. As the Director of Consignments, I create thousands of short and long-term partnerships with clients from around the world and my only job is to sell their comic books for as much as I am able. It's a true pleasure to get to know my clients, often personally, either via convention trips or through client visits to our gallery in midtown Manhattan.

With geek chic at its peak, the ignorant comic book seller is now extinct. Folks now know what their comics are worth and they simply won't settle for less than maximum value. ComicConnect was created to help sellers achieve just that goal. It's a thrill to get the chance to add a rare or one-of-a-kind comic to an auction and watch bidders with means and determination fight it out until the hammer drops. I'm proud to represent the best comics to the best buyers in the business.

In December of 2016, ComicConnect auctioned the collection of Marc Lasry, hedge fund billionaire and co-owner of the NBA's Milwaukee Bucks. Highlights of the collection included the Larson Copy of Batman #1 CGC 8.0, a run of early Action Comics, and a near complete run of Superboy. The highest-graded copies of Wonder Woman #1 CGC 9.0 and Wonder Woman #2 CGC 9.4 were some of the coolest comics we've ever sold, the pair were auctioned with an extremely rare collection of original promotional documents sent with Wonder Woman #1 to Harper's Magazine, including: the cover letter to Harper's editorial staff signed by associate editor Alice Marble; a copy of the original press release promoting the Amazon Princess' first solo issue; a copy of Wonder Woman creator William Moulton Marston's Women:

Servants For Civilization; and a press-ready photo of Marble perusing the first issue of Wonder Woman, along with a sample Business Reply Card used for readers to suggest Wonder Women of History for the title's text section.

The Marc Lasry Collection reaped a number of new record sales from its 1,251 lots and was instrumental in crafting the largest auction in ComicConnect's ten-year history. Pre-Robin Detectives and Joker covers are the caviar books for Batman collectors, Church copy prices from all publishers remain strong, while Schomburg Hitler covers are the primary drivers of Timely sales and prices.

Top Golden Age and rarity sales this year: A coverless Action Comics #1 missing the first wrap sold for $37,666, Action Comics #7 CGC 1.8 $50,000, All Star Comics #8 CGC 5.5 $69,001, Batman #1 CGC 4.5 $129,000, two restored copies of Batman #1 in FN condition averaged $25,000, Captain America Comics #1 CBCS 9.4 R $34,000, Detective Comics #1 CGC 4.5 $26,000, Detective Comics #29 CGC 1.5 $30,029, Detective Comics #31 CGC 1.0 $43,505, Human Torch #12 CGC 8.5 $14,823, Pep Comics #22 CBCS 5.0 $72,000, Spitfire Comics #133 CGC 9.8 $15,200 (50X Guide), Superman #17 CGC 9.4 $50,000, and Uncle Sam #1 CGC 9.6 $16,977.

Top 2016 Silver, Bronze, and Modern Sales: Amazing Fantasy #15 CGC 6.5 $51,070, Amazing Fantasy

#15 CGC 7.0 $65,000, Daredevil #1 CGC 9.4 $18,000, Fantastic Four #1 CGC 9.0 $132,000, Fantastic Four #1 CGC 8.5 $65,000, Fantastic Four #5 CGC 9.4 $45,000, Incredible Hulk #1 CGC 7.5 (Pence) $40,157, Journey into Mystery #83 CGC 9.4 $210,000, Showcase #4 CGC 4.5 $19,500, Tales of Suspense #39 CGC 9.4 $95,000, Tales to Astonish #27 CGC 8.5 Stan Lee Signature Series $24,500, Tales to Astonish #35 CGC 9.2 $28,400, Wolverine #1 CGC 10.0 $17,644, and X-Men #1 CGC 8.5 $20,151.

Our original art market is thriving and some of that success is owed directly to the introduction of our Metropolis Gallery. As new art buyers get acquainted to us through our Manhattan gallery, they often translate into new bidders in our auctions and buyers in our fixed-price marketplace. ComicConnect brokered the sale of Frank Frazetta's Spiderman painting for over a quarter-million dollars. Shortly after, we sold the ultra-patriotic Fred Ray cover to Superman #12 for $100,000 which depicts the Man of Steel marching off to war with a pair of real-life superheroes. For zombie fans, Tony Moore's page 2 from Walking Dead #2 sold for $14,050. Artists interested in adding pieces to our gallery or to present an entire show simply need to contact Vincent Zurzolo at our office. You can find our ads and contact information throughout the Price Guide.

For the investment comic market, you need to buy as many copies of Amazing Fantasy #15 as you can get your hands on, and hang on to them. There's thousands of them out there and millions of buyers are clamoring for them. Batman #1 and Superman #1 have become some of the most-desirable comics on the planet as Detective Comics #27 and Action Comics #1 have come to market with increasingly less frequency, thereby driving their prices past the reach of even many of our well-heeled collectors. On that note, pick up Amazing Spider-Man #1 too as they are still relatively cheap and I expect the book to trend upward similarly as Amazing Fantasy #15s get priced up in the marketplace.

The impact of even minor comic book characters' TV and movie appearances is still dominating auction headlines in regards to the speculation market's prices. Netflix is single-handedly driving Marvel back-issue prices to record highs. On the DC side, Wonder Woman is still under-valued but that won't be the case for very long. There's still a short time left to snatch up runs of Sensation and Wonder Woman before their prices catch up with Action and Detective.

I'm here to work hard for you, and it's always my pleasure to assist buyers and sellers with some of the world's most-valuable collectibles. Please don't hesitate to find one of our ads and put us to work. We love taking on challenging projects so give us a call and find out how we can help you.

THE WAR REPORT

by Matt Ballesteros & the War Correspondents
(Andy Greenham and Mick Rabin)

This is the ninth iteration of an independently developed report on war comics by avid aficionados of the genre. Through the Overstreet vehicle we share (for both our own indulgence and for the enjoyment of the general collecting hobby) our thoughts and conjecture on the war comic segment. For more information on how we came to be and what methodologies we apply to our findings and conclusions, pick up any of the last eight issues of Overstreet.

Regrettably, this year's report will be a bit shorter than usual, as our various personal careers have delayed our forward progress in 2017 (e.g. see dreadnought.com). Nevertheless, we intend to reinforce our efforts for the 10th anniversary to make up for this truncated submission. That said, we provide here a brief assessment of the market, a short finding or two, and the Top War comic rankings for each of the main comic ages.

News from the Front Field Report

Steady as she goes! The latter half of 2016 and first half of 2017 saw war comics holding at relatively the same forward line established in the last couple of years. Consequently, it also experienced nearly the same amount of action. High-grade war from any publisher is snapped up almost immediately, commanding gradually better and better prices. Low to mid-grade war comics (those at 4.0 or less in grade) are being purchased, but at the same modest prices set in the last three to four years. No surprise there, but worth noting. As we have suggested in the most recent reports, this is a good time to get your hands on great swaths of low-grade war, particularly if you are looking to complete collections or trying your hand at the genre as those are readily available in abundance. Low-grade or not, a cornucopia of great stories and amazing art exists within war comics published for you to enjoy, especially between 1956 and 1971. Go get 'em!

On the high-grade side, there are few sales to speak of given that most high-grade war books are tucked away in private collections and rarely see the light of day. This, coupled with the fact that very, very few high-grade war comics exist in the first instance means that rarity is a driving factor in the engagement of war comic collecting. With scant high-grade copies available, the demand is high and the acquisition is low. Attainment of said specimens is thus a true achievement in the war comic segment—garnering both praise and envy amongst the avid war collecting community. Here are some highlights of the 2016-2017 year.

Golden Age War continues to grow in popularity. Existing Fiction House collectors, the heady growth of Don Winslow interest, and collectors attempting to complete a Wings run are all collectively placing lesser known Golden Age titles in the spotlight. Good examples of this are Bill Barnes, Boy Commandos, Contact Comics, U.S. Marines (and so on), which all continue to sell regardless of issue number. The market price on these is rather friendly by the way, as most available are in less than a 4.0 grade. Key sales: Bill Barnes #1

CGC 7.0 (1st issue of Air Ace title) – over $550. Contact Comics #2 CGC 6.5 – over $450.

Don Winslow is not losing any nautical speed, as he's seeing action throughout any title that he's appearing in. For those of you who haven't read our reports in the past, Don Winslow represents what we believe is the first contiguous war comic character in the hobby (albeit classified as a war "adventure" character), his first appearance in Popular Comics #1 dates back, even before Superman, to 1936.

Key sales: Don Winslow of the Navy #1 CGC 7.0 (1937, 1st solo book) – over $1300. Don Winslow of the Navy #3 (1943) in CGC 9.2 (Mile High) – over $1600.

Wings remains aloft across its entire 124 issue run. Issues in mid or low-grade are downright attainable. You may, however, have to engage in a skirmish with your Fiction House completists, so, be prepared to pay a little more for Wings Comics (and Fight Comics) that present well in lower grades. Key sales: Wings #1 CGC 7.5 – over $1350. Wings #3 CGC 7.0 – over $350.

EC War's singular titles Two Fisted Tales and Frontline Combat continue to command attention across the line. While EC war seems to sell in any grade, the high-grade Gaines File copies are getting the most action of course. Key sales: Two-Fisted Tales #19 CGC 9.8 (Gaines) – approx. $2400. Two-Fisted Tales #19 CGC 9.6 (Gaines) – $2200.

Sgt. Fury is slowly advancing again. Last year we reported a small downturn (issue #1 in particular), most likely due to abundance and some market correction. Importantly, we pointed out that given this momentary stall, it would be a good time to get yourself a copy of this coveted Marvel gem. We hope you have, as it looks like this comic and the ensuing super high-grade copies of the title are all starting to rise in value. There isn't a significant bump in worth yet, but we again recommend that this would be the time to get your hands on this newly Disney-owned IP. Key sales: Sgt. Fury #1 CGC 7.0 – $3100 to $3600. Sgt. Fury #5 CGC 9.8 – approx. $4800.

DC War continues to maintain its preeminent status in the Atomic and Silver Age war genre, particularly because of its "Big Five" titles (AAMOW, GIC, OAAW, OFF and SSWS). Their importance to the prosperity of the war genre over the last 50 years cannot be understated. That said, no extraordinary sales occurred in the last year, other than the expected general and gradual growth of this entire line. Key sales: GIC #87 CGC 8.0 (1st app. of Haunted Tank) – approx. $2500. GIC #114 CGC 9.4 (Origin Haunted Tank) – over $1300.

Our Army at War's key Sgt. Rock issues continue to garner much of the market's attention. Despite that, OAAW #81, which was once considered Sgt. Rock's 1st appearance, has softened a bit for the middle- and lower-grade specimens. An understandable market correction given #81 has been recently re-categorized as a Sgt. Rock prototype issue instead. We don't anticipate the book to fall too hard in those lower grades, and we expect market growth in grades 6.0 and above because it is still a pivotal prototype comic, very difficult to acquire, and rare in grades 7.0 and above because of its purple cover. This is the time to snap up a copy folks! We are, however, scratching our heads a bit, because of the lack of sales to report on Our Army at War #82, and because of the value fluctuations on those actual few sales these last several years. Not a completely surprising development though, as the recent reclassification of #82 (from what would have been Sgt. Rock's 2nd appearance into a prototype) has both collectors and speculators potentially puzzled. Nevertheless, this would still make OAAW #82 the seminal final Sgt. Rock prototype. It is the first comic that specifically refers to "a Sgt. Rock" (not "Jimmy" in GIC #68 or "Sgt. Rocky" in OAAW #81). If there is any Sgt. Rock prototype worth owning, it's this comic! The fact that the market doesn't know what to do with it is in your benefit. Snap it up now! (That is, if you can find a copy.) Our Army at War #83, of course, continues to demonstrate marked growth, showing no sign of waning. For example, #83s in a 4.0 grade seven years ago were averaging just under $400, now each command nearly $3000 apiece. We see no slowing on this title in any grade, and with approximately less than 150 "known" copies currently (in all grades combined), you're going to have to fight to get a copy of what is considered the Action #1 and/or Detective #27 of war comics. Key sales: OAAW #81 CGC 7.0 (key Sgt. Rock prototype) – over $2000. OAAW #82 CGC 7.0 (last Sgt. Rock prototype) – over $850. OAAW #83 CGC 4.0 (1st true Sgt. Rock) – over $2500.

Intel From the War Correspondents

Dispatch From the Trenches (By Andy Greenham)

As a buyer and seller of books, I set up and sell at about eight shows a year, and I have found that there seems to be a fair amount of continued interest in war books. The most common request that I've had is for OAAW #83 (Sgt. Rock), then GIC #87 (Haunted Tank), then SSWS #84 (Mlle. Marie). After that, it's SSWS #151 for people searching out the Unknown Soldier. Interestingly, there seems to be a bit of a pullback in interest for the Sgt. Rock prototype books, even though they're extremely important in the lineage of DC War comics. This past year, I sold two copies of GIC #87, one copy of SSWS #84, and one copy of SSWS #151. If I had any OAAW #83s, I could have easily sold them, even at aggressive prices. Folks are just trying to get their copies whenever they pop up. A decent number of customers who are filling in their runs, are just looking for any lower-grade copy.

On a side note, I wanted to touch on going to comic conventions. I can't recommend it enough. Not only is it potentially good for the comic book dealer by getting your business, it's good for yourself by being able to add to your collection. Let's not stop there. At a show, you have the chance to meet many different artists and writers. These are the folks behind bringing us these books (and characters) that we love so much! Life is short, people. We won't be around forever, and neither will these creators. Let's do our best to meet our heroes while we still can. I think back to whom I've met in person before, people involved with the DC war books, and the list is sadly very short. I am fortunate enough to say that I've met the wonderful and extremely talented Neal Adams, the amazing in so many ways, Russ Heath, and the ultimate legend, Joe Kubert. RIP, Joe.

I encourage you to pick your faves and do your best to meet them. Talk to them, ask them to sign some books or maybe even draw something for you. Let's continue to show our support and admiration for these truly wonderful people that have brought us so much joy.

Many thanks to all the Overstreet readers. Without you guys, there would be no point to any of this. Andy Greenham, over and out.

War on an Open Field (By Mick Rabin)

A few OPGs ago, I wrote an article about the interior stories of DC war comics moving from an eight-page story format to a twelve-page format thus laying the groundwork for the classic character-driven material (i.e. Sgt. Rock) that Kanigher and company are legendary for. I could never quite put my finger on why those issues immediately preceding Rock were better than the earlier stuff, but it was right in front of me the entire time. Apparently, those 4 extra pages to "spread their wings" and take some poetic and artistic license made all the difference.

For this installment, I have a new epiphany that might be a bit less concrete, but bear with me. The focus of comics collecting has—for better or worse—shifted further away from interior stories and more towards covers in the past decade or so. It probably has a lot to do with widespread use of slabs and chat forums where collectors discuss their acquisitions and the thing getting displayed most often is the cover itself.

I picture myself as a bit of an old-school collector in that the interiors are every bit as compelling—if not more so—as the covers themselves. Nonetheless, you'd be hard-pressed to find a DC war comics collector without a "Top-10 Covers" list. I have multiple Top-10 covers lists (favorite Grandenetti covers, favorite wash-tone covers, favorite frogman covers, favorite talking helmet covers; it never ends). Washtone covers, especially the "Perty Thirty" (GIC #75 through #104), seem to receive quite a bit of love from seasoned and newbie collectors alike. But there's something else compelling that I recognized about those Perty Thirty that wasn't apparent before. It's not so much about what IS on the covers as what is NOT on the covers.

One of the things that truly screamed out to me when I saw GI Combat #75 for the first time on the back wall of a local store was that it was just so diametrically opposed in style and format to any DC books that I was already familiar with. I truly love the Superman titles where Lois, Luthor, and Superman are talking and thinking on the cover. There's a beautiful charm about those books that is uniquely their own. But the time that it takes to process what they're saying is at least as long as it takes to read those thought and word balloons—which for an adult—is a couple seconds, but for a kid, could be considerably more.

GIC #75 is a whole different beast. It's not just the tour-de-force Grandenetti washtone with the greys, blacks, and blues. It's that there ARE NO WORDS ON THE COVER AT ALL (except for that singularly cool G.I. Combat title logo). Count Basie would have been proud. The high impact of art, music, and literature is often-times a product of the dynamics between what is rendered, played, and written and what is not. The economy of words, the rests between the notes, the depiction of empty space on a canvas. The masters of each form understand how much is too much and when to hold off.

At some point, Kanigher, Jack Adler, and the war comics crew began piloting the idea of "word-economy." At first, DC war covers started out with chapter titles and wordy descriptions of some of those chapters, but along the way, they began to experiment with fewer words. An early example is SSWS #39 from November 1955. It has ZERO captions, chapter titles, or word balloons. Slightly later, AAMOW #35 (July '56), the second wash-tone war cover, has NO text box, but just two words in the lower right—"Battle Call." That's it. Short and sweet!

There are other later standouts like AAMOW #62 (Oct. '58) with two words—"No Cover" (again NOT contained in a text box). It's definitely one of the best Big-5 covers ever. SSWS #74 (Oct. '58) has ZERO text and the silence of the cover poetically parallels the terror and urgency of the frogmen's silent underwater struggle. Feb. 1959 has the next wordless cover with GIC #69—the "one-off" before the deluge of the Perty Thirty starting with GIC #75. Even I was a bit dumbfounded by the revelation that all but two of the Perty Thirty were wordless (later ones had "Featuring the Haunted Tank" in a thin banner ABOVE the GI Combat title logo, but the art below the title remained uncluttered by pointless captions).

The upshot of this is that the Big-5 creators clearly knew what they were doing—go for MAXIMUM IMPACT. Case in point – OFF #71. Get the attention of the casual browsing customer. Don't make 'em think for too long. Economize the words, and let the art speak for itself. And did it ever! Chalk it up to another factor that makes DC war books so truly staggering!

GAINING RANK

Nearly a decade ago my colleagues and I embarked on a long-term mission to assemble the most complete list and ranking system for all comic books with a war theme. Each comic book's position in the ranking was based on criteria such as who was on the creative team, key storylines, art, first appearances, popularity, market value, scarcity, etc. From this we developed what we believe is a fairly accurate representation of the top war comics of the genre.

Interesting Facts

OAAW #81's stall and #82's illuminations have these two seminal prototypes tied for the very first time in the nine years of our rankings.

Two-Fisted Tales #18 continues to ascend and is now tied for 7th.

Sgt. Fury #13 (2nd solo Cap) and GI Combat #114 (origin Haunted Tank) both make our top 50 for the 1st time!

We hope you enjoyed this year's War Report, albeit in its short form. As always, we truly appreciate the support and encouragement we get from each of you in the hobby and look forward to connecting with you at comic cons, on the threads, or elsewhere. Also, a big thanks to the fine staff at Overstreet. We salute you once again Bob Overstreet, J.C. Vaughn, and Mark Huesman.

This field report would be utterly wanting, were it not for the selfless contributions from my colleagues, friends and contributors Mick Rabin and Andy Greenham. They bring an expertise straight from the field that is nearly unmatched in the genre. You can get more of their know-how on the CGC Boards where they are practically on sentry in the Silver Age War Comic thread.

TOP COMICS

The following tables denote the rate of appreciation of the top Golden Age, Platinum Age, Silver Age and Bronze Age comics, as well as selected genres over the past year. The retail value for a Near Mint- copy of each comic (or VF where a Near Mint- copy is not known to exist) in 2017 is compared to its Near Mint- value in 2016. The rate of return for 2017 over 2016 is given. The place in rank is given for each comic by year, with its corresponding value in highest known grade. These tables can be very useful in forecasting trends in the market place. For instance, the investor might want to know which book is yielding the best dividend from one year to the next, or one might just be interested in seeing how the popularity of books changes from year to year. For instance, All Star Comics #8 was in 15th place in 2016 and has increased to 12th place in 2017. Premium books are also included in these tables and are denoted with an asterisk(*).

The following tables are meant as a guide to the investor. However, it should be pointed out that trends may change at anytime and that some books can meet market resistance with a slowdown in price increases, while others can develop into real comers from a presently dormant state. In the long run, if the investor sticks to the books that are appreciating steadily each year, he shouldn't go very far wrong.

GRADING DEFINITIONS

When grading a comic book, common sense must be employed. The overall eye appeal and beauty of the comic book must be taken into account along with its technical flaws to arrive at the appropriate grade.

10.0 GEM MINT (GM): This is an exceptional example of a given book - the best ever seen. The slightest bindery defects and/or printing flaws may be seen only upon very close inspection. The overall look is "as if it has never been handled or released for purchase." Only the slightest bindery or printing defects are allowed, and these would be imperceptible on first viewing. No bindery tears. Cover is flat with no surface wear. Inks are bright with high reflectivity. Well centered and firmly secured to interior pages. Corners are cut square and sharp. No creases. No dates or stamped markings allowed. No soiling, staining or other discoloration. Spine is tight and flat. No spine roll or split allowed. Staples must be original, centered and clean with no rust. No staple tears or stress lines. Paper is white, supple and fresh. No hint of acidity in the odor of the newsprint. No interior autographs or owner signatures. Centerfold is firmly secure. No interior tears.

9.9 MINT (MT): Near perfect in every way. Only subtle bindery or printing defects are allowed. No bindery tears. Cover is flat with no surface wear. Inks are bright with high reflectivity. Generally well centered and firmly secured to interior pages. Corners are cut square and sharp. No creases. Small, inconspicuous, lightly penciled, stamped or inked arrival dates are acceptable as long as they are in an unobtrusive location. No soiling, staining or other discoloration. Spine is tight and flat. No spine roll or split allowed. Staples must be original, generally centered and clean with no rust. No staple tears or stress lines. Paper is white, supple and fresh. No hint of acidity in the odor of the newsprint. Centerfold is firmly secure. No interior tears.

9.8 NEAR MINT/MINT (NM/MT): Nearly perfect in every way with only minor imperfections that keep it from the next higher grade. Only subtle bindery or printing defects are allowed. No bindery tears. Cover is flat with no surface wear. Inks are bright with high reflectivity. Generally well centered and firmly secured to interior pages. Corners are cut square and sharp. No creases. Small, inconspicuous, lightly penciled, stamped or inked arrival dates are acceptable as long as they are in an unobtrusive location. No soiling, staining or other discoloration. Spine is tight and flat. No spine roll or split allowed. Staples must be original, generally centered and clean with no rust. No staple tears or stress lines. Paper is off-white to white, supple and fresh. No hint of acidity in the odor of the newsprint. Centerfold is firmly secure. Only the slightest interior tears are allowed.

9.6 NEAR MINT+ (NM+): Nearly perfect with a minor additional virtue or virtues that raise it from Near Mint. The overall look is "as if it was just purchased and read once or twice." Only subtle bindery or printing defects are allowed. No bindery tears are allowed, although on Golden Age books bindery tears of up to 1/8" have been noted. Cover is flat with no surface wear. Inks are bright with high reflectivity. Well centered and firmly secured to interior pages. One corner may be almost imperceptibly blunted, but still almost sharp and cut square. Almost imperceptible indentations are permissible, but no creases, bends, or color break. Small, inconspicuous, lightly penciled, stamped or inked arrival dates are acceptable as long as they are in an unobtrusive location. No soiling, staining or other discoloration. Spine is tight and flat. No spine roll or split allowed. Staples must be original, generally centered, with only the slightest discoloration. No staple tears, stress lines, or rust migration. Paper is off-white, supple and fresh. No hint of acidity in the odor of the newsprint. Centerfold is firmly secure. Only the slightest interior tears are allowed.

9.4 NEAR MINT (NM): Nearly perfect with only minor imperfections that keep it from the next higher grade. Minor feathering that does not distract from the overall beauty of an otherwise higher grade copy is acceptable for this grade. The overall look is "as if it was just purchased and read once or twice." Subtle bindery defects are allowed. Bindery tears must be less than 1/16" on Silver Age and later books, although on Golden Age books bindery tears of up to 1/4" have been noted. Cover is flat with no surface wear. Inks are bright with high reflectivity. Generally well centered and secured to interior pages. Corners are cut square and sharp with ever-so-slight blunting permitted. A 1/16" bend is permitted with no color break. No creases. Small, inconspicuous, lightly penciled, stamped or inked arrival dates are acceptable as long as they are in an unobtrusive location. No soiling, staining or other discoloration apart from slight foxing. Spine is tight and flat. No spine roll or split allowed. Staples are generally centered; may have slight discoloration. No staple tears are allowed; almost no stress lines. No rust migration. In rare cases, a comic was not stapled at the bindery and therefore has a missing staple; this is not considered a defect. Any staple can be replaced on books up to Fine, but only vintage staples can be used on books from Very Fine to Near Mint. Mint books must have original staples. Paper is cream to off-white, supple and fresh. No hint of acidity in the odor of the newsprint. Centerfold is secure. Slight interior tears are allowed.

9.2 NEAR MINT- (NM-): Nearly perfect with only a minor additional defect or defects that keep it from Near Mint. A limited number of minor bindery defects are allowed. A light, barely noticeable water stain or minor foxing that does not distract from the beauty of the book is acceptable for this grade. Cover is flat with no surface wear. Inks are bright with only the slightest dimming of reflectivity. Generally well centered and secured to interior pages. Corners are cut square and sharp with ever-so-slight blunting permitted. A 1/16"-1/8" bend is permitted with no color break. No creases. Small, inconspicuous, lightly penciled, stamped or inked arrival dates are acceptable as long as they are in an unobtrusive location. No soiling, staining or other discoloration apart from slight foxing. Spine is tight and flat. No spine roll or split allowed. Staples may show some discoloration. No staple tears are allowed; almost no stress lines. No rust migration. In rare cases, a comic was not stapled at the bindery and therefore has a missing staple; this is not considered a defect. Any staple can be replaced on books up to Fine, but only vintage staples can be used on books from Very Fine to Near Mint. Mint books must have original staples. Paper is cream to off-white, supple and fresh. No hint of acidity in the odor of the newsprint. Centerfold is secure. Slight interior tears are allowed.

9.0 VERY FINE/NEAR MINT (VF/NM): Nearly perfect with outstanding eye appeal. A limited number of bindery defects are allowed. Almost flat cover with almost imperceptible wear. Inks are bright with slightly diminished reflectivity. An 1/8" bend is allowed if color is not broken. Corners are cut square and sharp with ever-so-slight blunting permitted but no creases. Several lightly penciled, stamped or inked arrival dates are acceptable. No obvious soiling, staining or other discoloration, except for very minor foxing. Spine is tight and flat. No spine roll or split allowed. Staples may show some discoloration. Only the slightest staple tears are allowed. A very minor accumulation of stress lines may be present if they are nearly imperceptible. No rust migration. In rare cases, a comic was not stapled at the bindery and therefore has a missing staple; this is not considered a defect. Any staple can be replaced on books up to Fine, but only vintage staples can be used on books from Very Fine to Near Mint. Mint books must have original staples. Paper is cream to off-white and supple. No hint of acidity in the odor of the newsprint. Centerfold is secure. Very minor interior tears may be present.

8.5 VERY FINE+ (VF+): Fits the criteria for Very Fine but with an additional virtue or small accumulation of virtues that improves the book's appearance by a perceptible amount.

8.0 VERY FINE (VF): An excellent copy with outstanding eye appeal. Sharp, bright and clean with supple pages. A comic book in this grade has the appearance of having been carefully handled. A limited accumulation of minor bindery defects is allowed. Cover is relatively flat with minimal surface wear beginning to show, possibly including some minute wear at corners. Inks are generally bright with moderate to high reflectivity. A 1/4" crease is acceptable if color is not broken. Stamped or inked arrival dates may be present. No obvious soiling, staining or other discoloration, except for minor foxing. Spine is almost flat with no roll. Possible minor color break allowed. Staples may show some discoloration. Very slight staple tears and a few almost very minor to minor stress lines may be present. No rust migration. In rare cases, a comic was not stapled at the bindery and therefore has a missing staple; this is not considered a defect. Any staple can be replaced on books up to Fine, but only vintage staples can be used on books from Very Fine to Near Mint. Mint books must have original staples. Paper is tan to cream and supple. No hint of acidity in the odor of the newsprint. Centerfold is mostly secure. Minor interior tears at the margin may be present.

7.5 VERY FINE- (VF-): Fits the criteria for Very Fine but with an additional defect or small accumulation of defects that detracts from the book's appearance by a perceptible amount.

7.0 FINE/VERY FINE (FN/VF): An above-average copy that shows minor wear but is still relatively flat and clean with outstanding eye appeal. A small accumulation of minor bindery defects is allowed. Minor cover wear beginning to show with interior yellowing or tanning allowed, possibly including minor creases. Corners may be blunted or abraded. Inks are generally bright with a moderate reduction in reflectivity. Stamped or inked arrival dates may be present. No obvious soiling, staining or other discoloration, except for minor foxing. The slightest spine roll may be present, as well as a possible moderate color break. Staples may show some discoloration. Slight staple tears and a slight accumulation of light stress lines may be present. Slight rust migration. In rare cases, a comic was not stapled at the bindery and therefore has a missing staple; this is not considered a defect. Any staple can be replaced on books up to Fine, but only vintage staples can be used on books from Very Fine to Near Mint. Mint books must have original staples. Paper is tan to cream, but not brown. No hint of acidity in the odor of the newsprint. Centerfold is mostly secure. Minor interior tears at the margin may be present.

6.5 FINE+ (FN+): Fits the criteria for Fine but with an additional virtue or small accumulation of virtues that improves the book's appearance by a perceptible amount.

6.0 FINE (FN): An above-average copy that shows minor wear but is still relatively flat and clean with no significant creasing or other serious defects. Eye appeal is somewhat reduced because of slight surface wear and the accumulation of small defects, especially on the spine and edges. A FINE condition comic book appears to have been read a few times and has been handled with moderate care. Some accumulation of minor bindery defects is allowed. Minor cover wear apparent, with minor to moderate creases. Inks show a major reduction in reflectivity. Blunted or abraded corners are more common, as is minor staining, soiling, discoloration, and/or foxing. Stamped or inked arrival dates may be present. A minor spine roll is allowed. There can also be a 1/4" spine split or severe color break. Staples show minor discoloration. Minor staple tears and an accumulation of stress lines may be present, as well as minor rust migration. In rare cases, a comic was not stapled at the bindery and therefore has a missing staple; this is not considered a defect. Any staple can be replaced on books up to Fine, but only vintage staples can be used on books from Very Fine to Near Mint. Mint books must have original staples. Paper is brown to tan and fairly supple with no signs of brittleness. No hint of acidity in the odor of the newsprint. Minor interior tears at the margin may be present. Centerfold may be loose but not detached.

5.5 FINE- (FN-): Fits the criteria for Fine but with an additional defect or small accumulation of defects that detracts from the book's appearance by a perceptible amount.

5.0 VERY GOOD/FINE (VG/FN): An above-average but well-used comic book. A comic in this grade shows some moderate wear; eye appeal is somewhat reduced because of the accumulation of defects. Still a desirable copy that has been handled with some care. An accumulation of bindery defects is allowed. Minor to moderate cover wear apparent, with minor to moderate creases and/or dimples. Inks have major to extreme reduction in reflectivity. Blunted or abraded corners are increasingly common, as is minor to moderate staining, discoloration, and/or foxing. Stamped or inked arrival dates may be present. A minor to moderate spine roll is allowed. A spine split of up to 1/2" may be present. Staples show minor discoloration. A slight accumulation of minor staple tears and an accumulation of minor stress lines may also be present, as well as minor rust migration. In rare cases, a comic was not stapled at the bindery and therefore has a missing staple; this is not considered a defect. Any staple can be replaced on books up to Fine, but only vintage staples can be used on books from Very Fine to Near Mint. Mint books must have original staples. Paper is brown to tan with no signs of brittleness. May have the faintest trace of an acidic odor. Centerfold may be loose but not detached. Minor tears may also be present.

4.5 VERY GOOD+ (VG+): Fits the criteria for Very Good but with an additional virtue or small accumulation of virtues that improves the book's appearance by a perceptible amount.

4.0 VERY GOOD (VG): The average used comic book. A comic in this grade shows some significant moderate wear, but still has not accumulated enough total defects to reduce eye appeal to the point that it is not a desirable copy. Cover shows moderate to significant wear, and may be loose but not completely detached. Moderate to extreme reduction in reflectivity. Can have an accumulation of creases or dimples. Corners may be blunted or abraded. Store stamps, name stamps, arrival dates, initials, etc. have no effect on this grade. Some discoloration, fading, foxing, and even minor soiling is allowed. As much as a 1/4" triangle can be missing out of the corner or edge; a missing 1/8" square is also acceptable. Only minor unobtrusive tape and other amateur repair allowed on otherwise high grade copies. Moderate spine roll may be present and/or a 1" spine split. Staples discolored. Minor to moderate staple tears and stress lines may be present, as well as some rust migration. Paper is brown but not brittle. A minor acidic odor can be detectable. Minor to moderate tears may be present. Centerfold may be loose or detached at one staple.

3.5 VERY GOOD- (VG-): Fits the criteria for Very Good but with an additional defect or small accumulation of defects that detracts from the book's appearance by a perceptible amount.

3.0 GOOD/VERY GOOD (GD/VG): A used comic book showing some substantial wear. Cover shows significant wear, and may be loose or even detached at one staple. Cover reflectivity is very low. Can have a book-length crease and/or dimples. Corners may be blunted or even rounded. Discoloration, fading, foxing, and even minor to moderate soiling is allowed. A triangle from 1/4" to 1/2" can be missing out of the corner or edge; a missing 1/8" to 1/4" square is also acceptable. Tape and other amateur repair may be present. Moderate spine roll likely. May have a spine split of anywhere from 1" to 1-1/2". Staples may be rusted or replaced. Minor to moderate staple tears and moderate stress lines may be present, as well as some rust migration. Paper is brown but not brittle. Centerfold may be loose or detached at one staple. Minor to moderate interior tears may be present.

2.5 GOOD+ (GD+): Fits the criteria for Good but with an additional virtue or small accumulation of virtues that improves the book's appearance by a perceptible amount.

2.0 GOOD (GD): Shows substantial wear; often considered a "reading copy." Cover shows significant wear and may even be detached. Cover reflectivity is low and in some cases completely absent. Book-length creases and dimples may be present. Rounded corners are more common. Moderate soiling, staining, discoloration and foxing may be present. The largest piece allowed missing from the front or back cover is usually a 1/2" triangle or a 1/4" square, although some Silver Age books such as 1960s Marvels have had the price corner box clipped from the top left front cover and may be considered Good if they would otherwise have graded higher. Tape and other forms of amateur repair are common in Silver Age and older books. Spine roll is likely. May have up to a 2" spine split. Staples may be degraded, replaced or missing. Moderate staple tears and stress lines may be present, as well as rust migration. Paper is brown but not brittle. Centerfold may be loose or detached. Moderate interior tears may be present.

1.8 GOOD- (GD-): Fits the criteria for Good but with an additional defect or small accumulation of defects that detracts from the book's appearance by a perceptible amount.

1.5 FAIR/GOOD (FR/GD): A comic showing substantial to heavy wear. A copy in this grade still has all pages and covers, although there may be pieces missing up to and including missing coupons and/or Marvel Value Stamps that do not impact the story. Books in this grade are commonly creased, scuffed, abraded, soiled, and possibly unattractive, but still generally readable. Cover shows considerable wear and may be detached. Nearly no reflectivity to no reflectivity remaining. Store stamp, name stamp, arrival date and initials are permitted. Book-length creases, tears and folds may be present. Rounded corners are increasingly common. Soiling, staining, discoloration and foxing is generally present. Up to 1/10 of the back cover may be missing. Tape and other forms of amateur repair are increasingly common in Silver Age and older books. Spine roll is common. May have a spine split between 2" and 2/3 the length of the book. Staples may be degraded, replaced or missing. Staple tears and stress lines are common, as well as rust migration. Paper is brown and may show brittleness around the edges. Acidic odor may be present. Centerfold may be loose or detached. Interior tears are common.

1.0 FAIR (FR): A copy in this grade shows heavy wear. Some collectors consider this the lowest collectible grade because comic books in lesser condition are usually incomplete and/or brittle. Comics in this grade are usually soiled, faded, ragged and possibly unattractive. This is the last grade in which a comic remains generally readable. Cover may be detached, and inks have lost all reflectivity. Creases, tears and/or folds are prevalent. Corners are commonly rounded or absent. Soiling and staining is present. Books in this condition generally have all pages and most of the covers, although there may be up to 1/4 of the front cover missing or no back cover, but not both. Tape and other forms of amateur repair are more common. Spine roll is more common; spine split can extend up to 2/3 the length of the book. Staples may be missing or show rust and discoloration. An accumulation of staple tears and stress lines may be present, as well as rust migration. Paper is brown and may show brittleness around the edges but not in the central portion of the pages. Acidic odor may be present. Accumulation of interior tears. Chunks may be missing. The centerfold may be missing if readability is generally preserved (although there may be difficulty). Coupons may be cut.

0.5 POOR (PR): Most comic books in this grade have been sufficiently degraded to the point where there is little or no collector value; they are easily identified by a complete absence of eye appeal. Comics in this grade are brittle almost to the point of turning to dust with a touch, and are usually incomplete. Extreme cover fading may render the cover almost indiscernible. May have extremely severe stains, mildew or heavy cover abrasion to the point that some cover inks are indistinct/absent. Covers may be detached with large chunks missing. Can have extremely ragged edges and extensive creasing. Corners are rounded or virtually absent. Covers may have been defaced with paints, varnishes, glues, oil, indelible markers or dyes, and may have suffered heavy water damage. Can also have extensive amateur repairs such as laminated covers. Extreme spine roll present; can have extremely ragged spines or a complete, book-length split. Staples can be missing or show extreme rust and discoloration. Extensive staple tears and stress lines may be present, as well as extreme rust migration. Paper exhibits moderate to severe brittleness (where the comic book literally falls apart when examined). Extreme acidic odor may be present. Extensive interior tears. Multiple pages, including the centerfold, may be missing that affect readability. Coupons may be cut.

0.3 INCOMPLETE (INC): Books that are coverless, but are otherwise complete, or covers missing their interiors.

0.1 INCOMPLETE (INC): Coverless copies that have incomplete interiors, wraps or single pages will receive a grade of .1 as will just front covers or just back covers.

OVERSTREET ADVISORS

Even before the first edition of The Overstreet Comic Book Price Guide was printed, author Robert M. Overstreet solicited pricing data, historical notations, and general information from a variety of sources. What was initially an informal group offering input quickly became an organized field of comic book collectors, dealers and historians whose opinions are actively solicited in advance of each edition of this book. Some of these Overstreet Advisors are specialists who deal in particular niches within the comic book world, while others are generalists who are interested in commenting on the broader marketplace. Each advisor provides information from their respective areas of interest and expertise, spanning the history of American comics.

While some choose to offer pricing and historical information in the form of annotated sales catalogs, auction catalogs, or documented private sales, assistance from others comes in the form of the market reports such as those beginning on page 97 in this book. In addition to those who have served as Overstreet Advisors almost since The Guide's inception, each year new contributors are sought.

With that in mind, we are pleased to present our newest Overstreet Advisors:

WE'RE CONFUSED!

We hope that someone who reads this will be able to explain why this kind of thing happens, because we don't get it!

The following is a true story...

At the biggest convention of the year, a dealer who traveled hundreds of miles to set up bought a high-grade Fantastic Four #1 for roughly 1/2 the price that we would have paid. After that comic passed through the hands of several dealers, Metropolis did in fact buy it. The fellow who initially sold it at the convention could easily have made seven thousand dollars more if he had sold it to us.

SHOULDN'T THESE GUYS KNOW BETTER?
SHOULDN'T EVERYONE?

Is it still better to get more money for your comics than less?
Does the Earth still revolve around the Sun? Are there still people out there who are not offering their books to Metropolis and losing money by selling to the wrong guy?

If anyone out there can shed some light on why this still happens in this day and age, could you please let us know?

THE NATION'S LARGEST COMIC DEALER

The following represents a sample of prices we will pay for your comic books. Other dealers say they pay top dollar, but when it comes down to it, they simply do not. If you have comics to sell, we invite you to contact every comic dealer in the country for offers. Then call us for your best offer. We can afford to pay the highest price for your vintage comics because that is all we sell. If you wish to sell us your comics, please ship us the books securely via FedEx with a tracking number. If your collection is too large to ship, send us a detailed list and we'll travel to you. The prices below are for NM copies, but we are interested in all grades. Thank you.

FACT 1: ABSOLUTELY NO OTHER COMIC DEALER BUYS MORE GOLDEN AND SILVER AGE COMICS THAN METROPOLIS.

Although the pages of the price guide are filled with other dealers offering to pay "top dollar," the simple truth is that Metropolis spends more money on more quality comic book collections year in and year out than any other dealers in the country. We have the funds and the expertise to back up our word. The fact is that we have spent nearly 8 million dollars on rare comic books and movie posters over the last year. If you have comic books to sell please call us at 1.800.229.6387. A generous finder's fee will be given if you know of any comic book or movie poster collections that we purchase. All calls will be strictly confidential.

FACT 2: ABSOLUTELY NO OTHER COMIC DEALER SELLS MORE GOLDEN AND SILVER AGE COMICS THAN METROPOLIS.

We simply have the best stock of Golden and Silver Age comic books in the country. The thousands of collectors familiar with our strict grading standards and excellent service can attest to this. Chances are, if you want it, we have it!

APPRAISAL SERVICE

If you'd like to know the value of your comics, why not ask the guys who created the universal 10 point grading scale? Metropolis offers the following absolutely free!

1. VALUE APPRAISAL to determine your comics' retail value based on all parameters including current desirability of the comic, relative scarcity and historical significance.
2. COMPLETE EXAMINATION of comics for all types of restoration.
3. DOUBLE GRADING SYSTEM to ensure greatest accuracy.

Our staff reflects over 75 years of comic evaluation and retail experience. There is not a more knowledgeable staff anywhere. For more info, call Toll-Free

1.800.229.METRO

Please limit the number of comics to 10.
Comics should be from 1930 -1975.
That is our field of expertise.

SELLER TIP :

Sometimes having your comics sealed by a 3rd party grader increases the value. Other times it won't and you only lose money on grading fees. Our consultation determines when and when not to have a comic "slabbed" saving you money.

WORLD'S PREMIER ONLINE COMIC MARKETPLACE & AUCTIONEER

For over 30 years, the experts at ComicConnect have been recognized and renowned for selling the most sought after comic books and collections. Our services have been enlisted by individuals who are the most aggressive collectors in the market. ComicConnect will help you realize the best return when you are selling your comics.

In today's market, the decision of just how to sell your comics is critical. Making the right choice is like walking a tightrope without a net. Perhaps the most common pitfall novice sellers fall into is blindly consigning to the first auction house they come across. If you're considering parting with your collection, and think an auction house is the best way to go, we strongly advise you consider the following:

Do the Math. The commission rate an auction house charges you, the seller, is typically 15%. However, the auction house will also charge the bidder a "buyer's premium" of 19.5%. Make no mistake about it, a bidder in an auction simply deducts that additional 19.5% from the final price they are willing to pay. That's nearly a 35% cut from each and every transaction. By having their hand in the pocket of both the bidder and the seller, the auction house ensures the most profit for itself, while the consignor hemorrhages on their investment. With ComicConnect's small commission and No Buyer's Premiums, the rest of the proceeds go back into your pocket where it rightfully belongs.

When you consign to ComicConnect, you have at your disposal the services of the most experienced comic book sellers in the world. More importantly, you benefit from the thousands upon thousands of long-term customer relationships we've developed over the past 30 years. We're in it for the long haul, and will work with you to develop a strategy that will get you the highest return. We won't "square-peg" your collection into a formula that doesn't fit. We will pursue the avenue or avenues that work best for the comics you consign. Sometimes, that means selling your comics to the private individuals who pay the very best for being offered the very best. Oftentimes, we will arrange exclusive viewings at our showroom in Manhattan. We also maintain thousands of want lists of customers waiting in the wings for certain comic books to come to market - comic books that you may have in your collection.

WE FILL WANT LISTS

SILVER AGE

We have a simple question to ask . . . have you *us your want list yet? Here is what it will cost you . . . 5 to 10 minutes of your time.

E-MAILED

Here is what you could stand to gain . . . SOME OR ALL OF THE COMIC BOOKS (CGC OR RAW)
THAT YOU HAVE BEEN SEARCHING FOR THE LAST FEW YEARS!!!*

WHAT ARE YOU WAITING FOR?

"The Batman #1 you sold me was in the nicest, unrestored condition I've ever seen!", Bob Overstreet, author "The Official Overstreet Comic Book Price Guide."

"I'm glad that you have a great selection of Golden Age and Silver Age comics in stock. You have been able to constantly find books to fill some very tough missing holes in my collection. I also appreciate your consistent, tight grading and fair prices!"

Dan Hampton, Las Cruces, NM

These are just two of the many satisfied customers that have bought books from us in the past. Over the years, we have developed a very strong return customer base because we ACCURATELY price, grade, and describe books (in detail) over the phone and through the mail/email. If CGC books are desired, we can definitely fill those needs as well !!! In the past few years, we have acquired nearly EVERY major Golden Age and Silver Age book more than once for our many want list clients. These include books like Action 1, Detective 1, Detective 27, Marvel 1, Superman 1 and more recent gems like AF 15, FF 1, Hulk 1, Flash 105 and Showcase 4, 8, 22. OUR SPECIALTY IS GOLD, SILVER, BRONZE, AND COPPER AGE BOOKS (1933 - 1993). Please check out our great selection of old books! (CGC or Raw).

We don't claim that we can fill every list all the time, but if any company can accomplish this, it would certainly be us! We can say this with much confidence because our representatives travel to the majority of the 50 states and Canada plus attend many of the major comic book conventions (San Diego, Chicago, Detroit, New York, etc.) to uncover books you would not have the opportunity to find. When we are not on the road, we spend MANY hours on the phone locating books from our long list of past and present comic sources we've developed over the 25 years we have been dealing in comic books. When sending your want list either E-MAIL us, or mail us and include a self-addressed stamped envelope (if possible), your phone number, and a good time to reach you. We DON'T send out catalogs, so please ask for specific books and conditions desired. We will contact you when we find the items you've requested. Phone calls are also welcomed. WE WILL GLADLY SUGGEST AND PERSONALLY PUT TOGETHER COMIC BOOK INVESTMENT PORTFOLIOS FOR BIG AND SMALL INVESTORS. OUR ADVICE IS ALWAYS FREE!

SAVE YOURSELF ALL THE HASSLE AND LET US DO THE LOOKING FOR YOU!

CALL, FAX, MAIL, OR EMAIL US YOUR WANT LIST!

YOU HAVE NOTHING TO LOSE AND EVERYTHING ON YOUR WANT LIST TO GAIN!

Competitive pricing always. Accurate grading. MANY CGC BOOKS AVAILABLE. Friendly, courteous service. Interest free time payments/layaways possible. Checks, Money Orders, Visa, Mastercard, Discover and American Express accepted for total payment OR down payment on books. 7 day money back guarantee before a sale is considered final on all non-CGC books. No collect calls please.

▼ POINTS TO CONSIDER ▼

TO SELL ON EBAY OR NOT TO SELL ON EBAY—THAT IS YOUR QUESTION?

- Consigning your comics to an eBay seller or an auction may not let you realize your collection's potential. EBay sellers and auctions charge 15% to 35% on every transaction regardless if they sell for less than guide. Many items sell for way below guide and you still pay all related charges. Many dealers buy these items well below market value. After you consider all charges and the final selling price you will generally net much less than we would pay. Selling to us there will be no charges, no waiting for payment. It's easy, and you will be treated with honesty and fairness.
- We have over 25 years experience in comic fandom. We have purchased many well-known collections while competing against other interested parties. Give us the chance to show you your top price.
- Being a collector/dealer gives us the ability to buy your entire collection and pay you the most for it. You will maximize your collection's value.

You have everything to gain by contacting us. WHY miss out on your BEST OFFER? Call 603-869-2097 today!

GRADING COMICS

Over even short amounts of time within the world of comic book collecting, there are many, frequent changes. Collectors, dealers, and even publishers can come and go. Events or particular issues can be hyped and be written, wiped out, and written again.

However, in the world of comic book grading, things tend to change more slowly. But over time, they can and do sometimes change.

First came the acknowledgement that comic books in different conditions would be worth differing amounts of money. Then came recognition that even with a specific grade, there could be determining factors that gave one comic more appeal than another.

As prices in our market began to climb, the demand for more and more detail in grading and greater consistency increased. The grading scale evolved, was refined, and finally took on the form of the 10.0 scale we use today.

The addition of third party, independent grading to the mix was a major development. It's hard to argue against the notion that it helped to increase the liquidity in the marketplace, and that in turn spurred prices even higher.

It is those higher prices and our old friends, supply and demand, that have helped to bring us to another change in comic book grading with our most recent edition. It's not a huge one since it occurs in the lowest grades, but it is nonetheless significant because it is definitely market-driven.

Accurate grading of comic books has never been more important because the stakes have never been higher. While you probably won't look into the extreme realm of purchasing a CGC-certified 9.0 copy of Action Comics #1 for $3.2 million, it's safe to say that every collector wants the best possible copy of their favorite comic. Knowing that condition is of the highest importance, learning how grades are determined is the next step. And if you grade your own comics, you need to know what you're doing!

Hardcore comic book collectors will get a lot out of this book simply because it contains some of the most hardcore comic collecting information – the breakdown of grades and the imperfections on a book that would cause it to fall into that grade. But even the more casual collectors who may not care too terribly much about having all of their books slabbed would want to pick this one up as well simply because of how valuable the information inside is. Everyone stands to learn something new from The Overstreet Guide to Grading Comics. The newest edition includes not just the 10-point grading system (including the new 0.1 and 0.3 grades) but exhaustive descriptions of Primary and Split Grades and a ton of examples of each grade.

ORIGINAL COMIC ART

How would you like to own an original Jack Kirby cover from Fantastic Four, an original Peanuts Sunday page by Charles Schulz, or an actual cel from Disney's Snow White And The Seven Dwarves? Collecting original comic book, original comic strip, and animation art can be a very rewarding experience!

Like comic books themselves, original comic art has a lot to offer the collector. Great characters, wonderful stories, and an incredible cool factor.

There are many ways to collect original comic book, comic strip and animation art, and while these fields may be under-documented compared to comic books themselves, the original art market now commands a tremendous amount of attention.

The first thing we always say though, whether in art or comic books or any other specialty, is collect what you love. Whether you're spending tens of dollars or $10,000, don't let anyone talk you into anything you wouldn't want to keep in your collection. While the market for original comic book art is very liquid at the moment, the best bet to a path with as few regrets as possible is to collect what you love.

And as you'll always hear us say in each of our publications, get informed.

Don't be afraid of diverse and sometimes conflicting opinions. Eventually you'll have to sort things out for yourself, but the key to understanding any field of endeavor is to get informed.

Another important element to understand is that while there are many record prices being paid, there are many pieces in each of these niches that are priced so that even the most unseasoned beginner can pick up some truly enjoyable pages, strips or cels. Again, when you start with something you love, it's hard to go wrong.

In recent years we've seen many additional record prices. But there are still thousands upon thousands of reasonably priced pages. In fact, it's safe to say that the majority of original comic book pages and original comic strips are reasonably priced.

Even with the majority of comic art priced in much more accessible fashion, the original comic book art market continues to be intriguing to observe. We now have conventions dedicated specifically to original art – Comic Art Con is the first, but we doubt it will be the last of its kind – and the market seems to be thriving.

Animation art is also a very interesting market. From Bugs Bunny to the classic Disney material, and from Hanna-Barbera to Terry Toons, there is just as much or more to learn about this part of the market.

The Overstreet Guide To Collecting Comic & Animation Art can be your guide to learning about the market or simply to thinking about it in new ways.

MOVIE POSTERS

From Casablanca to Vertigo, from Chinatown to Apocalypse Now, from Blade Runner to Scarface, and from Snow White to Frankenstein, the best movie posters have almost always had the ability to project us into the world that the movie depicts before we actually see the film.

Sometimes they carve out brief, pivotal moments in the story, ones that compel us to see the movie or get us even more excited about a film we already planned to attend. At other times they capture more of the feeling or the tone of a movie rather than a specific element. And in yet other instances they focus on the stars or the characters...

Like so many great collectibles, there is no one answer about what makes movie posters iconic, but perhaps there is a way to describe their effect.

Writing on the Creative Bloq website in 2013, Cavan Scott said, "An iconic movie poster is one that has been burned onto the public consciousness, something that has become so recognizable that you feel that you've always known it. It should spring to mind as soon as you hear the film's name, be easily described and trigger excitement and intrigue, no matter how many times you see it."

Take a moment to consider the posters you love. Once we get beyond nostalgia – always a powerful force – it frequently boils down to the images that grab us and hold our attention, sometimes even if the

Take a look at what Amanda Sheriff and our team of writers have done in The Overstreet Guide to Collecting Movie Posters.

It provides film lovers and collectors a look inside the Silver Screen. There are profiles on directors, film stars, and movie poster artists. It includes in-depth features on movie genres and franchises, such as Star Wars, musicals, superheroes, James Bond, film noir, Blaxploitation, and Tarzan.

There are interviews with collectors and dealers who share their experiences, thoughts on elements of the hobby, and provide suggestions on collecting. Poster care is covered with articles on framing, storage, linen-backing, and poster autographs.

If you want to know how to grade a poster, that's in the book as well.

Whether you're looking at U.S. half-sheets, one-sheets, three-sheets, six-sheets, or lobby cards, or the great posters offered from a variety of nations around the world, if you like movies, there's a poster for you. And that's great, because as we say in every collecting category, you should collect what you love.

Amanda Sheriff and the contributors to this book love movies and movie posters and it shows. From silent films to the most recent CGI-filled mega-fest, spanning just about every genre you can think of, this book can be your gateway.

CONCERT POSTERS

Music inspires us and affects our emotions. It can be upbeat and poppy, have a rock attitude, be soulful, loud and teeth rattling, or soft and sweet. Whatever the style or tempo, music can energize, be a salve to wounded spirits, or bring us closer to one another.

Concert posters are a visual representation of the music we love. They are advertisements that go beyond providing event details to entice and mesmerize audiences with a taste of the musical style. They can help people recall the memories of the best shows, and in many cases, youthful days gone by.

They're also highly collectible.

There are several ways to approach a concert poster collection. For many it starts with the musician, artist, or poster style. Collecting by musician is probably the easiest route; just determine which musician you either enjoy, that is affordable, or that appreciates in pricing, and start buying.

Another solid option is to collect by the artist who created the poster. The artists whose work adorns great concert posters are incredibly talented people.

They are able to capture the style and attitude of the musicians in the art, making it very clear that it was made for one, specific group. The artists live the music, transferring it from auditory to visual, crafting impressive advertisements for the musicians.

The market for concert posters is strong and steady. Prices typically range from $50 to $1,000, putting them in a solidly affordable price range for most collectors. Posters for modern musicians, some boxing style examples, and some from popular 1960s series can be purchased for $20 to $100. More valuable posters include acts like The Grateful Dead, Jimi Hendrix, Jefferson Airplane, artists like Rick Griffin, and Bill Graham or Family Dog series posters, ranging in price from a few hundred to $10,000.

Like other areas of collecting, concert poster collectors are a community. People can connect with each other and the musicians they admire. It's a hobby where music lovers and art lovers come together to recall, with nostalgic joy, great pop culture history.

The Overstreet Guide to Collecting Concert Posters is a guide for both beginners and experienced collectors. There are features on popular musicians within concert poster collecting, profiles on artists who created posters, and histories of concert promoters and venues.

Industry experts and collectors share their expertise on buying and selling posters, restoration, collecting suggestions, and advice to collectors. A poster artist and a musician provide a look into their creative worlds.

It contains suggestions and advice on poster care, current prices on notable posters, and explores collecting other music memorabilia. Grading definitions and grading factors, plus top poster sales are presented with participation by auction houses.

Whether our book is your introduction to this world or you find it as an already experienced collector, it will offer you a gateway to seeing concert posters in a whole new light!

VIDEO GAMES

If you're a longtime Overstreet fan, The Overstreet Guide To Collecting Video Games might not be the first thing that would pop into your mind. That could well change after you read this book. The market for collectible vintage video games may only be in its infancy, but it's growing rapidly, is getting organized, and has many passionate, devoted, serious fans.

There are still many to whom collecting video games might seem odd, but for the most part they just haven't stopped to consider how long video games have been around. Not only have the games and game systems themselves become highly sought after, but so have various related items as well.

As it has been in just about every field, nostalgia may be the first impulse that makes older material collectible, but markets rarely develop solely from nostalgia. Our old friends supply and demand seem to always get into the mix as well. We've had video games for decades now. It's really only natural that things have evolved to the point where this book was a must.

Video games and their related merchandise are as collectible as comic books, movie memorabilia or sports collectibles. And the people who do so are just as passionate about their collections as anyone else in any other collecting hobby. Though video games are relatively young compared to comic books or the sort, that fact alone doesn't make gaming collections any less legitimate.

This book examines not just the history of video games, but also three major types of collecting in this hobby: by franchise, by console, and by developer.

So whether you're interested in literally catching 'em all in the Pokémon franchise or racing your way through the Sonic the Hedgehog series, we've got you covered. If you're loyal to either Nintendo, Microsoft or Sony, you'll find plenty of representation from your chosen console, too. And from Activision to Valve and nearly everyone in between, there's plenty of developer representation from throughout video game history.

We also have some wildly informative interviews on arcade cabinets and pinball machines, and on game-related merchandise and how to avoid fakes. On top of that, we've got a really great report on some of the most valuable games on the market right now. This is a book that will aid even the most seasoned, veteran collectors as well as it will help the newcomers to the hobby.

COMIC HEAVEN

JOHN VERZYL AND DAUGHTER ROSE "HARD AT WORK"

John Verzyl started collecting comic books in 1965, and within ten years he had amassed thousands of Golden and Silver Age comic books. In 1979, with his wife Nanette, he opened "COMIC HEAVEN," a retail store devoted entirely to the buying and selling of comic books.

Over the years, John Verzyl has come to be recognized as an authority in the field of comic books. He has served as a special advisor to The Overstreet Comic Book Price Guide for the last 30 years. Thousands of his "mint" comics were photographed for Ernst Gerber's Photo-Journal Guide to Comic Books. His booths and displays at the annual San Diego Comic-Con, the August Chicago Comic Con, and the New York City Comic Con in October draw customers from all over the world.

The first COMIC HEAVEN AUCTION was held in 1987, and today his color-packed catalogs are mailed out to more than 12,000 interested collectors and dealers.

BIG LITTLE BOOKS

INTRODUCTION

In 1932, at the depths of the Great Depression, comic books were not selling despite their successes in the previous two decades. Desperate publishers had already reduced prices to 25¢, but this was still too much for many people to spend on entertainment.

Comic books quickly evolved into two newer formats, the comics magazine and the Big Little Book. Both types retailed for 10¢.

Big Little Books began by reprinting the art (and adapting the stories) from newspaper comics. As their success grew and publishers began commissioning original material, movie adaptations and other entertainment-derived stories became commonplace.

GRADING

Before a Big Little Book's value can be assessed, its condition or state of preservation must be determined. A book in Near Mint condition will bring many times the price of the same book in Poor condition. Many variables influence the grading of a Big Little Book and all must be considered in the final evaluation. Due to the way they are constructed, damage occurs with very little use - usually to the spine, book edges and binding. More important defects that affect grading are: Split spines, pages missing, page browning or brittleness, writing, crayoning, loose pages, color fading, chunks missing, and rolling or out of square. The following grading guide is given to aid the novice:

9.4 Near Mint: The overall look is as if it was just purchased and maybe opened once; only subtle defects are allowed; paper is cream to off-white, supple and fresh; cover is flat with no surface wear or creases; inks and colors are bright; small penciled or inked arrival dates are acceptable; very slight blunting of corners at top and bottom of spine are common; outside corners are cut square and sharp. Books in this grade could bring prices of guide and a half or more.

9.0 Very Fine/Near Mint: Limited number of defects; full cover gloss with only very slight wear on book corners and edges; very minor foxing; very minor tears allowed, binding still square and tight with no pages missing; paper quality still fresh from cream to off-white. Dates, stamps or initials allowed on cover or inside.

8.0 Very Fine: Most of the cover gloss retained with minor wear appearing at corners and around edges; spine tight with no pages missing; cream/tan paper allowed if still supple; up to 1/4" bend allowed on covers with no color break; cover relatively flat; minor tears allowed.

6.0 Fine: Slight wear beginning to show; cover gloss reduced but still clean, pages tan/brown but still supple (not brittle); up to 1/4" split or color break allowed; minor discoloration and/or foxing allowed.

4.0 Very Good: Obviously a read copy with original printing luster almost gone; some fading and discoloration, but not soiled; some signs of wear such as corner splits and spine rolling; paper can be brown but not brittle; a few pages can be loose but not missing; no chunks missing; blunted corners acceptable.

2.0 Good: An average used copy complete with only minor pieces missing from the spine, which may be partially split; slightly soiled or marked with spine rolling; color flaking and wear around edges, but perfectly sound and legible; could have minor tape repairs but otherwise complete.

1.0 Fair: Very heavily read and soiled with small chunks missing from cover; most or all of spine could be missing; multiple splits in spine and loose pages, but still sound and legible, bringing 50 to 70 percent of good price.

0.5 Poor: Damaged, heavily weathered, soiled or otherwise unsuited for collecting purposes.

IMPORTANT

Most BLBs on the market today will fall in the Good to Fine grade category. When Very Fine to Near Mint BLBs are offered for sale, they usually bring premium prices.

A WORD ON PRICING

The prices are given for Good, Fine and Very Fine/Near Mint condition. A book in Fair would be 50-70% of the Good price. Very Good would be halfway between the Good and Fine price, and Very Fine would be halfway between the Fine and Very Fine/Near Mint price. The prices listed were averaged from convention sales, dealers' lists, adzines, auctions, and by special contact with dealers and collectors from coast to coast. The prices and the spreads were determined from sales of copies in available condition or the highest grade known. Since most available copies are in the Good to Fine range, neither dealers nor collectors should let the Very Fine/Near Mint column influence the prices they are willing to charge or pay for books in less than near perfect condition.

The prices listed reflect a six times spread from Good to Very Fine/ Near Mint (1 - 3 - 6). We feel this spread accurately reflects the current market, especially when you consider the scarcity of books in Very Fine/Near Mint condition. When one or both end sheets are missing, the book's value would drop about a half grade.

Books with movie scenes are of double importance due to the high crossover demand by movie collectors.

Publisher Codes: BRP-Blue Ribbon Press; ERB-Edgar Rice Burroughs; EVW-Engel van Wiseman; FAW-Fawcett Publishing Co.; Gold-Goldsmith Publishing Co.; Lynn-Lynn Publishing Co.; McKay-David McKay Co.; Whit-Whitman Publishing Co.; World-World Syndicate Publishing Co.

Terminology: All Pictures Comics-no text, all drawings; Fast-Action-A special series of Dell books highly collected; Flip Pictures-upper right corner of interior pages contain drawings that are put into motion when rifled; Movie Scenes-book illustrated with scenes from the movie. Soft Cover-A thin single sheet of cardboard used in binding most of the giveaway versions.

THE MARKETING OF A MEDIUM

by Dr. Arnold T. Blumberg, DCD with new material and additional research by Sol M. Davidson, PhD, and Robert L. Beerbohm

Everyone wants something for free. It's in our nature to look for the quick fix, the good deal, the complimentary gift. We long to hit the lottery and quit our job, to win the trip around the world, or find that pot of gold at the end of the proverbial rainbow. Collectors in particular are certainly built to appreciate the notion of the "free gift," since it not only means a new item to collect and enjoy, but no risk or obligation in order to acquire it.

Ah, but there's the rub. Because things are not always what they seem, and "free gifts" usually come with a price. As the saying goes, "there's no such thing as a free lunch," so if it seems too good to be true, it probably is. This is the case even in the world of comics, where premiums and giveaways have a familiar agenda hidden behind the bright colors and fanciful stories. But where did it all begin?

EXTRA EXTRA

As we learn more about the early history of the comic book industry through continual investigation and the publishing of articles like those regularly featured in this book, we gain a much greater understanding of the financial and creative forces at work in shaping the medium, but perhaps one of the most intriguing and least recognized factors that influenced the dawn of comics is the concept of the premium or giveaway. (Note: Some of the historical information referenced in this article is derived from material also presented in Robert L. Beerbohm's introductory article to the Platinum Age section.)

The birth of the comic book as we know it today is intimately connected with the development of the comic strip in American newspapers and their use as an advertising and marketing tool for staple products such as bread, milk, and cereal. From the very beginning, comic characters have played several roles in pop culture, entertaining the youth of the country while also (sometimes none too subtly) acting as hucksters for whatever corporation foots the bill. From important staples to frivolous material produced simply to make a buck, these products have utilized the comics medium to sell, sell, sell. And what better way to hook a prospective customer than to give them "something for nothing?"

Starting in the 1850s, comics were being used in free almanacs such as Elton's, Hostetter's and Wright's to lure readers for the little booklets to sell patent medicine, farm products, tobacco, shoe polish, etc. Most of these are exceedingly rare today, hence it is difficult to compile an accurate history. More mention of these early precursors can be found in the Victorian Comics Era essay following this one. But although comic characters themselves were already being aggressively merchandised all around the world by the mid-1890s--as with, for example, Palmer Cox's The Brownies--the real starting point for the success of comics as a giveaway marketing mechanism can be traced to the introduction of The Yellow Kid, Richard Outcault's now legendary newspaper strip.

Newspaper publishers had already recognized that comic strips could boost circulation as well as please sponsors and advertisers by drawing more eyes to the page, so Sunday "supplements" were introduced to entice fans. Outcault's creation cemented the theory with proof of comic characters' marketing and merchandising power.

Soon after, Outcault (who had most likely been inspired by Cox's merchandising success with The Brownies in the first place) caught lightning in a bottle once more with

Buster Brown, who has the distinction of being America's first nationally licensed comic strip character. Soon, comic strips proliferated throughout the nation's newspapers as tycoons like Hearst and Pulitzer recognized the drawing power of the new medium and fought circulation wars to capture the pennies of the nouveau readership. They paid exorbitant salaries to comic strip artists such as Rudolph Dirks (Katzenjammer Kids), and used the funnies as newspaper supplements and as premiums to attract readers. Corporations soon had the chance to license recognizable personas as their own personal pitchmen (or women or animals...). Comic character merchandise wasn't far behind, resulting in a boom of future collectibles now catalogued in volumes like Hake's Price Guide to Character Toys.

TWO BIRTHS FOR THE PRICE OF ONE

Comic books themselves were at the heart of this movement, and giveaway and premium collections of comic strips not only appealed to children and adults alike, but provided the impetus for the birth of the modern comic book format itself. It could be said that without the concept of the giveaway comic or the marketing push behind it, there would be no comic book industry as we have it today. Well-known now is the story of how in spring 1933 Harry Wildenberg of Eastern Color Printing Company convinced Proctor & Gamble to sponsor the first modern comic book, Funnies on Parade, as a premium. Its success led to the first continuing comic book, Famous Funnies, and the rest, as they say, is history.

In 1935, while working on the printing presses of Eastern Color developing how modern comic books get printed, Julius J. Proskauer came up with an idea for printing "Comic-Books-

For-Industry." In July 1936 he made his first sale through his newly formed William C. Popper & Co. to David M. Davies, then advertising manager for Seagram's Distillers Corp. for three million copies of Seagram's Merrymakers in time for the 1936-37 Christmas season. "Thus was a new industry born," wrote Printing News in August 1945.

Even a casual perusal of the listings in this section of the Guide will dazzle the reader with the endless variety of purposes that this medium has served. Yes, promos have been used to hawk products from athletic equipment to zithers and zip codes, but comics are too versatile an art form to be confined to a few uses. They've swayed elections in cities (The O'Dwyer Story, 1949), in states (Giant for a Day: Jacob Javits, 1946) and nationwide (The Story of Harry Truman, 1948); solicited for charities (Donald Duck and the Red Feather, 1948); addressed health issues (Blondie, 1949, mental hygiene); discouraged kids from smoking (Captain America Meets the Asthma Monster, 1987); coached youngsters in sports skills (Circling the Bases, 1947, A.G. Spaulding); explained scientific complexities (Adventures in Science, 1946-61, GE); pleaded for social justice (Consumer Comics, 1975); espoused religious causes (Oral Roberts' True Stories, 1950s); protected the environment (Our Spaceship Earth, 1947); encouraged tourism (Wyoming, The Cowboy State, 1954); conveyed a sense of history (Louisiana Purchase, 1953); taught about computers (Superman Radio Shack Giveaway, 1980); trained employees (Dial Finance Dialogues, 1961-70) and executives (Beneficial Finance System, Managing New Employees, 1950s); cautioned safety (Willy Wing Flap, 1944(?)); announced corporate annual results (Motorola Annual Report, 1952); defended free enterprise (Steve Merritt, 1949); hammered communism (How Stalin Hopes to Destroy America, 1951); fought discrimination (Mammy Yokum & the Great Dogpatch Mystery, 1956, B'nai Brith); aided young workers in job-hunting (The Job Scene, 1969); battled the scourge of sickle cell anemia (Where's Herbie, 1972, U.S. H.E.W.); inspired the overcoming of adversity (Al Capp by Li'l Abner, 1946); fostered reading (Linus Gets a Library Card, 1960); recruited for the armed forces (Li'l Abner Joins the Navy, 1950); beguiled readers into learning languages (Blondie, 1949, Philadelphia public schools); and even instructed in such delicate matters as birth control (Escape from Fear, 1950 (revised 1959, etc.), for Planned Parenthood).

READ ALL ABOUT IT

The impact of this new approach to advertising was not lost on the business world. Contrary to modern belief, comic books were hardly discounted by the adults of the time...at least not those who had the marketing savvy to recognize an opportunity - or a threat - when they saw one. In the April 1933 issue of Fortune magazine, an article titled "The Funny Papers" trumpeted the arrival of comics as a force to be reckoned with in the world of advertising and business, and what's more, a force to fear as well. At first providing a brief survey of the newspaper comic strip business (which for many of the magazine's readers must have seemed a foreign topic for serious discussion), the article goes on to examine the incredible financial draw of comics and their characters:

"Between 70 and 75 per cent {sic} of the readers of any newspaper follow its comic sections regularly...Even the advertiser has succumbed to the comic, and in 1932 spent well over $1,000,000 for comic-paper space."

"Comic Weekly is the comic section of seventeen Hearst Sunday papers...Advertisers who market their wares through balloon-speaking manikins {sic} may enjoy the proximity of Jiggs, Maggie, Barney Google, and other funny Hearst headliners."

Although the article continues to cast the notion of relying on comic strip material to sell product in a negative light, actually suggesting that advertisers who utilize comics are violating unspoken rules of "advertising decorum" and bringing themselves "down to the level" of comics (and since when have advertisers been stalwart preservers of good taste and high moral standards), there is no doubt that they are viewing comics in a new light. The comic characters have arrived by 1933...and they're ready to help sell your merchandise too.

Fortune wasn't the only one to take notice as World War II came and went. In 1948, Louis P. Birk, the head of Brevity, Inc., an important promotional comics publisher said, "Comics are serious business." In an article in Printers' Ink magazine, he estimated that more than 80 different "comic booklets" had been produced and more than 45,000,000 million copies distributed in the five years before 1948. But of course, comics were serious business long before businessman/historian Birk noted the fact for posterity.

THE MARCH OF WAR AND BEYOND

Through the relentless currents of time, comic strips, books, and the characters that starred in them became more and more an intrinsic part of American culture. During the turmoil of the Great Depression and World War II, comic characters in print and celluloid form entertained while informing and selling at the same time, and premium and giveaway comics came well and truly into their own, pushing everything from loaves of bread to war bonds.

In the 1950s and '60s, there was a shift in focus as the power of giveaway and premium comics was applied to more altruistic endeavors than simply selling something. Comic book format pamphlets, fully illustrated and often inventively written, taught children about banking, money, the dangers of poison and other household products, and even chronicled moments in American history. The comic book as giveaway was now not only a marketing gimmick--it was a tool for educating as well.

The promotional title "March of Comics" was a prolific comic that ran for 36 years and 488 issues featuring a variety of subjects and characters. (#20 shown)

The 1970s and '80s saw another boom in premium and giveaway comics. Every product imaginable seemed to have a licensing deal with a comic book character, usually one of the prominent flag bearers of the Big Two, Marvel or DC. Spider-Man fought bravely against the Beetle for the benefit of All Detergent; Captain America allied himself with the Campbell Kids; and Superman helped a class of computer students beat a disaster-conjuring foe at his own game with the help of Radio Shack Tandy computers.

Newspapers rediscovered the power of comics, not just with enlarged strip supplements but with actual comic books. Spider-Man, the Hulk, and others turned up as giveaway comic extras in various American newspapers (including Chicago and Dallas publications), while a whole series of public information comics like those produced decades earlier used superheroes to caution children about the dangers of smoking, drugs, and child abuse.

Comics also turned up in a plethora of other toy products as the 1980s introduced kids to the joy of electronic games and action figures. Supplementary comics provided "free" with action figure and video game packages told the backstory about the product, adding depth to the play experience while providing an extra incentive to buy. Comics became an intrinsic part of the Atari line of video cartridges, for example, eventually spawning its own full-blown newsstand series as well.

As the twentieth century gave way to the twenty-first, giveaway comics were still being produced for inclusion in action figure and video game packages, as well as in conjunction with countless consumer items and corporations. It seems that the medium still has a lot to offer for all those companies desperate to make the most of their market share.

A COMIC BY ANY OTHER NAME

One of the earliest names for promotional comics was "special purpose comics." In their pursuit of superheroes, collectors have allowed promotional comics to lie fallow - underappreciated and uncollected. Without a legitimate name, these products were given sundry other appellations - industrial comics, promos, giveaways, premiums, promics - each accurate but only for a small segment of the unorganized but lusty and lively medium. Perhaps no one name can cover all the variations and purposes of this branch of comic art, but for practical reasons if we accept the general premise that these comics were created to promote an idea, a product or a person, then "Promotional Comics" is probably as convenient a catch-all title as we can come up with.

We used the phrase "for practical reasons" because the word "practical" goes to the heart of promotional comics more than it does for any other comics product. What greater testimony is there to the medium's impact on American culture than to note their use by hard-headed, profit-minded business people and corporations? They invest their money and they expect results.

Today, premium comics continue to thrive and are still utilized as a valuable marketing and promotional tool. "Free" comics are still packaged with action figures and video games, and offered as mail-away premiums from a variety of product manufacturers. The comic industry itself has expanded its use of giveaway comics to self-promote as well, with "ash-can" and other giveaway editions turning up at conventions and comic shops to advertise upcoming series and special events. Many of these function as old-fashioned premiums, with a coupon or other response required from the reader to receive the comic.

As for the supplements and giveaways printed all those years ago, they have spawned a collectible fervor all their own, thanks to their atypical distribution and frequent rarity. For that and the desire to delve deeper into comics history, we hope that by focusing more directly on this genre, we can enhance our understanding of this vital component in the development and history of the modern comic book.

Whether you're a collector or not, we're all motivated by that desire to get something for nothing. For as long as consumers are enticed by the notion of the "free gift," promotional comics will remain a vital marketing component in many business models, but they will also continue to fight the stigma that has long been associated with the industry as a whole. "Respectable" sources like Fortune may have taken notice of the power of comic-related advertising 71 years ago, but after all this time comics still fight an uphill battle to establish some measure of dignity for the medium. Perhaps the higher visibility of promotional comics will eventually prove to be a deciding factor in that intellectual war.

See ya in the funny papers.

Today, promotional comics continue to be used as a marketing tool to reach both children and adults alike. This 2005 comic was produced by Marvel Comics as a salute to the men and women of the armed forces.

| NOTE: The original edition of this book was printed and killed by the Guild's board of directors. It is believed that a very limited number of copies were distributed. The 1958 version was a complete bomb with very limited, if any, circulation. In 1979, 11 original, 4 1958 reprints, and 4 B&W's surfaced from the Guild's old files in St. Paul, Minnesota. |     |     |     |     |       |      | Montgomery Ward (Giveaway): 1971 (20 pgs., B&W inside, slick-c)                                                                                                                                                    |     |     |     |     |       |      |

| NOTE: The original color version first sold for 10 cents. Since sales were good, it was later printed as a giveaway. Approximately four million in total were printed. The two black and white copies listed plus two other versions as well as a full color untrimmed version surfaced in 1979 from the Guild's old files in St. Paul, Minnesota.                  |     |     |     |     |       |      | JO-JOY (The Adventures of...)                                                                                                                                                                               |     |     |     |     |       |      |

K. K. Publications/Western Publishing Co.: 1946 - No. 488, April, 1982 (#1-4 are not numbered) (K.K. Giveaway) (Founded by Sig Feuchtwanger)

Early issues were full size, 32 pages, and were printed with and without an extra cover of slick stock, just for the advertiser. The binding was stapled if the slick cover was added; otherwise, the pages were glued together at the spine. Most 1948 - 1951 issues were full size, 24 pages, pulp covers. Starting in 1952 they were half-size (with a few exceptions) and 32 pages with slick covers. 1959 and later issues had only 16 pages plus covers. 1952 - 1959 issues read oblong; 1960 and later issues read upright. All have new stories except where noted.

First Funnies, Inc.: 1939 (Giveaway)(B&W, 36 pgs.) No month given; last panel in Sub-Mariner story dated 4/39 (Also see Colossus, Green Giant & Invaders No. 20)
1-Origin & 1st printed app. Sub-Mariner by Bill Everett (8 pgs.); Fred Schwab-c; reprinted in Marvel Mystery #1 with color added over the craft tint which was used to shade the black & white version; Spy Ring, American Ace (reprinted in Marvel Mystery #3) app.
(Rare)-only eight known copies, one near mint with white pages, the rest with brown pages.

Covers only to #2-4 (set) 800
NOTE: Eight copies (plus one coverless) were discovered in 1974 in the estate of the deceased publisher. Covers only to issues No. 2-4 were also found which evidently were printed in advance along with #1. #1 was to be distributed only through motion picture movie houses. However, it is believed that only advanced copies were sent out and the motion picture houses not going for the idea. Possible distribution at local theaters in Boston suspected.

The "pay" copy (graded at 9.0) was discovered after 1974, bringing the total known to nine. The last panel of Sub-Mariner contains a rectangular box with "Continued Next Week" printed in it. When reprinted in Marvel Mystery, the box was left in with lettering omitted.

NOTE: All issues have Superman illustrations throughout. The page count varies depending on whether a Superman-Tim comic story is inserted. If it is, the page count is either 36 or 24 pages. Otherwise all issues are 16 pages. Each issue has a special place for inserting a full color Superman stamp. The stamp album issues had spaces for the stamps given away the past year. The books were mailed as a subscription premium. The stamps were given away free (or when you made a purchase) only when you physically came into the store.

| 1949 mailer-A rare Barks item: Same WDC&S cover as 1942 mailer, but with art changed sothat nephew is handing teacher Donald a comic book rather than an apple, as originallydrawn by Kelly. The tiny, 7/8"x1-1/4" cover shown was a rejected cover by Barks that wasintended for C&S 110, but was redrawn by Kelly for C&S 111. The original art has been lostand this is its only app. (Rare) | 39  | 78  | 117 | 234 | 382   | 530  | Mailing Envelope (no art on front)(Designates sets A,B,C or D on front)                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                      | 7   | 14  | 21  | 37  | 46    | 55   |

The American Comic Book: 1500s-1828

For the last few years, we have featured a tremendous article by noted historian and collector Eric C. Caren on the foundations of what we now call “The Pioneer Age” of comics. We look forward to a new article on this significant topic in a future edition of The Overstreet Comic Book Price Guide.

In the meantime, should you need it, Caren's article may be found in the 35th through 39th editions.

That said, even with the space constraints in this edition of the Guide, we could not possibly exclude reference to these incredible, formative works.

Why are these illustrations and sequences of illustrations important to the comic books of today?

German broadsheet, dated 1569.

Quite frankly, because we can see in them the very building blocks of the comic art form.

The Murder of King Henry III (1589).

The shooting of the Italian Concini (1617).

Over the course of just a few hundred years, we the evolution of narration, word balloons, panel-to-panel progression of story, and so much more. If these stories aren't developed first, how would be every have reached the point that that The Adventures of Mr. Obadiah Oldbuck could have come along in 1842?

As the investigation of comic book history has blown away the notion that comic books were a 20 century invention, it hasn't been easy to convince some, even with the clear, linear progression of the artful melding of illustration and words.

"Want to avoid an argument in social discourse? Steer clear of politics and religion. In the latter category, the most controversial subject is human evolution. Collectors can become just as squeamish when you start messing with the evolution of a particular collectible," Eric Caren wrote in his article. "In most cases, the origin of a particular comic character will be universally agreed upon, but try tackling the origin of printed comics and you are asking for trouble."

"The Bubbblers Medley" (1720).

"Join, or Die" from the Pennsylvania Gazette, May 9, 1754.

"Amusement for John Bull..." from The European Magazine (1783).

Cartoons satirizing Napoleon on the front page of the Connecticut Mirror, dated January 7, 1811.

But the evidence is there for any who choose to look. Before the original comics of the Golden Age, there were comic strip reprints collected in comic book form. The practice dated back decades earlier, of course, but coalesced into the current form when the realities of the Great Depression spawned the modern incarnation of the comic book and its immediate cousin, the Big Little Book.

Everything that came later, though, did so because the acceptance of the visual language had already been worked out. Before Spider-Man and the Hulk, before Superman and Batman, before the Yellow Kid, Little Nemo, and the Brownies, cartoonists and editorial illustrators were working out how to tell a story or simply convey their ideas in this new artform.

Without this sort of work, without these pioneers, we simply wouldn't be where we are today.

Middle: "A Warm Place - Hell", one of two images definitely known to be drawn and engraved by Paul Revere, 1768. Word balloons had wide-spread usage in many cartoons in the 1700s. Right: The Tables Turned by James Gillray, 1797 commenting on an "invasion" of England by 1400 French convicts. The use of word balloons was wide spread in many parts of the world long before the Yellow Kid's parrot uttered a few words in 1896.

The Comic Almanac(k) debuted in America in 1831 with the earliest-known titles starting heavy with humor and sporting crude woodcut single panel cartoons. Ellm's American Comic Almanac was one of the first. By 1835 Davy Crockett, one of the nation's earliest national folk heroes, began issuing his own version. In the late 1840s the Comic Almanac(k)s began to offer tall-tale sequential comic strips which became somewhat commonplace in the 1850s, fueled by the advent of the California Gold Rush. They were instrumental in the development of the American comic strip and we will be reporting more new finds after further research into American folklore.

We have a lot of new discoveries to share with you again this year as amply evident in the price index which follows this year's history lesson. A quantum leap has finally been achieved in the area of introducing the comic book collecting world to American Comic Almanac(k)s as well as a huge multitude of American humor periodicals, many of which contained sequential comic strips.

This Victorian Era section is devoted to comic strips and books published during the years the United States expanded across the North American continent, fought a Civil War, shifted from an agrarian to an industrial society, "welcomed" waves of immigrants, and struggled over race, class, religion, temperance, and suffrage - and all of it depicted and satirized by generations of mostly now long-forgotten cartoonists. The social attitudes, beliefs, and conventions of 19th century America, the good as well as the bad, are to be found in abundance. Perhaps the first question to pop into most readers' minds will be, "What, beyond the happenstance of publication date, are Victorian Era comics?"

There has been a long slow-motion evolution of the comic strip which was not invented in America, contrary to many previous history books on the subject. One must examine many aspects of concurrent popular culture. The main aspect that we believe most distinguishes Victorian Era comic strips from those of later eras was the extremely rare use of word balloons within sequential (multi-picture) comic stories. When word balloons were used, it was nearly always within single-panel cartoons. On the occasions when they appeared inside a strip, with very few exceptions, the ballooned dialogue was inconsequential. Nineteenth-century comics tended to place both narration and dialogue beneath comic panels rather than within the panel's borders as they were thought by many to interfere with the art. Many of these comics are to the word balloon-strewn post-Yellow Kid comics of the 20th Century as silent movies are to the later "talkies." Just as sound changed how stories were structured on film, so too did comic strips change when the words were moved from beneath panels to inside them, and dialogue rather than narration drove the story in conjunction with the pictures.

The Victorian Era of actual comic strip books began on different dates in different nations, depending on when the first publication of a sequential comic book on their soil is known to have occurred. For the U.S. this happened when the American literary periodical Brother Jonathan printed the 40-page, 195-panel graphic novel The Adventures of Mr. Obadiah Oldbuck as a special extra dated September 14, 1842. Almost six decades later, America's Victorian comics came to their end, replaced by the onslaught of Platinum Age books reprinting newspaper strips from Bennett, Hearst, and Pulitzer Sunday comic sections, among many others.

There is considerable overlap between Victorian Era and Platinum Age comic books and strips. Those publications that continued from one century into the next, such as Puck, Judge, and Life, have their pre-1900 issues listed within the Victorian Age section, while their post-1899 issues can be found inside the Platinum Age. Some non-sequential (i.e., single-panel) American comic items existing prior to 1842 are also listed herein, going back to 1795. These belong to what could tentatively be called the Age of Caricature (1770s through 1830s). This was a fertile period for the art in England, when Gillray and Rowlandson, and, later, Cruikshank, Heath, and Seymour were that nation's top cartoonists. During the same period in the U.S., there were no artists who made their living as caricaturists, though William Charles, printer and engraver, did produce about two dozen spirited cartoon broadsides from 1805 to 1820, the most important ones concerning events of the War of 1812.

In addition, one can trace origins of American comic books to the humorous Comic Almanacs which began in earnest in the early 1830s.

The earliest known cartoon-like woodcut printed on paper in North America was in a Puritan children's book first published in 1646. Titled simply The Burning of Mr. John Rogers, it showed in flaming graphic detail what happens to those who stray from the flock and have to be burned at the stake. Dr. Wertham would have had a field day with that one!

Cartoon broadsides and other single panel images, often using word balloons, appeared from pre-Revolution days through the end of the 19th Century. The earliest known attributed cartoon, designed by the ubiquitous Benjamin Franklin, was "Heaven Helps Only Those Who Help Themselves," which first appeared in his pamphlet Plain Truth in 1747.

The most popularly remembered 18th-Century American cartoons are likely Franklin's "Join or Die" in 1754, representing the American Colonies as severed snake parts, and "The Bloody Massacre Perpetrated in King Street" -- Paul Revere's 1770 depiction of the Boston Massacre, which he pirated from the earlier Henry Pelham broadsheet cartoon "The Fruits of Arbitrary Power."

In September 1826, John Warner Barber, New Haven, Ct. (1798-1885) designed and self-published the broadside The Drunkard's Progress, Or The Direct Road to Poverty, Wretchedness and Ruin showing in four stages sequentially "The Morning Dram" which is "The Beginning of Sorrow," "The Grog Shop" with its "Bad Company," "The Confirmed Drunkard" in a state of "Beastly Intoxication," and the "Concluding Scene" with the family being driven off to the alms house. It is an interesting set of cuts, faintly reminiscent of Hogarth. Barber began his career in 1819, age 21, engraving on wood. He devoted most of his career to the multitude of art chores associated with book production. As late as 1870 he was issuing Barber's Temperance Tracts, which built upon his 1826 original plus four panels showing the positive effects of living without alcohol.

The first American whose fame was based primarily on his cartoons appears to be David Claypoole Johnston (1798-1865). Johnston provided illustrations for various almanacs, books, and periodicals, including the masthead for Brother Jonathans. Most notable of Johnston's comics work was his nine-issue series Scraps, which he self-published from 1828 to 1849. This series was highly influenced by George Cruikshank's series Scraps and Sketches, which first appeared in 1827. Because of the resemblance, Johnston became known in his day as "the American Cruikshank." Each issue of Johnston's Scraps consists of four large folio-sized pages, printed on one side, with nine to twelve single-panel cartoons per page, and each page often organized around a theme. Also popular was his comic album *Outlines Illustrative of the Journal of F***** A**** K****** (1835), which parodied passages from the journal of recently published observations on America by British actress Fanny Kemble.

Johnston, himself a failed actor, had an interest in the theater his entire career. In addition to producing a number of prints depicting American actors in famous roles, he collaborated with actor Henry J. Finn to produce the 1831 (American) Comic Annual, with Finn as Editor and Johnston as artist, published by Richardson, Lord and Holbrook, Boston. It featured almost 30 full-page Johnston-designed copper engravings and woodcuts. Also that year, Finn solo produced Finn's Comic Sketch Book, a twelve-page album similar to Johnston's Scraps with upwards of half a dozen single-panel cartoons per page. It was published by Peabody and Co, of New York in business from 1831-1843. (Finn died tragically in a steamboat accident Jan. 13, 1840.)

Perhaps Johnston's most interesting contribution to the history of the comic strip in America came in 1837, when he produced the sequential comic broadside, Illustrations of the Adventures & Achievements of the Renowned Don Quixote & his Doughty Squire Sancho Panza (27.4 x 30.4 cm). This blank-reverse engraved print was an elaborate twelve-panel satire of the Andrew Jackson-Van Buren administration. It likely sold for 25 cents, seeing distribution in Boston, New York and Philadelphia. Much later, in 1863, Johnston drew another sequential comic broadside, The House the Jeff Built (27.5 x 36.7 cm), a bitter indictment of Jefferson Davis and the Southern slavocracy.

In July 1839, Wilson and Company, a newly formed New York printing firm, began publishing a mammoth newspaper by the name of Brother Jonathan. The publisher, J. Gregg Wilson had employed the newspaper format for Brother Jonathan to circumvent the higher postage rates imposed on magazines, but Brother Jonathan was a newspaper in format only -- it contained not a shred of news, instead specializing in serialized fiction, some of it written by Americans but most of it pirated from foreign sources. Despite the cost savings, the mammoth format had its limitations; when opened it measured a whopping three feet by four feet. So, once Brother Jonathan was an established success, Wilson and Day began in January 1841 the simultaneous publication of a magazine-sized quarto edition of Brother Jonathan that reprinted the contents of the mammoth edition.

Later that same year, to capitalize on the name recognition of their successful twin publications, Wilson and Company started issuing book-length Brother Jonathan Extras in the same format as the quarto magazine. These reprints are counted among the earliest paperback books in America. Most of the Extra numbers were pirated European novels. For example their eighth extra was the first American printing of a Charles Dickens novel. But for their ninth Extra, they did something no American publisher had ever done before -- they pirated a graphic novel, Rodolphe Töpffer's The Adventures of Mr. Obadiah Oldbuck. By reformatting Oldbuck from its original small oblong strip design to fit Brother Jonathan's standard quarto format Wilson and Company inadvertently made this edition (alone) of Obadiah Oldbuck resemble a modern comic book. Oldbuck's arrival on the shores of the New World would directly inspire a wave of American imitators. This first Wilson printing of Oldbuck from 1842 was reprinted in same-size limited edition facsimile by the Naples Comicon in 2003. An English translation by Leonardo De Sá of Töpffer's original draft is at [leonardodesa.interdinamica.net/comics/lds/]

Even though in 1904 (in its September 3 edition), The New York Times accurately identified the Brother Jonathan Extra as the first American comic book as well as Wilson & Co. utilizing Tilt & Bougue's original printing plates as well as still being in print for sale in New York at such a late date, Töpffer has already been largely forgotten in the New World. It is high time Töpffer received credit long overdue as the inventor of the modern comic strip, laying previously long-held myths to rest.

Töpffer (1799-1846) was a playwright, novelist, artist, and teacher from Geneva, Switzerland, who in 1827 had begun producing what he called "picture novels," sharing them with his friends and students. His earliest editions were self-published via lithography on transfer paper as they use the word "autographie" in their imprints. The earliest printers were J. Freydis, Frutiger (1830s) and Schmidt (1840s). These first sequential comic books, scripted in Töpffer's native French language, found their way to Paris and became an instant hit. According to Gombrich in Art and Illusion (1960), "Töpffer recognized that he could rely on the reader to supplement from their own lives what was omitted between the panels. This is crucial in the development of the sequential comic strip."

The demand for his comic books soon outstripped the supply, and pirated editions, redrawn by others, were created by Parisian publisher Aubert to capitalize on this. In a world where international copyright conventions did not exist, this was perfectly legal, if morally questionable. Thus, in 1841, London publisher Tilt and Bogue commissioned George Cruikshank to create an English version of Töpffer's Les Amours de M. Vieux Bois by pirating Aubert's pirated edition of the Geneva original.

This English translation, co-financed by George Cruikshank himself, sported a new cover page by George's brother Robert, based on a montage of Töpffer's scenes. Confirmation of this fact came when George Cruikshank's personal copy surfaced in auction recently with the inscription "Copied from a French book by my Brother Robert" above the title page with the same scene. This is the translation that was reprinted by America's Wilson and Company as The Adventures of Mr. Obadiah Oldbuck utilizing the original Tilt and Bogue printing plates.

Tilt and Bogue followed up their success by translating into English two additional stories of Töpffer's seven published graphic novels: Beau Ogleby, circa 1843 (originally Histoire de M. Jabot), and Bachelor Butterfly two years later (from Histoire de M. Cryptogame). David Bogue also published picture-story strip books by John Leighton using the pseudonym Luke Limner. He wrote and drew beautiful comic books titled London Out of Town or The Adventures of the Browns At The Seaside; Comic Art-Manufactures; and The Ancient Story of the Old Dame and Her Pig starting in 1847, but none of these seem to have ever been republished in America. They follow a definite Töpffer influence. This growing body of comic book production was made easier by the spreading understanding of transfer paper lithography, otherwise the panels would have had to have been drawn and lettered mirror reverse. referred to Töpffer's comic books as "the innocent ancestors of today's manufactured dreams... everywhere in these countless episodes of almost surrealist inconsequence we find a mastery of physiognomic characterization which sets the standard for such influential humorous draftsmen in the 19th century as Wilhelm Busch in Germany."

A Register of The New York City Book Trades 1821-1842 by Sidney F. & Elizabeth Stege<sup>12</sup>, Huttner (The Bibliographical Society of America, NYC, 1993) mentions Benjamin H. Day bought into Brother Jonathan's publisher, Wilson and Company, in this year, becoming at some point an equal partner with owner J. Gregg Wilson. The Register lists them both as publishers of Brother Jonathan at the same address of 162 Nassau Street. Other historical artifacts state Day eventually became sole-owner and publisher. Exactly when has not yet been determined, though we have figured out with cer-

This is the same Benjamin H. Day who started the first successful penny newspaper in 1833, The (New York) Sun, transforming it in four short years into the largest circulation daily in the world at that time. He sold out his ownership of the Sun to his brother-in-law during the financial "panic" of 1837, a mistake he regretted the rest of his life. He re-emerged heavily involved in Brother Jonathan definitely by 1840 and as a partner by 1841. Brother Jonathan's offices were right next door to Tamany Hall. (See the first 20 minutes of the 2002 movie Gangs of New York to visualize the period atmosphere and their customer base.) According to The Brothers Harper by Eugene Exmen (Harper & Row, 1965), on page 125, "Brother Jonathan... offered in its weekly edition and also in special supplements very cheap reprints of English novels. In effect, it began a price-cutting war against the older established 'pirates' among the book publishers..." Day, it appears, had found the perfect project on which to build a new empire.

Desirous of repeating the success they had with Obadiah Oldbuck, Wilson and Company published the first American edition of Bachelor Butterfly in 1846. Three years later, they reformatted Obadiah Oldbuck back into its original British shape using lithography, dropping a handful of comic panels and altering the text to hide these deletions. Soon thereafter, they published other comic books for a steadily growing market that they had helped to stimulate. In recognition of their significant role in the dissemination of sequential comics, Wilson and Company deserve to be remembered as the first comic book publisher in America.

Back in Europe, perhaps inspired by his involvement with Töpffer's Obadiah Oldbuck, George Cruikshank soon created several sequential comic books of his own. These too found their way to America. The Bachelor's Own Book, published first in Britain in 1844, became the second known U.S. published sequential comic book when it was reprinted by Burgess, Stringer and Company the following year. Next was Cruikshank's masterpiece The Bottle, the Hogarthian-style tale of a man whose addiction to alcohol brings himself and his family to ruin. After debuting in London in 1847, it was reprinted the same year in a British-American co-publication between David Bogue and Americans Wiley and Putnam. Both printings were in huge folio form, available in either black and white or professionally hand-tinted versions. In 1848, the story saw American print again, this time in smaller form, placed at the front of the otherwise prose volume Temperance Tales; Or, Six Nights with the Washing-tonians. It continued to be reprinted by a variety of publishers into the early 20th Century. The Bottle was even reproduced onto painted glass slides and then projected by magic lantern onto a screen for the moral edification of temperance audiences. The Drunkard's Children, Cruikshank's sequel to The Bottle, was issued July 1, 1848 as a British-American-Australian co-publishing venture, but was less successful, and had not nearly as many reprints.

The most clearly sequential, as well as fun, of George Cruikshank's comic books was The Tooth-Ache, first issued in London in 1849. It was reprinted in America later that same year by Philadelphia map maker J.L. Smith. An additional concurrent version was also issued from Boston.

When closed, this booklet appears an unassuming 5-1/4 inches tall by 3-1/4 inches wide. Its striking feature is that the book folds open accordion style, stretching the entire 43-panel story along one single strip of paper, which when fully extended is seven feet, three inches long! The Tooth-Ache was issued in both black and white and professionally hand-colored editions. Abridged editions of the story, printed in black and white and with a "normal" page-turning rather than foldout presentation, appeared inside promotional giveaway comics issued by American companies in the 1880s.

ing American publishers, the 1840s should be remembered as the decade when America first fell in love with the comics. It had seen the U.S. publication of six sequential comic books, as well as the importation of other comics with foreign imprints. America's growing interest in graphic humor was further stimulated by the growth of two other fields: the cartoon broadside and the humor magazine.

As mentioned before, the cartoon broadside had been a part of the American scene since pre-Revolution days, but it did not flourish until stone lithography (introduced in 1818 and in wide use by the 1830s) made the reproduction of images relatively fast and cheap. From the early 1830s into the mid 1840s, the leading producer of cartoon broadsides in America was New York printer H. R. Robinson, who either drew his own cartoons or employed others, especially E. W. Clay, to do it. Clay is notable for having produced the first sequential comic broadside in America. Published in 1834 and entitled, "This Is the House that Jack Built" (50 x 32 cm), the nine-panel parody of the classic nursery rhyme was an attack on the Jackson Administration. The dominant theme of American cartoon broadsides was political, as befitted a nation where politics was the leading spectator sport. As the American electorate grew increasingly educated and prosperous, the demand for cartoon broadside also increased. During the 1840s, lithographers in New York, Boston, and Philadelphia, entered the field to satisfy that demand. The best known of these, Nathaniel Currier, later Currier and Ives, joined the fray in 1848. The firm employed many artists, but its chief political cartoonist was Louis Maurer and its chief comic artist was Thomas Worth.

Except for the three previously cited sequential cartoon broadsides, nearly all of the cartoon broadsides published in America from 1832 to 1876, its dominant era, were single panels. From the 1860s onward, broadside series on a single comic theme became common, the most famous being Thomas Worth's Darktown series. These can be loosely categorized as sequential comics since they employed the same characters and formed a story of sorts when hung together on a wall, as was the publisher's expectation. Sequential art or not, the cartoon broadsides nearly always employed the speech balloons that later became one of the defining characteristic of the American comic strip.

During the same decade that sequential comics and cartoon broadsides were growing in popularity, the illustrated American humor magazine made its debut. The British comic weekly Punch, founded in 1841, was an immediate success, both in England and the United States. It was a handsomely printed quarto, initially twelve pages and later sixteen, with a repeating cover design, backed by a page of small advertisements, humorous text interspersed with comic spot art, and a single panel full-page cartoon. A significant subset of Punch's subscriber base was located in the U.S., to which thousands of copies were exported on an ongoing trans-Atlantic basis. Inevitably, enterprising American publishers attempted to repulse this invader with a home-grown comic weekly. The first, Yankee Doodle, came to town (New York, that is) on October 10, 1846, for one year. Judy (November 28, 1846 to February 20, 1847), The John-Donkey (January 1 to October 21, 1848), and The Elephant (January 22 to February 19, 1848) soon followed. None of them was successful, but all of them continued to feed the growing American interest in comic art.

By the late 1840s, comic art was flourishing in America. The conditions were right for the production of the earliest known American-created sequential comic book. Brothers James and Donald Read, who had worked for a time as cartoonists on Yankee Doodle, were the creators of Journey to the Gold Diggins by Jeremiah Saddlebags. This spirited send-up of the California gold rush craze was published in June 1849 by Stringer and Townsend, the late publishers of Judy, and, soon after, by U. P. James of Cincinnati. This Töpffer-influenced comic book chronicles the adventures of its hero Jeremiah Saddlebags in his get-rich-quick quest for gold in California. It is highly sought by collectors of Western Americana. Interestingly, the back cover of the Stringer and Townsend edition carries an advertisement for Rose and Gertrude - a Genevese Story, one of Rodolphe Töpffer's non-comics prose novels.

Stringer and Townsend was making something of a name for itself as a publisher of comic art. It will be remembered that it was one of the 1845 participants in the American publication of The Bachelor's Own Book. And, then, in 1846-47, it published Judy. Its decision to issue Jeremiah Saddlebags was all in due course.

The Gold Rush proved to be a gold mine for American comic artists. Aside from being a featured topic in the 1849 edition of David Claypool Johnston's Scraps, in comic almanacs, and in Currier cartoon prints, it was the subject of several other significant sequential series. The first, The Adventures of Mr. Tom Plump (a fat man who nearly starves to death in his failed attempt at California Gold riches), saw print in 1850. The second, The Adventures of Jeremiah Old-Pot (a twelve-part burlesque narrative of a New York businessman who attempts to get rich selling tin in price-inflated California), ran throughout 1852 in Yankee Notions. Though the narrative was distinctly American in its humor, the artwork was probably German in origin. Yankee Notions' Publisher, T. W. Strong, built his business on recycling old woodcuts with new captions attached. It should be noted that the Old-Pot series, borrowed or otherwise, was the first sequential art to appear in an American humor magazine. Yankee Notions, published from 1852 to 1875, also has the distinction of being the first comic monthly published in America.

"Moses Keyser the Bowery Bully's Trip to the California Gold Mines," was a 13-page comic story that appeared in Elton's Californian Comic All-My-Nack for 1850. It was reprinted at least twice in the circa 1850-51 booklet The Clown, Or The Banquet of Wit and later again in Sam Slick's Comic Almanac in 1857. The Clown is also notable as the earliest known anthology of sequential comics, with the bonus that each multi-panel story is by a different artist. Many of the artists are as yet unidentified, and how much of it is original American material versus that reprinted from Europe is presently unknown. But verified are cartoons by George Cruikshank, Elton (American), the Read brothers, Grandville (French), and Richard Doyle (British). The Doyle contribution reprints the comics story "Brown, Jones and Robinson and How They Went to a Ball," which originally saw print in the August 24, 1850 issue of Punch. This is the first known American appearance of these Doyle characters, and was almost certainly pirated.
